A GRADING IN LESSONS.

Sunday school workers all rejoice that the forward movement in Sunday school lessons received a very emphatic endorsement by the International Sunday school convention. For many years there has been a clamour for a graded system of lessons.

The contention is that the uniform lessons are not the best for the school where there was a distinct classification of pupils and the opportunity to direct the education of the pupils according to their mental development.

It has been met in part by the treatment of the lessons by specialists so that they could be better taught in the graded school. Still the agitation went on for graded lessons—prepared and issued by the Lesson Committee, and at last, at the Louisville convention, the desire has been gratified.

The uniform lessons, as now published, will be continued, in all their attractiveness, with pictorial and other helps, but there will also be graded lessons, with a less profusion of helps until the demand, appreciation, or favour of the multitude warrants their production.

The Lesson Committee thus shows that it is a progressive institution, and that it should meet the wants of the times, and the changing or varying moods or methods of readers.

It was as chairman of this Lesson Committee that Dr. Potts acted for so many years with a grace, a skill and an efficiency that the International Sunday School Association has put upon its permanent records.

The Weekly Sun is not carried away with the proposal that the appointment of civil servants lie with a permanent commission. These men may have the best of intentions, and may be wise indeed, but they cannot be infallible. The outside service should, in the opinion of the writer, be the subject of recommendation of district inspectors.

REFORM IS THE WATCHWORD.

The Civil Service Reform bill will pass the Commons without delay, and will then receive the serious attention of the Senate. The upper house has been chafing for want of work. It has hesitated, to some extent, about initiating legislation, since its function, as originally defined, was to revise and amend correct the product of the lower house.

The minister of agriculture, who has the civil service well under his care, made an important announcement during his introduction of the measure. It represented, he said, the best thought and experience of the government, supplemented by the light from the events of this session.

It was not a perfect measure, perhaps; and was not submitted with the desire to save it from amendment. Indeed any proposition not embodied in the bill, and seriously urged, would be kindly received.

The draft bill provided that the commissioners who are to be appointed shall have the standing of deputy ministers, with a similar tenure of office. This implied that they could, for cause of course, be removed by the government.

Mr. Borden suggested that which the Whig advocated some time ago, namely, that the civil service commissioners should have the standing of the auditor general. He can only be removed by parliament, after impeachment, and he regards no individual under the governor-general his master and superior. The proposal was accepted by the minister of agriculture, and was at once embodied in the bill.

The one other thing that awaits attention is the difference between the inside and outside service. The reform applies only to the inside force for the time being. It must sooner or later apply to the outside service, and the day for the change, lifting the civil service upon a higher plane, and rewarding public officials according to their merits, is not, it is hoped, very far away.

One crown attorney was asked by the attorney general for his brief in a certain case (illegal combine in restraint of trade), and it was not heard of afterwards. What is the inference? That Mr. Foy did not want the combine broken up? They have the protection of the man who calls himself the big policeman.

PURSuing DR. PRINGLE.

Two important letters have appeared in the eastern press with reference to the Yukon and the statements made by Rev. Dr. Pringle respecting its "immorality." One of these has been written by W. A. Beddoe, for many years the editor of the Dawson World and News. The second is the work of A. J. Landall, a bookseller, in Dawson, the vice-president of the local board of trade, and one of a delegation to Ottawa, on behalf of the Arctic Brotherhood, to request a visit to the Yukon from the governor-general and premier of the dominion.

Both these men, long residents of the territory, and both familiar with its conditions, repudiate the statements of Dr. Pringle, and call him to task for putting them in circulation to the infinite harm of the Yukon and its business. Both men, while in the east, desire to meet Dr. Pringle and discuss with him the subject of his choice. Both reply that his mission in the Yukon was not a success, that though he professes not to be a politician he ran for the local council, was elected on a reform platform, sat with the men he criticized in the council, without comment, and accepted its patronage. One of the writers, the editor says, Dr. Pringle's own church disowned him, that he was supplanted by another, Rev. Mr. Sinclair, and left the Yukon with the threat that he would stump Canada in the interest of the conservatives in Canada. This threat explains the meaning of the doctor's performance in Winnipeg during the session of the Presbyterian assembly.

It is well that the Yukon is for the present represented in the east by men of the standing of Messrs. Beddoe and Landall, and for its sake it is hoped they will meet Dr. Pringle somewhere—preferably before a committee of the commons—and force him to reveal the political animus by which he appears to be actuated.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. Mr. Monteth is said not to favour the spoils system in his department, which accounts, it is said, for some of the agitation for his retirement.

When are we to have civil service reform in Ontario? It and the purchase of government supplies by public tender are the demands of the hour.

The weddings of the Goulds were not arranged in heaven—or there would not be so many divorces in the family record. Mrs. Frank now wants release.

There will not be another session of parliament in Ottawa like that which is now drawing to a close. There is a general demand for less talk and more work. The closure is the cure.

The Imperial locomotive and machine shop is being established at Lachine. Our locomotive works would have been in Montreal long ago but for the loyalty to Kingston of Hon. Mr. Harty.

The paper consumers of Canada are being robbed through the illegal combines which exist and operate in defiance of the law. Is there no remedy, no relief? What is the attorney-general for?

When the conservatives were in power at Ottawa they had two commissions report upon the civil service, and pigeon-holed the reports. On this subject the Foster faction have been hoaxing the people.

Mr. Borden charges that the liberals stole his civil service plank. The liberals, however, are following up their own work of providing a corrective for the evils which the civil service commission has revealed.

A resident engineer at Point Aux Trembles calls Mr. DeLisle, M.P., to time and wishes the department of public works to have him "mind his own business." Is it not the business of any member to interest himself in the public works which are being carried on in his constituency?

Winston Churchill does not believe in the House of Lords as it is now constituted. He does not believe that its membership should be hereditary. A house of matured statesmen, of men who have served long and faithfully in the commons, he does approve. Winston is becoming very radical in his tendencies.

There is an explanation of the high prices which prevail with regard to paper. The reduced duty, in favour of the consumer, was set off by the combination of manufacturers. The Canadians paid the American makers a certain amount annually to keep out of the market. This graft the Canadian consumers had to make good.
