DOMINION AMMUNITION

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS.

ANY even-numbered section of Dominion lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 80 and 20, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who has a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for homestead entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency. Entry of proxy may, however, be made by an Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Application for cancellation must be made in person. The applicant must be eligible for homestead entry.

DUTIES.—(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of five years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader had permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father (or mother).

(4) The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than nine miles in direct line.

NICE HAIR FOR ALL. Once Destroy the Dandruff Germ, and Hair Grows Luxuriantly. Any one can have nice hair if he or she has not dandruff, which causes brittle, dry hair, falling hair, and baldness. To cure dandruff it is necessary to kill the germ that causes it and that is just what Newbro's Herpicide does. Cornelius Grew, Colfax, Wash., says: "One bottle of Newbro's Herpicide completely cured me of dandruff, which was very thick, and it has stopped my hair from falling out."

WERE THEY VAMPIRES?

GRUESOME STORY OF A WELSH WOMAN'S ILLNESS.

Trouble Had Puzzled Doctors — Two Uncanny Creatures Make Their Appearance — Had Horrible Eyes and Many Legs—Believed to Have Been Swallowed in Some Impure Water—Sucked Woman's Blood.

A gruesome story of a woman's mysterious illness comes from Port Dinorwic, in the slate quarry region of Carnarvonshire, where the wife of a quarryman farmer has vomited two uncanny "live creatures" measuring about three inches long. For the last two years Mrs. Roberts, the wife of a miner, has suffered from pains in the stomach. Dr. Edwards, of Port Dinorwic, has treated her for an ailment, from which she was undoubtedly suffering, but Mrs. Roberts continued to feel unwell, and frequently vomited blood and water, and the other day she ejected a mass of blood and water, containing some living creatures.

In the meantime two horrible and unknown creatures were found, that were almost exact replicas of gigantic prawns, with large protruding eyes, eight or ten long legs and two or four small ones. As far as could be seen there were no antennae. The color of the creatures was black in the main, though the underparts were a delicate pink. They were thinly shelled, much as a shrimp or prawn is. They were three inches in length and when first vomited were quite an inch and a half in circumference. They did not live long after being ejected from the stomach, and were afterwards taken away by Dr. Edwards and preserved.

The report of the incident attracted hundreds of people to Penryn and to Dr. Edwards' surgery, the former to see Mrs. Roberts and the latter to try to see the creatures. To her visitors Mrs. Roberts related her experience. She said that she used to feel the creatures running up her gut from her stomach whenever she put tasty food in her mouth, and then creep down into her stomach again as soon as she had swallowed the food. She avers that when she was trying to expel the second of the two things from her throat she distinctly felt it biting her. Color is lent to this statement by the fact that Mrs. Roberts has been vomiting blood more or less copiously ever since, and is now so weak that Dr. Edwards has forbidden visitors. Dr. Edwards, however, sees no reason why she should not recover now, unless there are more of the creatures inside her. Mrs. Roberts has the fear that there are, as she says she can feel them as before. Dr. Edwards has given her medicine which he hopes will destroy the creatures, if any are still left alive. The Robertses are tenants of Mr. Asheton Smith, and that gentleman the moment he heard of the occurrence proceeded to Dr. Edwards, and obtained the creatures, which at once conveyed to his own medical attendant, Dr. Grey Edwards of Bangor, with a request that he would thoroughly investigate the matter, and obtain expert opinion on the nature of the creatures. The only theory at present put forward is that Mrs. Roberts must have swallowed the ovum or germ of these creatures when drinking water drawn from the usual supply adjoining her house, and that during the past two years these germs have developed. Dr. Edwards thinks their dark color is due to the fact that they lived by sucking the woman's blood.

JOHN MORLEY.

One of the Ablest and Best Beloved of English Statesmen.

No man in the public life of England enjoys a greater popularity than John Morley, the friend and biographer of Gladstone, the Secretary of State for India in the Cabinet of Premier Asquith and now a member of the House of Lords, having been ennobled by the King at the time of the reorganization of the Liberal administration consequent upon the resignation of the late Campbell-Bannerman. Although a statesman of high rank, and a man who has commanded the respect of friends and foes alike by the independence and fearlessness of his character, yet his first interests are literary rather than political. One of his most valuable contributions to English literature is his biography of Gladstone.

Indian Cure For Cancer.

The Chinese and Japanese surgeons cure cancer with a common weed. A small cone made of the dried leaves is placed on the diseased part, which has been previously moistened, and is lighted at the top, when it burns down with a temperate, glowing heat and produces a strong, but not excruciating pain, which is promoted by the application of a small quantity of garlic. The ulcer is kept open or healed as the indications of the case require.

Indian Detective Trick.

A very old Indian detective trick played its part in the arrest of the Bengali youth Khurram Bese, who threw the bomb which killed Mrs. and Miss Kennedy at Muzafferpore. He was seated in the railway station at Waini, some 20 miles from the scene of the crime, and was waiting for a train. When two constables approached him, one of the constables noticed that the youth's saliva had ceased to flow, apparently through fright at the sudden appearance of the policemen; and that, in spite of his nonchalant air, he was unable to continue his meal. The constable toyed with his man for a while, and then, having his suspicions confirmed, seized him before he could fire the revolver with which he was trying to shoot himself. This system of detection, it is stated, is traditional among the Indian police.

Insect Hypnotism.

"Did you ever know," said the hypnotist, as he played with a curious, glittering hypnotizing machine of crystal and silver—"did you ever know that hypnotism is practiced among insects?" "No." "Well, it is a fact. A queen bee can hypnotize her whole hive whenever she wants to. She makes a curious humming sound, and within a moment or two every bee in the colony falls into a hypnotic trance. The death-head hawk-moth is also a hypnotist of great power. This creature, indeed, makes its living out of hypnotism. Entering a hive, it makes a sound not unlike the queen bee's note, and the bees immediately sink into slumber, the moth proceeds to plunder at its leisure."

How to Relieve a Sick Headache.

To cure a sick headache drink quickly a cup of strong catnip tea. It probably will induce vomiting. After the stomach is well cleared out drink another cupful of the tea to quiet and soothe the stomach.

"SEEM' THINGS AT NIGHT."

Explanation Is Found in the Special Conditions of Night Vision.

Every one must at times have asked why familiar objects in a dim light tend to assume fantastic and oftentimes alarming appearances, says a writer in the British Medical Journal.

The explanation is to be found in the special conditions of night vision. The pupils are widely dilated and, as in the photographic lens with a large diaphragm; the apparatus of accommodation can only focus for one plane. As the faculty of estimating distances is in great measure lost in the obscurity we cannot focus with precision, and a blurred, uncertain outline is thrown upon the retina.

Then, too, colors viewed in a fading light lose their distinguishing hue in a fixed sequence until a point is reached at which everything becomes of one uniform gray tint. It follows that the images which are transmitted to the visual centres are profoundly modified in color and outline, and as they enter the eye through the widely dilated pupil at an altogether unusual angle the movement of locomotion gives them a peculiar mobility.

Now, one relies on experience for the interpretation of sensorial impressions, and when these present themselves suddenly in an unusual form the feeling of insecurity which finds expression in mental perturbation and more or less violent motor impulsion. In fact, the subject finds himself in the position of a horse which sees a rapidly advancing automobile for the first time and does not know what to make of it.

Imagination aiding, these blurred, mobile and uncertain images are susceptible of the most phantasmagoric interpretation, and in persons who are not accustomed to control sensorial impressions by the exercise of the intelligence the impressions are accepted as realities and acted upon accordingly.

Gamekeepers and others who are accustomed to night work make all sorts of phantoms of the darkness, and correct the visual deficiency by the aid of other senses, such as hearing, which are not dependent on light.

LABOR IN ENGLAND.

Steady Increase in Membership Among British Unions.

From a report on British trade unions, recently issued by the chief registrar of the Friendly Societies, it is shown that this form of labor organization is steadily increasing in numbers. The total membership of the unions was received for 1906 from 645 unions with membership of 1,719,031, an increase of 151,512 over the report of the previous year. Their income for the same period was approximately $13,500,000, an increase of $760,000. Their expenditures aggregated $11,400,000 or $1,100,000 less than the year previous.

Printing Without Light.

Of the many new processes which have been invented in connection with photography during the last few years none, perhaps, is so remarkable, or will have such far-reaching effects, as the Donisthorpe process of printing without light. The simplicity of the process, together with its economy, makes it a great boon to every photographer, whether a beginner or an expert. Briefly, and without going into too many technical details, the process is as follows:

First, the negative to be printed is immersed in what is known as a "hardening bath" for five minutes. It is then rinsed for two minutes, and placed in a strong dye solution for another five minutes. After being taken out of the dye solution and rinsed, the negative is laid face upward on a piece of glass, while a piece of retinized paper, which has been soaked in water for two minutes, is laid face downward on the negative, the two being squeezed together. After a few minutes the paper can be gently pulled off, dipped for a moment in methylated spirits, and after being blotted, the print will dry in five minutes and is finished. Immersion again for half a minute or so in the dye solution makes the negative ready to have another print taken from it in the same manner. In fact, any number of prints can be made from a negative after one hardening bath.

To Tell the Age of the Earth.

R. J. Strutt, a British scientist of high standing, in the course of a lecture at the Royal Institution, London, said that, thanks to recent investigations of radium, it soon would be possible to estimate the exact age of the earth. Accepting the hypothesis that helium is produced at a definite rate from radium, Mr. Strutt proposed a quantitative estimation of the radium and the helium present in various minerals, as a means of determining their relative ages. Proceeding on similar lines, when once the rate at which radium is transformed should have been estimated, a simple operation in arithmetic would solve the problem of the age of the earth.

Arbitration in the Antipodes.

An agreement was recently reached between the New South Wales Typographical association and the employing printers and publishers of Sydney through the mediation of the court of arbitration of New South Wales. The secretary of the Sydney union is authority for the statement that the award is working to the advantage of all composing room employees; that more men are employed and all receive a little more for fewer hours than formerly. All machine composition is on a piece basis. A clause was inserted in the scale at the request of the employers which provides for a slightly reduced wage for those men who from old age or other causes cannot do the work required of the younger and more active employees. The publishers did not wish to discharge their old employees, men who had grown old in their service, so in this manner sought to provide for their continued employment.

Horses Shod With Leather.

In certain districts of Australia horses are now reported to be shod with leather instead of iron, the feet thus receiving better support. This novelty is employed only in regions where the ground is permanently covered with grass or fine sand. It's mighty foolish to walk in the shadows when a step to the right or left will take you into God's sunshine. The extraordinary mode of procedure might have worked better in results had it been ordinary.

DEAD MAN SAILS BACK.

His Son Steers Boat Like One in a Trance.

A weird sea story, strongly reminiscent of one of Edgar Allan Poe's tales of mystery, was reported from Plymouth recently. The little fishing boat Fear Not went out to the Eddystone whiting grounds. In her were William Rowe, her owner, aged about 60, and his son, a lad of about 17.

Later in the afternoon the boat returned to Sutton harbor, in the Catterwater. Rowe sat upright upon a thwart, with his arms folded, gazing out beyond the bows. His son leaned upon the tiller steering the boat. The wind was light, and she came along slowly.

The fishermen upon the pierhead hailed the two men to know what sort of a catch they had aboard, but received no answer. Neither of the figures stirred in the least. This attracted some curiosity, and a boat went alongside the little smack. Then a startling discovery was made. Rowe was dead, and his son appeared quite unconscious of his surroundings, like a man in a trance.

Later on he was able to explain the mystery to some extent. He said that his father had been in a boat, and then dropped back into the sitting posture in which he was found, and never spoke or stirred again. Failure of the heart's action, brought about by heavy exertion in the excessive heat, was the cause of death. When the son realized that his father had expired, he said he felt like one in a dream, and he can only remember blankly steering the boat for Plymouth.
