

A WHITE ELEPHANT AND HER HUSBAND

The Happiness of the Family is Often Dispelled By Fat Disease.

To have a waddling whopping big wife is, of course, a misfortune for any ordinary man, but it is more of a misfortune to the waddling wife. Though she may be caged up in her own house most of the time, ashamed to go out doors, the riding and scoffing on the streets is nothing compared with the unceasing whining agony she undergoes when she has to do her housework, unless she is fortunate enough, of course, to have a servant.

To have to grunt and groan upstairs and down again, to go up and down again a dozen times a day, the having to crawl around the house all day, eternally doing something, and not be able to sit down, are all an extra strain.

Then when night comes to have to shoot step around in a hurry and wind up the butts of the day is a terrible wear upon the one who has to do it.

Such a condition is simply insufferable. Couple with it all, the loss of beauty and lovely form, which is dear to every woman, the drooping chin, the check and chin that makes the very air seem heavy, the fat-squeeze at the lungs, the fat-squeeze at the breath, the fat-squeeze at the heart; it certainly does seem as though there were no more severe affliction to bear in life.

The result of all this is that the wife, a heavy, ponderous wife or an elephant husband, trying to waddle around and make the happy lightweight believe that she is a beauty, in vain.

It is misery trying to make other people believe you are happy and well. It is often the forced smile of the woman that has to do it. No one likes fat, and even members of your own family must naturally feel a repugnance to you.

It can all be remedied, however, for a fat wife. Pound by pound will begin to drop away, until away, vanish safely and surely. "I have had to change my ways, my eating or drinking habits, and the flesh is going away just the same," you will say to yourself with the most entire satisfaction after being told to sit down. The one who doubts this will still be fat years after the man who believes it and who uses this remarkable formula for cure hangs.

No Show For Borden.

Saturday Night.

Stories are in circulation that Sir James may enter the dominion cabinet as leader of his party with Mr. Borden as his willing lieutenant. Stories of this kind, with variations, are under discussion in well-informed circles. But if Sir James Whitney has gone to England to get time to consider, and in case a copy of the journal should fall under his eye, it may not be out of place for Saturday Night to say that we have no belief that any present combination of provincial premiers and local dispositions will suffice to cause the defeat of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He has been unfortunate in many of his lieutenants—too many by far—but he remains a public figure splendid and alone in the imagination of the people. He cannot be beaten in a young and impressionable country by such forces as now oppose him.
