SCENES IN FRANCIS JOSEPH'S DIAMOND JUBILEE.

The Emperor lays the Foundation Stone of an Asylum for Foundlings

Orphan girl Presents a Bouquet to the Emperor

Vienna, May 21.—The most picturesque of all the Austrian imperial diamond jubilee celebrations took place this morning, when a vast army of 82,000 children, drilled and disciplined, marched to the Schönbrunn Palace to pay homage to their revered sovereign.

The ceremony was splendidly organized and most impressive. The emperor appeared on the palace balcony before which the army of his young admirers was drawn up, and was cheered with an enthusiasm which deeply touched him. Finally the emperor descended and walked among the children, and the serene smile with the shining of Haydn's stirring national anthem by 82,000 clear young voices, tears standing in his majesty's eyes as he listened to the familiar words.

For many weeks preparations had been in progress for the great day. Most careful arrangements were made for the conveyance of the countless cohorts of small people to the grounds of the palace; where all were assembled at ten o'clock. Children living within a mile came on foot; the remainder were carried by tramway, train or omnibus.

Three thousand teachers and officials employed at the Vienna schools were in charge of the various detachments of children and marshaled them through the streets. All traffic in the neighborhood of the palace was stopped in order to avoid any kind of risk. A number of doctors were attached to each party of scholars, and an ambulance service was established within the grounds of the palace.

Each child was provided with a card bearing the name and address of its parents, and was given a light breakfast before starting. Provision was made for supplying with refreshment those who were hungry or faint with the exertion of standing for such a long time.

After the grouping of the children in the grounds and on the terraces that stretch in front of the palace windows, Frau Kitzinger, of the Vienna Burgtheater, recited the poem composed for the occasion. A group of little girls, none more than three feet four inches in height, performed a special dance, and were dressed in empire costume.

SAD PLIGHT OF MOTHER OF IRVING BISHOP.

Is Now Starving After Giving Away Thousands—Appeals to Old Professional Friends For Help.

New York, June 13.—Blind, hopelessly crippled and lacking even the common necessities of life, Mrs. Eleanor Fletcher Bishop, mother of Washington Irving Bishop, the mind reader, is living on the charity of a good-natured landlady at 228 West 111th street, New York. The woman who gave thousands of dollars to charity, who nursed the sick and wounded soldiers of the Union army throughout the civil war, is now dependent on the charity of strangers for her food and shelter. Deprived she says, of all her property, which was worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, she has not even enough money left to purchase ointment for her ulcerated limbs.

Her son was one of the wonders of the age, his feats in mind-reading having puzzled even the greatest scientists.

Scarcely able to stand, Mrs. Bishop or the Countess Nicholas as she is now called, yesterday, when called upon to explain an advertisement she had inserted in a Sunday paper, asking Kate Claxton, Minnie Methold and several other actresses and actresses of a day to communicate with her. When Mrs. Bishop was in the heyday of her stage triumphs these actresses were all her personal friends. Now that she is helpless she believes they will come to her aid if they know her condition.

The death of Washington Irving Bishop, at the Lambs Club, on May 12th, 1889, created a sensation of such a nature that it was reported to the public. Bishop was but thirty-three years of age, just at the height of his career. He was giving an exhibition of his powers to a company of friends at the Lambs Club when he fell into a state of coma. Several doctors were called to pronounce him dead. The body was immediately hurried to an undertaking establishment, and there, without waiting for his family's consent, an autopsy was held and the brain removed in the hope that some light be given to the scientific world as to the manner in which Bishop performed his marvelous feats of mind-reading.

Mrs. Bishop had the doctors engaged in the autopsy arrested, claiming her son was not dead at the time the autopsy was held, that he regained consciousness during the autopsy, but that death resulted from the act of the physicians. The jury disagreed, and the case has never since been brought to trial.

At the time of Bishop's death, Mrs. Bishop was in Philadelphia, where she was producing "The Trovatore" and "The Bohemian Girl," as well as "Caste," for the benefit of the funds raised in that city to erect a monument to Edwin Forrest. In her early life Mrs. Bishop supported Forrest, and also played with Booth. She was well known in Shakespearean drama and the theatre-grotesque of New York, remember that her name was once a power in the theatrical world.

She declares her son left $100,000 worth of jewels, which are tied up in the courts, and she has been entirely unable to realize on any of this property. Her own fortune, she declares, has been taken from her by fraud. Last fall her home at Montpelier, Vt., was taken on a mortgage for $160,000. Where her money went she cannot tell. It is certain that she gave away thousands of dollars, for never was she known by refusal. There was no "organized charity" about her plan of giving. She gave first and investigated afterwards.

Among her choice possessions to-day upon which she cannot realize is Michael Angelo's great painting, "Lovingly Defending her Honor." It is valued at $250,000, but its owner, yesterday, was actually without the price of a loaf of bread. Her landlady, Mrs. Carter, is not only giving her her

The millions of tiny glands, or pores, are intended to rid the system of waste matter, which the blood of waste matter, which the blood brings to the skin. It is a well-known medical fact that the healthy skin carries off more Urea or waste matter than the kidneys. Just think how much poison remains in the system when there is any skin trouble.

The skin and stomach are intimately associated. Find a person with a dry, harsh skin and you will find one who suffers with indigestion or constipation, and both, usually.

Both may be relieved by a judicious use of orange juice. Both can be cured by taking the juice of an orange every morning before breakfast, and taking "Fruit-a-tive" at night. "Fruit-a-tive" are fruit juices in tablet form. The fresh juices of oranges, apples, figs and prunes are separated from the pulp, and then combined in such a way that the medicinal action is intensified.
