SEEK AID OF POLICE IN ENFORCING THE LIQUOR LICENSE LAW.

What Ex-Inspector Glidden Used to Do—The City Got Half the Fines—Advice to the Present Inspector.

It is freely admitted that Inspector W. C. Wright in the pursuit of his duty could not at one time convict perhaps more than half a dozen liquor places for violations of the law.

The ex-inspector, William Glidden, it is understood, had an understanding with the police authorities as to raids on hotels that kept their bars open during prohibited hours.

Some time ago, there was a discussion as to whether the inspectors or the police should enforce the liquor license law.

ON THE STORY OF CHRIST TEACHING NICODEMUS THE NECESSITY OF REGENERATION.

The story of Christ teaching Nicodemus the necessity of regeneration, was the subject of a fine sermon delivered in Cooke's church, Sunday morning, by Rev. H. Marshall, of St. George, Ont.

In his opening remarks the speaker said that one great need of the world today, was the secret of life. There was no secret of life to be found in wealth and pleasure.

Nicodemus had marvelled, and well he might, when Jesus told him that he must be born again.

Men were born again by His touch. How this could be done puzzled Nicodemus, and the same questions puzzled people to-day.

KINGSTON SHOULD LOOK INTO THE QUESTION.

Of Getting Water Power Forty Miles Away—The Cost Figured—How Toronto Stands As to Power.

Kingston, Aug. 15.—(To the Editor): When the demand for cheap power is everywhere recognized as most important and the growth of a city apparently depends upon its development, it has seemed very strange to me that for so long (notwithstanding that it may be found within forty miles of this city), no effort has been made either municipally or otherwise to bring it here.

I suggest this means of getting power as preferable to the proposition made by the Hydro-Electric Commission who would develop power in the Trent river, a distance nearly twice as far, which while it would add to the cost, would place Kingston at a disadvantage as compared with Belleville or Trenton.

To show how crazy Toronto has gone in this municipal ownership business, notwithstanding that they do not know yet what a horsepower is going to cost them, the contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission is signed and the city is bound to pay any price, no matter how extravagant the charge may be as the following questions will show:

The Electric Development company now furnish power to the Electric Light company and the street railway company at $35 a horsepower, as compared with this the contract calls for $18 at the city limits.

Many Requests For Guide Books and Hunting Literature. Some idea of the manner in which the attractions of the Intercolonial railway have been exploited during the past few years may be gathered from the increasing number of requests for the guide books and descriptive folders issued by the railway that are daily being received by the general passenger department.
