OF NO USE AS FLOUR SO SAYS AN OTTAWA GRAIN EXPERT.

In Regard to "Alaska" Wheat—The Variety Was Known in This District Years Ago Under Name of Egyptian Wheat.

A story has been going the rounds, and has been published in different Canadian papers, to the effect that there is a certain brand of Alaska wheat which nets 200 bushels to the acre.

Mr. William Scott, of the firm of Wm. Scott and Co., millers and grain dealers, was asked about this and said: "This variety of wheat was known in this district years ago under the name of Egyptian wheat, and it is useless for flour making purposes."

The Washington correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal, in a despatch to his paper, says on this subject: "The publication in a widely-circulated weekly paper (North-Western Miller) of an article by Oscar F. G. Day, of Minneapolis, on 'Alaska' wheat has called forth an official statement from the Department of Agriculture relative to this cereal. The statement says in part:—"

"A variety of wheat under the name 'Alaska' is being widely advertised as capable of yielding at rate of 200 bushels to the acre under ordinary soil conditions. It is stated that this variety was found growing wild on the eastern coast of Alaska."

"The department states that this type of wheat has been known for many years, both in this country and in Europe. It has been tried at several State experiment stations in western United States, but nowhere have yields been high enough to merit attention."

"The wheat has been grown to a very limited extent on certain heavy, undrained soils in France for many years. In such locations it is said to yield rather better than ordinary wheat, but it is one of the poorest wheats known for making flour. It is never grown where ordinary varieties of wheat will thrive."

"Dr. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Industry, said this same wheat had been referred to in reports back as far as fifty years ago, when it was called 'miracle' wheat."

"Dr. Galloway describes it as a 'freak' wheat and said it could never be made valuable commercially."

"Secretary Coburn, of the Kansas Department of Agriculture, last week had some fun with the story of 'Alaska' wheat recently widely circulated in the press and conspicuously presented in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Coburn says that when he sees the wheat he will believe it, but until then he prefers looking up the story as like those formerly despatched from Kansas, in the old days of the cyclone and the child in the well. Not many of the Kansas papers printed the story about 'Alaska' wheat, though they were supplied with the editorial correspondence on the subject."

"The 'Alaska' wheat is generally held to be the same as the old Egyptian or 'mummy' wheat, which created a sensation in its time, and was much experimented with in the west, but which proved to have little or no value to the farmer or miller."

Particulars Desired. Denver Post. At a card-party not long ago a cross-eyed man was giving his positive opinions on every subject in a loud voice, and otherwise behaving in a general nuisance.

Have Energy Plus. If you have only a little less energy than your duties require life is a burden.

On The Bench. The Green Bag. A western judge, sitting in chambers, seeing from the piles of papers in the lawyers' hands that the first case was likely to be hotly contested, asked: "What is the amount in question?"

A Sharp Tongue. M. A. P., London. Professor Jowett's comment on the young men of Balliol often took the form of crushing sarcasms: "The college, Mr. X., thinks highly of you, he once said; perhaps too highly; but not half so highly, I am sure, as you think of yourself."

POISON IVY ARRIVES. Remedies For Victims of the Wild Plant.

New York Times. This is the time of year when "poison ivy" is most dangerous, for the young shoots and newly matured leaves are much better supplied with the volatile oil that so irritates the human skin than they are later in the year.

Antidotes innumerable have been recommended from time to time, and many of them are in more or less extensive use, but, as always—when medical opinion differs widely and persistently as to proper treatment, the cause of the disagreement is the fact that none of the treatments are satisfactory.

The time to act is immediately after exposure. The hands, of course, are most often affected, and the best thing to do is to remove the irritant as before it has worked beneath the outer layer of the skin.

For those who wish to make an experiment it may be stated that the New York Medical Journal quotes in apparent hopefulness a doctor who writes in the Therapeutic Gazette, saying that sodium sulphite in supersaturated solution will cure this poisoning in three or four days, even in severe cases.

BROKEN HEARTS. Curious Breach of Promise Laws in Other Countries.

England is the best place—from the plaintiff's point of view—for a breach of promise action. All other countries seem to regard with grave suspicion any attempt to recover monetary compensation for the loss of a prospective husband, and unless the plaintiff has a very strong case indeed it is never worth her while to carry her grievance into the law courts.

In France breach of promise cases are rare, for the simple reason that the law requires the plaintiff to prove that she had suffered pecuniary loss. Now this is not a very easy thing to do on the part of the lady, especially in a country where a girl without a dot—that is, a marriage portion—has a poor chance of finding a husband.

Practical Germany, as might be expected, has perhaps the best method for solving this problem. When a young couple become engaged they have to go through a public betrothal ceremony that ought to knock all shyness out of them. In the local town hall the pair declare their affection, willingness to marry, etc., ending by signing a collection of documents that apparently leave no loophole for escape.

But if either party to the contract wishes to withdraw another journey is undertaken to the town hall and another collection of documents signed, witnessed and collected. Then the authorities determine the question of compensation—should it be claimed. In this connection it may be said that the man can, and often does, claim a solatium for his wounded feelings. The usual reward is one-fifth of the marriage dowry. It is easy to understand, when all this is remembered, how loath the young people of Germany are to break their betrothal oaths.

As the law of Italy offers little or no protection whatever to jilted damsels and swains it is not surprising that the stiletto should be the favorite mode of deciding breach of promise cases. The Italian law demands that the person suing for breach shall produce a written promise to marry from the defendant; otherwise the action cannot proceed. This difficulty is almost insurmountable, and the Italian judges are seldom troubled to adjudicate between one-time lovers.

To bring an action for breach of promise of marriage against a reigning monarch is an achievement, but it has been done, and by an English lady. It now fifteen years since Miss Jenny Mitchell sued the Sultan of Johore, and as there was a doubt whether the dusky one was actually a reigning monarch the case was allowed to come into court. But the judge quickly disposed of the action by ruling it inadmissible for the reason referred to and Miss Mitchell was mortified.

It is remarkable that one of the two actions which have brought verdicts of ten thousand pounds each to the plaintiffs should have had for its defendant a written promise to marry from the defendant; otherwise the action cannot proceed. This difficulty is almost insurmountable, and the Italian judges are seldom troubled to adjudicate between one-time lovers.

Premise Not Admitted. Philadelphia Item. The Rev. Samuel Pearson, of Portland, Maine, was a witness in a divorce case. "Mr. Pearson," asked the judge, "were you on this bench in my place and acquainted with all the circumstances of this case, would you grant this divorce?"

How "Fingy" Got His Name. Will Irwin in Collier's Weekly. Several stories are afloat on the Buffalo docks how Corners, New York's "up-state" democratic boss, came by his name. "Fingy," but this is the accepted version. He and a playmate were boasting back and forth of their nerve. "Aw, I bet you," said the playmate, "you ain't got the nerve to let me chop you fingy." "I'll bet you ain't got the nerve to chop it," said Corners. They got a cleaver. Corners laid his hand down on the block and they both won. Down the street ran Jimmy Corners, waving the bloody hand and shouting: "He chopped my fingy!" Corners fought with a crippled hand.

Europe Growing Colder. Philadelphia News. Europe is growing colder, says M. Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer. He declares that from actual figures recently obtained he has become certain that the temperature of Europe has been falling. France has been suffering for a long time from an excess of cold weather, the temperature at Paris having been one degree below the normal. Other readings show even less favorable results. The fall is more noticeable in the spring than at other periods of the year. Similar conditions are recorded in England, Belgium, Spain, Italy, Austria and Germany.
