MICROBES SWARM IN QUEBEC WELLS.

Caused Death of Major Henderson and Other Soldiers—Analysis Discloses Alarming Conditions—Typhoid Fever Spreading in the City.

Quebec, Aug. 25.—The citizens of Quebec are very much alarmed over the condition of the city's water supply, which has come to light through a medical analysis. For years past it has been the boast of Quebecers that the city had the best supply of water in Canada. But it now appears that they have been suffering under a delusion. During the Tercentenary celebration it was rumored that Major Henderson was poisoned by eating canned green peas, but it now turns out from investigation that his death was due to unsanitary conditions of Quebec's water supply, as was also the death of several volunteer soldiers from the west. During the celebration the water pipes burst, and the outcome of the investigation proves that Major Henderson's death was entirely due to microbes in the water he drank while on service in Quebec. A correspondent has investigated this matter for a week, and has enough evidence to prove the substantiality of his allegations. The authorities are now closing the wells. There are sixty cases of typhoid fever in Quebec. When typhoid fever broke out recently in the western part of St. John's suburb it was supposed that the disease was caused through drinking water which was taken from a well where the residents of that village had got their supply of water for years past. Moreover, the health authorities, while investigating the cause of the epidemic, found out that most of those suffering from the disease had drunk the well water while repairs were being made to the water pipe during the festivities. Dr. Paquin ordered the well to be closed down, and a quantity of the water was taken and analyzed by Dr. Art Valley. The result of his analysis completely justifies the action taken by Quebec's city Health Officer. Dr. Valley declares that the water in the well is manifestly dangerous, as it contains all the germs capable of proving the disease now spreading in St. John's suburb.

Microbes just swarm in the water and affect its odor. When the fever began spreading in St. John's suburb Dr. Paquin, besides closing down the well on St. Foix road, also ordered that a well situated near Berthelot Market be also closed down.

In society, and two sons, John W. aged nine years, and William H. aged five years.
