THE CABINET CHANGES.
 The retirement of Hon. Senator Scott, and possibly the retirement of Hon. Senator Cartwright, the one somewhat unfitted for active political life by the infirmities of age and the other by ill-health, will not surprise any one. The fact that such retirements had been contemplated gave the opposition press a chance to express the opinion that they were being pushed out of the cabinet; and the premier had his best defender in the same press and to the effect that whatever his failings he was not an ingrate.

The government has at its head one who, though advanced in years himself, is still buoyant, alert, active the most magnetic personality that there is in Canadian political life today. This is a strenuous age, however, and the supervision of the public service involves the attention of younger men. This is so self-evident that two of the former stalwarts of liberalism have seen the wisdom of making way for those who will be equal to the weight of their responsibilities.

Sir Richard Cartwright's successor has not been named, but if Mr. Sifton is the man, as rumour intimates, then Canada will again have in the government one of the most brilliant of men and admitted to be such by opponents as well as friends. Hon. Mr. Scott's successor is Charles Murphy, K.C., a lawyer of strong character and great ability. He will be a decided acquisition to the government. The act which provided for the larger remuneration of the members of the government and members of parliament some years ago provided also an allowance for those who had served their country long and faithfully. Liberals everywhere have reason to remember the splendid service of the veterans and wish them peace and comfort in their political ease.

The postmaster general does well to look into the rural mail delivery question in person, but he will not have to go far to find out that it is too great a luxury for Canada yet awhile. True, it will be a boon for the farmers, and they are not getting from any government more than is coming to them.

ASSAULT ON MR. BORDEN.
 The Ottawa Journal hastens to deny that the "honour" of Hon. Mr. Brodeur has been attacked in the sense in which the prime minister uses the word "honor." It says that Mr. Brodeur "tackled a big job, left others to look after it, went junketing to Europe when he should have been at his desk, rolled up a bill of $12,000 to a firm of "construction engineers" in New York, and came back and said that everything that was wrong had happened before he took hold."

The Journal has surely fallen from grace when it is so partisan and so unfair in its references to a public man. Mr. Brodeur had business in Europe, and was not "junketing" any more than the premier of Ontario, his minister of agriculture and his minister of education can be charged with "junketing" now while in England on public business. He left in charge of the department the deputy, who had been appointed by a conservative government, who had served under several ministers prior to Mr. Brodeur, and had even performed all the things that were suddenly considered scandalous in the extreme.

PEACE NOT BROKEN.
 It is well that the great ecclesiastical demonstration passed off in England without disturbance, and because those who had the direction of it were subject to the soundest judgment. The proposal to carry the host was not an irritating subject at the outset. The trouble over the host was very likely in view of the importance that was attached to it. But England has given the evidence in this connection, as with others, that it is the unexpected that happens.

The nonconformist element, always alert and usually radical, saw in the procession a meaning that was not probably intended, and at once there was a protest. Protestant England, keeping in mind the Emancipation Act, read in the incidents of the day religious arrogance or assumption, and the clamour that followed threatened serious branches of the peace. It was the premier, Mr. Asquith who appealed to the church dignitaries to change their public programme in the interest of peace. His offices, though kindly offered, were at first questioned, but when he pressed his suggestion, with the understanding that he spoke officially, there was an acceptance of it.

It may be a reflection on England, that the representatives of any creed or race cannot peacefully indulge in religious rites publicly, but it is better to forego some things than to invite hostility and there is no trouble so intense or bitter as that which rises out of religious differences.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 Tom Lawson has been very candid with the people who are forcing their money upon him. Their goods will be safe enough "unless he loses them in the stock market," and when he hits up against Harriman or Ryan or Rockefeller anything may happen.

The leader of the opposition wants it to be understood that if he is called to power he will not do a thing to the Grand Trunk Pacific. The best protection on this point will be to see that he does not get a chance to harm anything.

The politicians' sneer at the "construction engineers," but if they read System, a business magazine, they will learn something that will cure them of their bad habit. "Construction engineers" are the men who find out the leaks in business or plants when the owners of them cannot do it.

It is pointed out that while there has been a decrease in the drunkenness of London in the last ten years there has been an increase in poverty. It is not argued surely that one leads to the other. Sobriety has been regarded as the one essential feature of better social conditions.

It is pointed out that Mr. Borden condemns corruption and will not practice it himself. He takes great care, however, of the man who was caught red-handed in it. His law partner is the special defender of that beauty, Bayne, whose works are beyond comparison.

Keep Both Going.
 A store's advertisement, says the Buffalo News, tell the people what is "doing" at that store—what is new, what is inviting, why today is a good time to visit the store. People look for the ads. to tell them these things just as naturally as they would look at a clock to tell the time.

Sometimes a clock does not run. A store's ad. does not run. A "run-down" clock is at about equally unsatisfactory, unserviceable, misleading.

Curious thing about it is that a merchant who would think it absurd to have a "run-down" or "out-of-repair" clock will, sometimes, deliberately let his ad. stop running. It's not wise, nor "good business," nor defensible on any known grounds—but it's sometimes done.

Lawson At His Best.
 New York Outlook.
 Any man or woman who intrusts money to Lawson in response to his extravagant and bombastic advertising has absolutely no guarantee of its safety except Lawson's own personal statement that it will be safe "if he does not lose it in the stock market," and his equally frank statement that the money is not to be used in legitimate industry or investments but in the rankest and most extravagant kind of stock-gambling. In our judgment the "average curb-stone broker and bucket-shop operator is a model of fiduciary responsibility in comparison with such a reckless schemer as Lawson's—own written words describe him to be.

Herbert Under Restraint.
 Hamilton Times.
 The Winnipeg Free Press says Herbert Ames, the stereotypical manager of the slaughterhouse is a gentleman who inherited great wealth from his father, and "the story goes that his father made it a provision in his will that Herbert should not interfere in the business of the company from which he derives his wealth; if so, it was a case of a wise father knowing his own son." It is stated that it cost him $25,000 to carry the St. Antoine division of Montreal, and our contemporary computes that at that rate he seak it would cost $11,100,000 to elect a House of Commons. That is a case in which money gets the better of brains and policy.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

Always Behind.
 Toronto Globe.
 The schools are open and some of the authorized text-books are not available. The education department seems much like all the others.

Just A Feint.
 Toronto Star.
 Mr. Borden thinks Bayne a horrid person, and those safe local men who handled the choice tomatoes likewise, no doubt, but he has a warm spot for Mr. Stanfield, elected by their help.

If Trees Had Tongues.
 Gazette Mercury.
 The latest marvel revealed about plants is that they have eyes. If they only had tongues and could tell what they saw with those eyes, what a tale could they not unfold!

Seasonable Pointer.
 New York World.
 Right at the beginning of the season it might be well to correct the man who insists on calling them "toothsome bivalves." A better and more expressive term is "toothless bivalves."

A Happy Quotation.
 London Advertiser.
 Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Sorol quoted the words of the French philosopher who, when asked what he thought of himself, replied: "Very little when I judge; very much when I compare." Could anything be neater than this thrust at his opponents?

The Spoils Brigade.
 Montreal Herald.
 While some philosophers are pleading that Laurier ought to be turned out because of the existence of what is known as the patronage system, Mr. Borden is trying to cheer up his followers with the sight of four premiers, whose chief glory is that they use the patronage system for the benefit of their friends, just as in the good old days Sir John Macdonald did before them.

Attending To Business.
 Philadelphia Record.
 Merchants who keep their business well in hand, sell for cash and pay for goods at short time, taking advantage of all cash discounts, keep good habits and give strict attention to business rarely fail," said the late Marshall Field.

Marshall Field was one of the country's most persistent advertisers. In emphasizing the necessity of giving strict attention to business he covered with a blanket phrase the subject of publicity. No merchant strictly attends to his business who does not advertise.

Failure to exploit saleable goods in the daily newspapers is the most costly kind of negligence.

An Economical Remedy.
 Wade's Ointment is put up in large boxes at a small price. It is cheap in the truest sense because you get for the price a large quantity of a most valuable remedy. Wade's Ointment cures skin affections that many dollars' worth of other remedies would probably not cure.

Local Option Don't Blight.
 Orillia Packet.
 If the gentleman who "does" the leading articles for the Gravenhurst Banner were to come and take note now, at a time when there is little or nothing doing in most towns, he would be inclined to laugh at his own insinuation that local option is injuring Orillia.

What's In A Name?
 Editor:
 About six years ago a new Cast Iron Range was put on the market by the McClary Manufacturing company, and a contest commenced for procuring a suitable name. Some 20,000 were suggested, but the one that appealed most to the judges was "Pandora."

The same year an extensive advertising campaign was put on, and has been kept up ever since, by which this name and the Range have become nationally known. Pandora is now a synonym for Merit.

If there could be any doubt in "any person's mind as to the value of newspaper advertising in Canada, the success of the Pandora Range, and the widespread acquaintanceship with the name Pandora, is the best proof that advertising does bring the people in closer touch with exploited goods."

"Pandora's sales record is unequalled anywhere."
 Yours truly,
 The McClary Manufacturing Co.
 (Editor's Note:—A series of Pandora advertisements will commence in this paper at once. They were prepared by A. A. Briggs, Advertising Manager of the company, and placed by McConnell & Ferguson, Advertising Agency, London.)

Evidence Of Conscience.
 Winnipeg Free Press.
 One of the finest touches in the Colchester election case was the evidence of one of the voters, Beecher Carr by name, who swore that he left a valise in the keeping of Bayne, now awaiting trial for corrupt practices, because he did not care to take it home with him on the Sabbath. Next day Bayne came to the valise home and upon investigation it was found to be full of flasks of whiskey. Mr. Carr, in his subsequent examination, suffered from an astonishing lack of memory; it is thus all the more to his credit that he should have succeeded in remembering the Sabbath day.

Retired Marksman's Success.
 Manchester, Sept. 15.—At the Lancashire Rifle Association's meeting, at Alton, on Saturday, the Lord lieutenant's prize was won by the veteran champion, late of the 1st Liverpool Volunteers, who was compelled to retire from the service under the age clause of the territorial forces act.
