POLITICS ARE HUMMING

IN PICTON TOWN AND PRINCE EDWARD.

An Engineer Injured in a Canning Factory—There Will Be Little Money in Canned Goods This Year.

Picton, Oct. 9.—Politics are humming. Both candidates, Dr. Currie, liberal, and G. O. Alcorn, conservative, are campaigning, and meanwhile, H. C. McMullen, independent, is "butting-in." He has been following up Dr. Currie, and taking advantage of the doctor's well attended meetings, for he knows not a corporal's guard would turn out to hear him. Wednesday night at Consecon, Mr. McMullen spoke at Dr. Currie's meeting and a crowd got up and left in a body till he had finished. Then R. Allison replied to Mr. McMullen. "I don't see why Mr. McMullen is in the field. He is only advocating liberal principles and upholding the administration of the Laurier government, and yet he was not nominated to represent the party, for they already have a candidate in the field."

Frank Patterson, engineer at the Old Homestead canning factory, was painfully injured by an accident. While sitting on a home-made chair in the engine room, he titled back and the chair collapsed. Three long nails penetrated his back, and he was carried to the doctor's in an unconscious state. The holes made by the nails had to be burned out and Mr. Patterson is progressing as favorably as possible.

Word has been received that G. W. Morden, formerly of the high school teaching staff, and who the past year has been studying in Germany for his Ph.D. degree, at University of Pennsylvania, has been appointed to a position on the staff of the university of Toronto. He will teach electro-chemistry.

There will be little money in canned goods this year. This is the opinion of a member of one of the largest independent canning concerns in this country, where factories of the Canadian canners' company and independents are pretty evenly divided. The trouble arises from two sources. Last season the pack was a fair one, but prices were abnormally higher than usual. There was not, as a result, so keen a demand on the wholesale business houses, and it is said the wholesalers, in many instances have considerable stock on hand from a year ago. Till these are gone the wholesalers are not in a mood to buy from the factories, from where the report comes that shipping is a trifle quieter than usual.

This season the independents are being a trfle hard hit through the action in the combine putting prices on the ground floor. There was a big pack of tomatoes and corn this year, due to a heavy crop. The demand, however, is none too keen from sellers standpoint. This is one point the independents have for consolation in their fight against the combine.

It is said that housekeepers throughout the province have never canned so much fruit and vegetables as this season. Indeed the unprecedented demand for jam jars caused a famine in Toronto, a short time ago. The Canadian Grocer, a valuable authority cites these instances so that it is pretty well known that this matter is not a trifling one, but one that will affect to a large degree the canning factories of Ontario in particular. As Prince Edward ranks high in this industry, the question is of much importance, here.

REVEALED SAD CASE.

Police Constable Pays Visit to a Home.

A visit of a police constable today, to a home on Clergy street west, revealed a very sad case. The husband, who is a member of the "Indian" list, was found under the influence of liquor, and Constable Arniel was sent to his home to serve him with a summons for his attendance at the police court, on Saturday morning. The constable could get no answer to his repeated knocks at the door so took the liberty to go inside. Three little children were found playing in the dining-room and there appeared to be no other person around at the time.

"Where is your father?" asked the constable, of the little tots.

"He's upstairs asleep," volunteered one of the children, with a rather frightened look.

"And where is your mother?" was the next question.

"Mother went out to work; she will not be back for a while yet."

The constable then took the liberty of going upstairs. Lying on the bed in a drunken sleep, he found the husband, and it required a good deal of shaking up to awaken him. Finally, after a good deal of trouble, he managed to get him to understand his mission, and he then read the summons to him. Two whiskey flasks were on the bed and a couple of glasses on the floor. It was indeed a sad spectacle, and all brought about by strong drink.

Killed At The Ball Game.

New York, Oct. 9.—One man was killed, another was seriously injured and many were hurt during the scramble to secure points of vantage from which to view the New York-Chicago baseball game, and the following rush into the field when the last New York batter was put out. H. T. McBride, a city fireman, lost his life by falling from an elevated railway pillar outside the grounds, and an unidentified man either fell or was pushed off the high fence to the right of the main entrance to the grand stand.

Cobalt A Decent Town.

Cobalt, Oct. 9.—Crossley and Hunter, the evangelists, who have been preaching daily in Cobalt, have expressed both from the pulpit and to the press their astonishment at the high standard of morals they find in this mining town. The co-operation of the people in church work ranks among the highest, they declare, and while they have heard of the existence of "blind pigs" they have not seen half a dozen drunken men in the two weeks they have been here.

To many people the call to pleasure is much louder than the call to duty.

From the start in New York, this morning, the stock market has been forced to assimilate another enormous line of stocks thrown over by foreigners, variously estimated from 75 to 100 shares. That there was not a more severe break in prices speaks well for the strength of the people who have this market in hand. At midday a rally is under way, led by Rock Island, preferred. The better feeling is caused by reports of Germany's pacific attitude. War or no war, this market is now well in hand and in shape to advance quickly on favorable news.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Answering a Correspondent.

Ompah, Oct. 7.—(To the Editor): I have no inclination to follow "County Voter" in his insane rambling and cowardly insinuations. I have nothing to add to what I have already said as regards the county clerkship. "I offered to resign last June, which I beg to remind "County Voter" was before the elections were announced, and am ready at any moment to step out when the county council says the word, but not to ratify the wish of your correspondent. The applicants for the county clerkship have sense enough to know that the county council makes the appointment, and it is simply silly for "County Voter" to charge me with promising the position to anyone. His object is quite apparent and he shows too plainly for the accomplishment of his purpose the malice behind his attempt to turn my friends against me.

I have never written a letter at any time anonymously or otherwise condemning either Mr. Gallagher or Mr. Avery and if he can prove the contrary I will step out of this contest. I supported Mr. Gallagher in every election as every person knows and am receiving Mr. Gallagher's hearty support in this election to the very evident annoyance of "County Voter." I did not attend any meetings for Mr. Avery in 1904 but I did vote for him and that was all he asked me to do. I did not attempt, either directly or indirectly, by words spoken or written, to influence one voter in the county against Mr. Avery or in favor of Mr. Shibley, and I will step out of this contest if "County Voter" will come forward and prove the contrary. Beyond polling my vote for Mr. Avery in 1904 I took no part whatever in the election, either by writing, speaking or furnishing his opponents with information against him. Anonymous writing may be at times "a blessing to the timid heart," but "County Voter" has shown that in his case it is the refuge of a coward, who has abused the privilege of your columns to make insinuations as false as they are contemptible. I doubt if your paper would be as ready to receive such stuff after the 26th as now. I remain, yours sincerely, J. W. EDWARDS.

A Missing Will?

A curious story of a missing will comes from Paris. In 1906 M. Frossard, director of the Mont de Piete at Dijon, a bachelor, died without heirs, leaving a fortune of about 100,000 francs. He had previously announced to his intimates that he intended to remember them in his will, but on his death no will could be found. The fortune then went to three distant relatives.

During the last month a German book collector passing through Dijon bought a lot of books which had formerly belonged to M. Frossard. In one of them the collector came across the lost will, in which one of the oldest friends of the dead man was appointed residuary legatee. The collector sent the will to this gentleman, and the aid of the French courts will now be invoked to distribute the property in terms of the will.

Courtesies Of The Car.

A meek-looking little man, with a large pasteboard box, climbed on the car. As he did so he bumped slightly into a sleepy, corpulent passenger with a self-satisfied look and two little dabs of side whiskers. As the car rounded a curve the box rubbed against him again, and he growled: "This is no freight car, is it?"

"Nope," returned the meek little chap with the box, "and when you come right down to it, it ain't any cattle car, either, is it?"

HOODS WORN IN LONDON.

While Travelling and Even in Restaurants.

Milliners in London are going in for a new branch of business—they are making hoods. Whether the wearing of hoods will ever become at all general remains to be seen, but they are having a fair trial, according to the correspondent of the Millinery Trade Review. The specimens shown are very dainty, and not at all unbecoming.

The prettiest are certainly those shaped like a friar's cowl, and they are also the most convenient, as they roll up small and can be tucked away into the pocket of a theatre wrap or stowed away in a travelling bag.

Those run in with whalebone are more cumbersome, and this setting out from the face does not improve their appearance much, if at all. Both kinds are made of soft taffeta lined with satin and trimmed about the front and around the neck with ruffles of lace. Sometimes they are bordered with small flowers, which is a mistaken notion; a few knots of ribbon and the lace are all that is necessary.

Hoods are worn only when going to and from the theatre or other evening entertainment, and when travelling. Some women have taken to them most kindly, and will immediately doff their hats and put on hoods on boarding a railway car, retaining them even when lunching or dining in the restaurant.
