SHE WENT ASTRAYLOST IN DENSE FOREST; WANDERED THREE DAYS.

Mrs. Arthur Moore of Falkenburg

Has Terrible Experience—Awakened By Wild Animals.

Muskoka, Sept. 9—(Special)—The Herald says—It falls to the lot of very few women in the twentieth century in this quiet country of ours, to go through the thrilling yet terrible experience just suffered by Mrs. Arthur Moore of Falkenburg. And it is doubtful if many women could have lived in such circumstances, or, at any rate, have had the endurance and common-sense displayed by Mrs. Moore. To be alone in a thickly-wooded forest with the hopeless feeling of being lost, not only for an hour or a day but in the blackness of the night, with all its mysterious obscurities, real and imaginary; then after wandering all day in vain endeavor to find the way out, to spend another night in the same maze!

Between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday morning, Mrs. Moore went out for a walk, and followed a path which she thought led to an old crabapple orchard some distance behind her husband's place. She did not come to the orchard, and turned back to what she thought was the way home. There were a number of trails in the bush, and she in some way got astray and farther from home. She called, but no one heard her; her progress was very slow for the forest, at this point, is very dense, with huge elms, maples and undergrowth, while underneath fallen trees, rocks and roots made it hard to walk. She wandered around, following different trails, till darkness came on, then realizing that she was lost, she made a bed of ferns and went to sleep. This presence of mind probably saved her life, for had she wandered all night she would have been lost.

She had to walk all night she would have been lost.

She had to walk all night she would have been lost.

She had to walk all night she would have been lost.
