THE PARAGRAPH PULPIT

Unitarian. REV. C. W. CASSON.

The Humanness of Jesus. Said Jesus, "I go to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God." If these words are correctly reported, and if they mean anything at all, it is that Jesus had no thought of His being other than a human child of God. There is the complete expression of his unity with his fellow men, and the practical denial of his being one in a deific trinity. He puts himself squarely in the ranks of the human, and speaks only as a representative of many. It is strange indeed that any one can read these words and not be impressed by their manifest meaning and significance. They are sufficient of themselves to relate any trinitarian theory.
