

ENRICH A NEWSBOY

Caravan Halted in St. Paul to Aid Street Waif.

A Pitiful Story Touched Purse Strings of the Nobles to Extent of Clothing and $200.

St. Paul, Minn., July 21.—One person at least is glad the Shriners came to St. Paul. He is a little fellow, scarcely six years old, on whose face is written lines of care which come to the ordinary man only with the years. His name is Ivan Bon-tick. He is a little Jewish newsboy.

During the week the Shriners were in St. Paul, Ivan thought to earn many pennies. But somehow he was so little, his voice wasn't very strong, he couldn't sell very many. Each morning, however, he would start out just the same, trying with all the strength in his body to sell his papers.

DID RAGE KILL?

Medical Evidence Regarding Fatal Encounter.

Winnipeg, July 20.—A dispute arose between W. A. Morden, real estate dealer here, and M. Friedman, a Jewish baggageman. A personal encounter developed and a moment later Friedman was seen to drop to the ground insensible. He was conveyed to the hospital, where he died a short time after. Morden was arrested, although he denied having hit Friedman. It has since been shown that Friedman died of apoplexy brought on probably by violent rage.

AFTER POSTAL MEN

They Don't Know When Nude Art is Not Real Art.

An American Society Angry Because Department Cannot Tell Venus From a Mud Pie.

Chicago, July 21.—Arraignment of Chicago's postoffice authorities by the National Art Society because of the exclusion of its journal from the mails, with the tart comment that the officials "didn't know the difference between a Venus de Milo and a mud pie," has excited an equally tart reply: "A Halstead street barber's recitation of Hamlet is not art."

The judging of what is art and mailable brings frequent clashes all over the country, the rules of the department being complied with rigidly and according to precedent. There is an interesting difference recognized between the original painting and the reproduction with an official who has to discriminate put this way: "The original Venus de Milo was art, but a picture of it printed on cheap paper is not art. One does not need a pair of spectacles to see the sun, and some pictures are the 'first aid to immortality.'"

THEY WERE DROWNED

Were Running the Rapids When Canoe Turned Broadside.

New Liskeard, July 21.—One of the worst drowning fatalities that has ever occurred in this country happened, Sunday, when three young men lost their lives in the Montreal river. The accident happened between Ragged Clute and Fountain Falls, fifteen miles below Gillies' Depot, on the T. and N. O. railway. Four surveyors employed by J. H. Smyth, O.L.S., surveying the Gillies' limit, started out in a sixteen-foot canoe to take photographs of Fountain Falls. William Cameron, of Liskeard, was in the stern. O. E. Newberry, Elgin Mills, near Toronto, was next to him. H. D. Dowsley, Prescott, was in the centre paddling, and B. M. Black, 287 Berkeley street, Toronto, was in the bow. William Cameron, the only one saved, told the story: "We started out just before dinner on Sunday to take photographs of Fountain Falls. After portaging one small rapid we thought we could run another small one. When half way down this rapid the canoe swung sideways. I called to Black, who was in the bow, to pull it off a rock just ahead. Black took the rope and could not make it. Before we could think the four of us were in the water. I came up alongside of the canoe, as also did Black. We both climbed in. Dowsley was ahead of us, and I called to him and told him the canoe drifted to him. He called back he could not, so I started after him, leaving the canoe with Black on it to drift to us. When we were a few yards off Dowsley he sank for the last time. Newberry was the nearest to the shore, and when I told him to try and make it he shook his head. He must have thought he would be some help to the others as he started towards us. That was the last I saw of him. When I turned around Black had the canoe and was floating down under water with nothing but the back of his head above. As luck would have it, my feet touched bottom and I stood in water up to my neck. I grabbed him and told him to stand, but he did not answer and went under. He grabbed me around the waist and I lost my footing and we both went under water. How I got away from him I don't know, but when I came up nothing was to be seen except the four hats floating down stream. I was completely exhausted."

Searching parties are out scouring the river for some trace of the bodies, but no trace has been found.

Devlin Will Resign

In Quebec Cabinet and Re-enter Dominion Politics.

Ottawa, July 21.—Hon. Charles R. Devlin, minister of mines and colonization, was in Ottawa on his way north from a fishing trip, when he received word of the contestation of his recent election to the Quebec legislature. He immediately changed his plans and returned to Montreal, and it is stated by his friends that his intention is to resign his portfolio in the Quebec cabinet and to secure the liberal nomination for the House of Commons in South Renfrew, with the hope of being taken into the dominion cabinet as the Irish-Catholic representative in place of Hon. R. W. Scott. Mr. Devlin is credited with the statement that he was through with Quebec politics and sick and tired of the persecution to which he had been subjected in Quebec because of his being an Irishman.
