Debs, the party's presidential candidate, considerably shorter than had been expected. Debs had intended to speak for an hour. He had it not been for the presence of mind of a woman, Miss O'Reilly, of the Chicago Teachers' Federation, the trouble might have been of serious consequences for John Peterson, owner of the picnic grounds, on whom Debs threatened to wreak vengeance. There were fully 5,000 socialists on the grounds, the event being the opening of the socialist national campaign.

The ladies of the parish who have always been notable on previous like affairs for their bountiful spread of dainty edibles, certainly proved their reputation in surpassing all former efforts. There was a variety of amusements and sports for the entertainment of the visitors. A football match between Toledo and Plum Hollow, created a lively interest. The result was a tie, two to two. The gross receipts were about $600, which will be applied on the new Roman Catholic church building fund. The Presbyterian social on the evening of the 25th ult., was a pleasant event. MR. DEBS IN A ROW

THREATEN TO THROW OWNER FROM ROOF.

The trouble came about as a result of a number of photographers being allowed to ascend the roof of the lunch counter building for the purpose of taking pictures of Debs and other party leaders assembled on the speakers' platform, opposite the building. The ladder was raised for the photographers a crowd of socialists, anxious to obtain "grand stand" seats, rushed up and followed the artists to the roof, where about fifty of them proceeded to make themselves comfortable. Mr. Debs was pretty well warmed up to his subject and had paid his respects to both the republican and democratic parties when the first interruption came. Peterson appeared on the roof with a star on his coat and demanded that the crowd get down. "There is no essential difference between the republican and the democratic party, and neither Mr. Taft nor Mr. Bryan will dare to—" was as far as the speaker got, when Peterson shouted: "Get off the roof!" Debs tried to continue the thread of his argument, but it was no use. A general uproar arose in the crowd, and threats of "We'll throw you down if you don't let us alone," were hurled at Peterson. "Mr. Officer, let them alone; they're all right where they are," yelled Debs. Peterson looked over the obstinate crowd for a moment, gave Debs a look of disgust, and then descended to the ground and disappeared through the kitchen door. Then followed half an hour before the trouble was renewed, in which time Debs flayed the "capitalist class," Taft, Bryan and the prohibitionists, and finished a period by denouncing the working class as "wage slaves who never had and never will have either money or sense." "You are a republican because your father was one," he said. "You are a democrat because your grandfather was one. Everything has come to me by my granpa. What do you care about bank deposits? What do you care?" He got no further. Peterson again appeared on the roof and demanded that the crowd get down. This time he was more insistent. Instead of having a red ribbon, which looked like a cigar band, tied in his buttonhole. The red ribbon was intended to appease the socialists, but it had the opposite effect. "You had got to get down from this roof," yelled Peterson. "Throw him down," yelled several in the crowd. "He is trying to break up the meeting." The crowd on the roof grabbed Peterson by the neck and shook him until he was dizzy. Then they dragged him to the edge of the roof and probably would have thrown him to the ground twenty feet below if Miss O'Reilly had not appeared the assailants. "Not on my mind him," yelled Debs, now thoroughly angry. "He is a minion of the capitalist class and is trying to break up this peaceable assembly." Miss O'Reilly, who was standing immediately below where Peterson was struggling with the infuriated crowd on the roof, jumped a stump and yelled to the fighting crowd: "Men, use common sense. Don't throw him down. It will only be the worse for you. Don't let it be charged by our enemies that we have created a riot at our own picnic." This had the desired effect and the men descended to the ground. After they were all down, however, the ladder was taken away and Peterson was marooned on the roof until a crowd of friendly newspaper men rescued him from his high perch. When Peterson was taken down he was shaking with fright and the rough handling he had received at the hands of the angry men. "My wife told me to get the crowd down and I had to do it," said Peterson, with a quivering voice. "The rafters in the building are poor and the roof might have caved in. What then, eh? I tried to be good to these people, but O my!"

Stanfield's Underwear

(Chapter I)

A Talk by the Maker to the Wearer.

Stanfield's Underwear is made of the best wool that grows on the best wool-bearing sheep in the world—the long, silky-fibred Nova Scotia wool.

The founder of the Stanfield mills did more than anyone else to develop the wool industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. For half a century, the farmers of the Stanfields—first for E. Stanfield—and now for his sons, John and Frank, the President and Treasurer of Stanfields Limited.

The wear of a garment depends on the quality of wool from which it is made. Underwear may be PURE WOOL, and ALL WOOL—and still shrink, ravel and wear out in a single season. Because the underwear is not made of good wool in the first place.

There are seven grades of wool in the fleece when clipped from Nova Scotia sheep. Only the first three grades of this best wool are used in making Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear for men and women.

There are no weak spots in the fibre to break in the garments. There can be no unraveling, because every stitch is locked. Garments can't shrink, because of our perfected process of treating the wool BEFORE garments are woven, thus insuring absolutely Unshrinkable Underwear.

In all sizes from 22 to 70 inch chest measure. In three winter weights—RED label for light weight—BLUE label for medium weight—BLACK label for heavy weight.

SLEEP Is More Important Than FOOD

No one can live without sleep for a whole week, while Dr. Tanner and others have fasted forty days. Restful sleep is necessary to do good work—you can't rest in a hammock, or on a spring bed that sags to the centre—your body should be supported throughout, and yet be on a level surface, which yields to every move.

A "Star" Felt Mattress and a "Banner" Spring

fill this bill exactly—will give you comfort and rest—will prevent that tired feeling next morning. The two cost less than a cheap hair mattress, and are good for an ordinary lifetime—no cleaning—no repairs.
