A Lover's Plait.
 My lady has two soft blue eyes
 That look in mine with loving gaze,
 And when they shyly tell their tale
 I feel in bliss above—
 Or would I saw her eyes red as fire
 Glare at me from her side
 And seem to say, "If you come near,
 Then you'll get a bite!"

My lady has a lovely mouth,
 Full of sweet, childish wiles,
 That's only made for laughter light,
 For kisses and for smiles.
 Put near it is a laughing and says
 "Full furnished with fangs white,
 And so I dare not kiss my love,
 For fear I'll get a bite!"

It is the rival whom I hate,
 Her blue blood bristles bills,
 And vainly do I plead and storm
 To break that heavily pull.
 She looks approved or laughs and says
 "Must I your memory jog?
 Remember, sir, it is the test—
 Love me, love my dog!"

It's mighty good to think that among His chosen ones there will be no preferred creditors with the Lord. Upon first acquaintance the devil seems to be a pretty decent sort of a fellow.

The rich minority doesn't worry much over the troubles of the poor majority.

PERISHED IN STORM
TWO LOST LIVES SAILING ON BEDFORD BASIN.

Another Occupant of the Boat Was Rescued After Being in the Water For An Hour.

Halifax, N.S., July 16.—Tremendous rain and electric storms passed over Halifax yesterday. In the afternoon storm two very well-known young people lost their lives while sailing on Bedford Basin. They are Miss Una Roy, the seventeen-year-old daughter of J. E. Roy, a wealthy real estate owner, and William Muir, the sixteen-year-old son of Andrew Muir, commission merchant. Roy's twelve-year-old daughter, Margaret, who was with them, was rescued, after being in the water for an hour.

The three young people had been in a sailboat about an hour when a terrific squall came up. They tried to run for a place of safety, but the boat became unmanageable. Gust after gust struck their boat and at last it capsized. All three were good swimmers, but they had put on heavy rubber clothing on account of the rain. This entangled them and the two who perished went down almost immediately. Margaret Roy clung to an oar and was nearly unconscious when rescued. The bodies of the other two have not yet been recovered.

LESSONS FOR KINGSTON.
 What a Small Town Does is Easy For a City.

Red Wing, Minnesota, used to be like any other little "ornery" town—a home-like, livable place, but a bit scruffy about the edges. Then somebody left a bequest for a municipal auditorium, the destination of the auditorium brought a lecture on aesthetics. The graphic city attorney likened the town's little playhouse to the Theatre Francaise. The esthetics men told about Chippendale and true art in furniture. He made the Red Wingers shiver by explaining the influence of environment, and the effect of color and beauty on symmetrical development. Just look at the angle-worm, he said. The impulse toward beauty was suddenly quickened in the minds of public-spirited citizens who, till then, had had burlesques and dandies on street boulevards. Result—the Civic League. Its labors make a stirring tale.

Weeds and dandelions began to disappear. Many gentlemen whose generous proportions implied inertia were seen in the jungles on their premises bowing down growls offensive to the public eye. Antidivian mowers were brought out and oiled. Toothless rakes were taken to the dentist, and the crusade of extermination was on. Flower beds appeared in front lawns. Ministers and children labored in backyard gardens. The town was awake! The Junior League, with the public school teachers in command, was enlisted. Stray papers were stashed by umbrellas in the hands of zealous leaguers, removed, no more to offend the sight.

The league became active in the council, and overhead signs were banished. Garbage cans were placed at principal street corners and protected by ordinance. The searchlight of art was next turned upon those canker sores—posters and placards—that insult the eyes of the beauty-worshipper on every hand. The chief philanthropist enlisted the energies of the boys of the Junior League by offering prizes to those who would bring in the greatest number of posters at a specified time. The young crusaders started out on their still hunt, and every fence and telegraph pole within city limits was stripped. On the day set for distribution of prizes at the Carnegie library the streets were alive with boys, with arms full of signs, boys with carts groaning under loads of them, boys with creaking wheelbarrows. The philanthropist made a speech and distributed prizes, and there was abundant enthusiasm and free luncheon.

Next we turned feverish eyes on the river front and beheld what gave renewed courage—rows upon rows of dilapidated bathhouses and fish sheds. Here were new fields to conquer. These vanished to limbo. The river was filled in to make room for a new park. The railroad was persuaded to build a new depot. This staid old civic body, consisting of the municipal auditorium, Carnegie library, and federal post office, and there is room for more. And the end is not yet. No, not yet!

There is an opening for a similar wave of improvement in Kingston. Last year the city improvement movement of a few ladies made a good impression. More point was used this spring than ever before, and the houses have a better appearance. Some boulevards and fronts are neater, not many, but enough to call a good start. See on King street, the handsome most presentable thoroughfare, the borders of weeds between sidewalks and house which a few minutes' work of each resident would destroy. Then the street car tracks growing crops of hay are an indefensible disgrace. There must be a limp civic control when old men are seen cutting away the smallest weed on the roadside, and a wide growth of grass and stalwart weeds are in their tenth year of growth untouched at his right-hand, with dead trees or parts of trees as an accompanying signal of distress.

The people that spend fully half a million in imposing public buildings have an extraordinary pride. They fail to see the incongruity, incomprehensible to strangers, of ragged streets.

REGRETTED INVITATION.
 Given to the Fleet to Visit New Zealand.

Welland, New Zealand, July 16.—The socialists in Auckland are threatening to hold a demonstration of the unemployed as a protest against the public expenditures incidental to the reception of the American fleet. In the House of Assembly, last night, Mr. Holcomb, one of the members, said that there was a danger that the visit of the American fleet might cause the colonies to place dependence on the United States rather than on the motherland. He therefore, regretted that the invitation had been given.

FORSAKE MARKET
 Owing to the Exceptionally High Prices Asked.

Chatham, Ont., July 16.—A housekeepers' combine is now in formation here, the ostensible purpose of which is to boycott the alleged market combine which has forced the price of commodities up to an unprecedented figure. In spite of a plentiful crop, farm produce prices have been extraordinarily high. Housekeepers have, accordingly, agreed to boycott the civic institutions in favor of the grocery stores.

Five Years For A Burglar.

Port Hope, Ont., July 16.—After a four-hour session before Police Magistrate Holland, John Malvey, a Belleville crook, was sent to penitentiary for five years on a charge of attempted burglary. He with a companion, James Selan, also of Belleville, entered Harold Corbett's house early Tuesday morning, and when alarmed by Corbett, drew a gun and threatened to shoot. Whelan remained outside on watch. A fierce colloquy had been chloroformed and was found all but dead in the dining room. The rear door had been left open for a safe retreat. Chief Bond located the men, and, after clever work with Malvey's boots, found they tallied with marks in the house. Whelan will be tried today.

Retired Minister Shot.

Metuchen, N.J., July 16.—F. B. D. Prickett, a retired minister of the Methodist Episcopal church and former mayor of the borough of Metuchen, was shot down and killed in the street near his home. Archie Herron, charged with the shooting, stood at the head of the stairs in his home with a drawn revolver when the officers told him he would be taken dead or alive, no matter how many he killed. Two years ago, while Mr. Prickett was recorder, Herron was frequently arraigned before him for disorderly conduct, and was once sentenced to ten days in jail.

Winnipeg, Man., July 16.—Twenty thousand dollars in greenbacks, loosely tied up in brown paper, was found on a truck in the train shed of the Canadian Pacific. Hundreds of people arriving in the city on special excursion trains and on the regular trains passed by the package, no one giving it a second look. Eventually the contents of the package were discovered, and the precious consignment was hurried to its destination.

Broke Collar Bone Saving Hat.

Ottawa, July 16.—A peculiar accident happened to John Aylmer, eldest son of Lord Aylmer, on Saturday. He had been attending the races of the Rideau Canoe Club and was returning home, when a puff of wind raised his hat. He put his right hand up quickly to save his headgear, when he heard a sharp crack. His collar-bone had snapped in the act of raising his arm. Mr. Aylmer is confined to his home.

A FIERCE FIGHT.
 Doukhobors and Police Have a Struggle.

Yorkton, Sask., July 16.—Acting under instructions from the provincial government to have the Doukhobor ringleaders at the Ararat camp committed to jail, Inspector Junget decided to make a raid, last night, when ten constables of the R.N.W.M.P., under Sergt. Vickery, armed with warrants to arrest six men and women, proceeded to carry out their orders. The Doukhobors bravely resisted and the whole band of sixty, in number, turned to the assistance of the twelve. A pitched battle was then fought between the police and the Doukhobors, during which the latter made free use of sticks of cord-wood or whatever weapons were at hand. After three hours' fierce struggling the police effected the arrests and overpowered the balance and leaving a strong guard at the camp, returned to Yorkton with the twelve prisoners. These were at once brought before Inspector Junget and each sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The six women immediately, after receiving sentence, were quietly detached in wagons to Cenora on their way to Prince Albert jail. The six men will leave early tomorrow morning to be distributed throughout the district jail in the province. This is a part of the experiment to see the effect on those left behind, and is thought to be the beginning of the breaking up of the whole band.

HAD ONE FOOT SEVERED.

George Marks, Brockville, Was Lying on Track.

Gananoque, July 16.—A very serious accident happened this morning on the Thousand Island railroad, about half a mile north of the town. As the local train was coming in from meeting the regular train, Engineer Joseph Courtney noticed directly in front of him, near the bridge, the form of a man lying on the track. He immediately whistled, down brakes and reversed his engine, but too late. The engine passed over the legs of the unfortunate man, severing one foot entirely and part of the other.

The man was at once picked up and made as comfortable as possible by Conductor William Chapman, and brought to the pavilion here, where Dr. Bird was summoned and bandaged the wounded limbs. Telephoning for an ambulance to meet the train at Brockville he was at once sent to the general hospital. His name is George Marks, and his home is in Brockville. He has been working for Dolan & Sons as a finisher on the granolithic walks here. He had been at the junction with some friends who were leaving and not caring to wait for the train, started for Gananoque on foot. Further details are merely conjecture.

THE DECISION REVERSED.

There Must Be a New Trial in Action.

Toronto, July 16.—A cable was received, to-day, by Messrs. Lee and O'Donoghue, saying that the privy council had given judgment in favor of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union in the action brought by the Metallic Roofing company of Toronto. The judgment grants a new trial on account of misdirection. It will upset the verdict of $7,500, given by the trial court in favor of the roofing company against the Toronto union, its officers and the International Union. If the roofing company wishes damages it must begin the suit all over again.

In the original action, which was commenced over three years ago, the roofing company asked for damages for interference with its business and for a perpetual injunction restraining the members of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union from picketing their premises. Judge McMahon then decided in favor of the company.

St. Lawrence.

Julia Ditto Young, Author of "Barham Beach, the President's Poem." Dearest to me of rivers! Prince of streams! Magnificent upon whose breast these beams A venture rich past speaking, dazling beaus Of molten gold and silver, and a haze Of mingled diamond and sapphire rays,—Hark why I love thee? Thy most noble name Unto my thought long years ago became The sweetest utterance that lips could frame. And ever since I find the type in thee I'd fain have thine by hand unmake for, Oh, may the future grant this precious name! Like thine may rise above ignoble strife— May it beneficently calmly flow. Majestic, noble—may its borders grow In gracious green—and may good actions sow Its course as thick, St. Lawrence strong and free. As are the topaz dimples stream o'er thee!
