

Here is everything that the most particular shopper can desire-or hope to find.

"Wash Goods"? Of course, dozens and dozens of pretty weaves and patternings some as filmy as cobweb, others dependably durable-all spotlessly, immaculately white.

Plain and Dotted Muslins, India Linons, Persian Lawns, Soft, Fine Mulls, Sheer Organdies, Crisp Piques; Linens, both fine and coarse; and & the prices are pleasant-like-10c, 121c, 15c, 18c, 20c., and so on up to 50c the yard.

Here Are the Dainty Parasols

You must have one, of course, if your costume is to be correctly complete.

In White-they are either plain or embroidered. In Colors—every proper and modish shade and combination is shown.

In Blacks-they are as elaborate or as plain as you'll wish,

Trimmed with chiffon ruffles and embroidery in tones to match-every costume, and the prices are low.

MISS SCOTT IS NOW MAJOR MOZLEY'S WIFE.

Military Weddir 'n St. George's e and Groom Passed Under Crossed Swords As They Came Down the Aisle.

It is many a long day since our old garrison town has had a military wedding, so the marriage, on Tuesday, of Maj. Edward Newman Mozley, R.E., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mozley, Meadingly, Leeds, Eng., and Miss Annie Campbell Scott, niece of Prof. and Mrs. David H. Marshall, 'Elmhurst,' had more than usual interest attaching to it. St. George's cathedral was beautifully decked with flowers, scarlet and white, the colors of the Royal Military College, where the groom is instructor in fortifications and engineering, being above the altar. The seats for the guests were marked off by broad bands of scarlet and white ribbon, and at the end of each seat from door to chancel was a cadet from the college. As the surpliced choir entered the church the radets rose and stood in the aisle, thus forming a guard of honor for the bride, who came up leaning on her uncle's arm and preceded by her bridesmaids, choir and congregation
