A TIMELY OBJECT LESSON.

Hon. Mr. Monteith, minister of agriculture in the Whitney government, who is to hold office pending some development, a recount of a new election which will give him a seat, has a grievance.
Talking of things in his riding he said: "It is not alleged that there have been any improper proceedings, but I may have lost through ballots not having been initiated by the deputy returning officer. I know that in one polling subdivision three ballots which had been cast for me were not initiated and were not counted. The points will be raised if the case goes before a judge, as to whether such ballots can be admitted on a recount."
The object lesson may have a powerful effect upon "the unfair bunch," who constitute the conservative opposition in Ottawa. There are making a terrible row because a election bill proposes, among other things, to provide for correct lists and to prevent the loss to any man or any candidate of a vote through the blundering of a deputy returning officer.
Mr. Monteith knows or suspects that he has lost votes through the omission of a friendly official to do his duty. Without the initials of the deputy returning officer there is no proof that the ballots found in the ballot box are those handed to the voters in the polling booth, and from the authorized issue. Mr. Monteith has no right to suffer on any one's account, and no voter should be disfranchised. Their experience will arouse a new interest in the election bill and help to show its reasonableness.

A friendly print suggests that when the legislature meets the opposition in Ontario "make it unanimous," meaning that no resistance be offered to the work or plans of the Whitney government. The government itself might be the first to reject such a result were it possible.

PEOPLE WANT PENSIONS.

A provision for old age pensions may be deferred for a time, but it must come sooner or later. The way for it may not be quite clear, the financial obligation it imposes may be somewhat heavy, but public sentiment, for which parliaments and governments have a profound regard, will force results.
Mr. Asquith, the English premier, is described as a philosopher as well as politician, and he looked at the old age pension scheme askance for a time, regarding it as a visionary thing for which the socialists were mainly responsible. But he has made a surrender. His plan is somewhat limited in its operations but it will affect at least half a million people at once. It will involve a national burden of not more than $30,000,000.
The French government has spent two years on its old age pension scheme. It is an elaborate affair, however, and is calculated to affect between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 persons and to the extent of $150,000,000 annually.
Australia is not in any better position financially than Canada to engage in old age pensions, but the commonwealth (the pet phrase), ventured to be up-to-date in its care of the aged, the worn-out and the deserving poor, to the extent of $3,000,000 a year.
Canada has a special committee which is collecting information on the subject preparatory to moving for the necessary legislation. What the country can do with its present enormous obligations, is not apparent, but it is a matter that vitally affects the masses, and the people are supreme.
Sir Richard Cartwright suggests an annuity system which is based on the savings and contributions of the thrifty ones, but the annuity is one thing and the pension is another. As between the two there is no doubt as to what the voters would approve.

The Toronto Farmers' Sun tries to account for Whitney's increased majority by the fact that "the political sins committed in the last session occurred so recently that full knowledge of the same had not fully penetrated the mind of the general public before voting took place." Perhaps.

CONVENTION MEETS TO-MORROW

To-morrow the republican convention will meet in Chicago. Some of the delegates have been on the spot for days, engaged in the delightful task of refusing or yielding the votes that will be necessary to give their candidate the requisite support. The general feeling is that Mr. Taft, who has, as it were, been training for office, will receive the nomination. He is the heir apparent of Mr. Roosevelt, who, having declared most unequivocally that he will not accept the position again, has named Mr. Taft as his successor and has cast his influence in that direction.

TEMPERANCE SENTIMENT.

Ottawa has more temperance sentiment than Toronto. At the big capital the electors refused Champagne the conservative candidate. In Toronto they took a tremendous "hooker" of Gooderham special.

The Japanese have raised a monument to the memory of the Russian soldiers who fell at Port Arthur.

It is said that Mr. Roosevelt's friends are organizing against a stampede in his favour. The purpose is to head off any movement in Mr. Roosevelt's favour by a prompt declaration that it will be futile and must be abandoned. Whether, under the circumstances, the president is suffering because of his attitude is not at all evident. His announcement that he would not be a candidate was made about the time of the last election, and it appeared then that the second term would fulfil his ambitions. But he has, notwithstanding his course towards the trusts and great corporations, grown steadily in power, and even now there are some republicans who think he is the great possibility. Moreover, he likes the office, with all its responsibilities, and it is not easy to conceive of the man who is congenially accepted, going into the retreat, the calm, the odleness which so repugnantly to his tempestuous nature. Having said something which he was understood to mean, however, he is disposed to stand by it, and so he refused to let his name go before the republican convention.

THE SECRET (?) BALLOT.

The Whitney ballot is a mere burlesque on a secret ballot. It is so small that it can be only folded once, and the returning officer, in tearing off the stub, usually exposes the marking to all observers in the booth. Then, the paper is so thin that the marking is shown through, and the returning officer knows how the vote is recorded by feeling the marking. A more palatable fraud in the name of a secret ballot was never devised.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

At Gananoque last Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wheeler celebrated the fifth anniversary of their wedding. They were married on June 8th, 1888. Both were of Lenoir County, but were married in Clayton, N.Y. In New York state, it was an easier and less expensive matter to get married. In Canada at that time it cost $10.00 ($6) to procure a marriage license and the man had to produce two London notes in a ready cash, of $100 each, that there was no legal impediment to the contemplated union. A fine time was spent in the celebration of the golden anniversary. Congratulatory speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Timberlake, F. Britton, James Donevan, W. J. Gibson, M. McFarland, and others. Two sons and two daughters, and several grandchildren were present. One of the daughters is Mrs. W. H. Carson, of Kingston. The venerable couple received many gifts.

CATARAQUI CEMETERY CO.

The annual meeting of the Cataraqui Cemetery company was held on Saturday afternoon, when the board of directors was re-elected as follows: Dr. R. V. Rogers, chairman; B. W. Robertson, H. W. Richardson, Dr. A. P. Chown and W. F. Nickle. George Nichol, superintendent, submitted his report, which showed that during the year ending April 30th, there had been 247 interments, with 31 removals from vaults for interment elsewhere, making a total of 278. This number was thirty more than last year. The cemetery has been kept in good condition, the grounds having a fine appearance.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The strawberry crop promises this year to be bountiful. Which is good news for everybody.
There is rejoicing over the rains that have fallen since yesterday. "There are thousands in it," says an enthusiastic agriculturalist.

HOPE FOR HIS RE-ENTRY.

The defeat of J. B. Fense in Monday's election is to be greatly regretted. His whole career, public and private, is above reproach. Even the Mail and Empire, which of all the papers finds it hardest to say anything good of a grit (until after he is dead), gives him credit for a "clean record and good citizenship." Mr. Fense is a clear thinker, a logical debater, and has proved himself a tower of strength to the liberal cause. It is to be hoped this enforced retirement will be of short duration.

Those Awful "Merry Widows."
"There ought to be a law against those 'Merry Widow' hats," remarked a man sitting in one of the back rows at the Bijou theatre, Saturday night. He had been training his neck, and twisting it into all sorts of shapes, in order to get a glimpse at the pictures. But the "Merry Widow" had him beaten. When the performance was over, he journeyed down to the front row, resolved, that no "Merry Widow" would have the best of him during the next show.

Morning Gown For Young Girl.

The illustration shows a good model for a linen, chambray or pongee gown for a young girl. The original gown from which the sketch is made was of pale pink linen, with a detachable guimpe of embroidered mull. The bodice was laid in stitched plaits, and the little revers on either side of the front plait were braided at the edges with white and pink soutache. Small buttons of pink linen embroidered in white were also used.

Men Or Mollycoddles?

'Tis Mollycoddles seek for help. And are not how they gain it. They always use the stranger's worth. And let the rest maintain it.
They never find the stranger's strength. Who beg for favors fawning: They never know the worth of life. Who faint when it is dawning.
Something for nothing is the call. And O, how loud they've made it. In crowded halls and council's great— Can any man evade it?
There's some that seek it from the state. And rap at doors of party. They'd graft themselves and gain a berth. Their merits never heary.
For in the church beware your ways. When office, you would seek it. Just ask yourself the worth of work. With talents you could greet it.
High place is not to deprecate. Nor lead a man with money. It may be well it leaves him scant— No land of milk and honey.
The money's mark is not the stamp. That makes a man worth making. And money's mark is not the stamp. That makes a man worth making. And money's mark is not the stamp. That makes a man worth making. And money's mark is not the stamp. That makes a man worth making.
