TWENTY-FIVE MORE Will Give Plenty of Work to Men All Winter.

A Telegram That Was No Fake as D. A. Givens Testified—Lively Times at City Hall Nominations on Monday.

In one of the liveliest meetings that ever followed nominations for the federal, or even the provincial elections in the history of the old Limestone City, Hon. William Hartley, the liberal standard-bearer for this riding, the people's popular candidate, a man who has spent sixteen years in parliament, looking after the interests of his country and the people of his home town, won a great triumph. The large gathering was held in the City Hall on Monday afternoon, Kingston's City Hall, historic in many ways, was never before the scene of such activity as it was on this marked occasion, and never before was a public man given such an ovation as that which was tendered to the gentleman who is contesting the coming election, in support of Canada's greatest statesman, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the liberal administration. The heavy artillery of the enemy was out in full force, with the conservative candidate, Dr. A. E. Ross, and a squad of his supporters. Political questions of the day were discussed at some length, but no one can deny the fact that liberalism won the day. It was an occasion that will not soon be forgotten by the vast crowd that was present.

Reference was made to the meeting in Monday's Whig, and a report appeared, giving the proceedings up to three o'clock, but it was after this hour that the meeting commenced to wane, and it was not until five o'clock that the meeting which was presided over by Ald. Givens, adjourned.

Mr. Dewart Continues.

Continuing his address, Mr. Dewart said that the conservatives had found themselves to be up against a wall, during the past few years. They found that they could not safely attack the government on its policy, and had taken up the cry of scandal as a last resort. Dr. Ross had referred to the Quebec bridge disaster. The speaker characterized as a most unfortunate affair, and one for which the government could not be held responsible. The best engineers that could be secured, had been employed on the work, and no blame could be attached to the government. Land scandals in the west was another cry of the opposition, and an effort had been made to make capital out of the Crow's Nest Pass question, and the Japanese immigration question. All these charges had turned out to be untrue. The speaker did not want anyone to get the idea that the liberals are now afraid to face the questions of the day. On the other hand, they were quite ready to face every question. He charged that the conservatives were not alive to the welfare of the country. If they could but realize all that had been accomplished by the liberal government, they would not be con-

Kingston. If the canal were deepened, and the boats sent through, Kingston would become a second Buffalo. Mr. Hartley, he claimed, had not once advised along these lines. The Georgian Bay scheme had been played as a scheme to get votes for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as Kingston's interests had been neglected. And thus, instead of becoming a second Buffalo, Kingston still remained quiet.

W. F. Nickle's Address.

W. F. Nickle, M.L.A., followed Mr. Hartley, and the conservatives in the hall cheered as he arose to speak. The chairman said he was very sorry that there had been any interruptions and expressed the hope that there would be no more. "If any person desired to ask him a question, with courtesy, he would be glad to answer. Continuing, he said that he was amazed at the liberals having to go outside the city for a speaker. He did not think the conservatives would have occasion to import a speaker. As regards certain things Mr. Dewart had said, he did not think it was right that the gentleman should take the liberty of casting reflections or striking down men behind their backs. Mr. Dewart had made statements concerning a Mr. Price which were untrue, and the speaker had a telegram to verify his statement. The telegram was read.

As regards the election, the speaker said that he had no doubt but that the conservatives would do even better in this campaign than they had ever done before.

"How much did that last election cost you?" asked an elector, addressing his remark to Mr. Nickle. "I never knew I had an organ before," remarked Mr. Hartley with a smile.

Continuing, Mr. McIntyre said that the conservatives welcomed Mr. Dewart, but only on the ground that he would tell the truth. It was desired that the speaker should give the guidance. All that was asked was facts and nothing more.

"And that is what you got," said a voice.

The speaker said that in this campaign the government was coming before the people, supporting a record, and asking for a renewal of confidence. The government might be looked upon as an immense business, with a great variety of details. Many were the methods that could be applied, with success, in the management of the business of administration, and all upon the doctor in the case. The government had appointed a royal commission, to see whether things had been carried out right or wrong. This commission had been composed of three liberals. The speaker then read from the reports, which referred to some wastefulness, the charge being made that the government, in some instances had not lived within its means. These misdoings, he said, had been carried on in the big centres, Ottawa and Montreal. And what did the people think of the far west? They know something about it, but not all. The great heritage of the west had been wasted and squandered. Valuable property had been given away to men, and could objection be made to this, he asked. He said that the liberal government, he claimed, had been burning the candle at both ends.

"We played the game the other way," said Mr. Hartley, amidst applause.

Mr. McIntyre said that the criticism of the conservatives had been referred to as peasant business, but it was a matter that could not be classed as such. The expenditure he said had increased 170 per cent., while the population had only increased 29 per cent. This remark brought forth several groans from the audience.

Mr. McIntyre referred to the election in 1891, when Mr. Hartley was defeated by vote, in the contest in which Dr. Smythe took part. Dr. Smythe was unseated, and in the election that followed Mr. Hartley was elected by over 500 majority. Dr. Smythe was very anxious to know why there had been such a turn-over in so short a time, and the courts were asked the same question.

At this juncture, Mr. McIntyre was again interrupted with a few more groans, whereupon he stated that he would not be put down. He had spoken on the City Hall platform on several occasions, and did not intend to be put down now.

Called For Order.

The chairman said he would have to have two or three in the audience put out of the hall, if they refused to keep order. Quiet was once more restored, and Mr. McIntyre proceeded. At the recent meeting in the opera house, he said, Mr. Hartley had made the statement that the liberals had held the people of Kingston by the neck for seventeen years. He said that the men of Kingston were free men, and they should not take this remark from anyone.

This last remark of Mr. McIntyre's was met with a storm of hisses, but he continued.

He said that the electors should not be taunted by this "held by the neck" story.

As regards wrong-doing on the part of the government, the speaker said that Mr. Hartley was not the man to put such conduct down. He claimed that Mr. Hartley had not once uttered or raised his hand in protest to any such thing as this. Mr. Hartley had not accomplished anything in the provincial house.

The question of transportation was one that touched Kingston very closely, also the question of waterways. These two great questions of the conservatives had ever kept before their eyes, and had made it their policy. The deepening of the canal was necessary, so that the great freighters could carry larger cargoes of grain to occasion, he said, that Donald McIntyre had characterized his telegram as a "fake."

"I would like Mr. Hartley to say what I said on that occasion," said Mr. McIntyre.

"How can I tell that, when I was in Montreal, and sent the telegram from there?" replied Mr. Hartley amidst deafening applause.

"When I came back to Kingston and met a number of my friends, I was told that the McIntyre had referred to my telegram as a 'fake,'" added Mr. Hartley.

"It is all a falsehood," declared Mr. McIntyre.

Mr. Hartley called upon the chairman to see if the telegram he now presented was O.K., and Mr. Givens replied in the affirmative.

"This contract for twenty-five engines means bread and butter for some 2,500 people for the next three or four months," said Mr. Hartley. "Is all this the work of a 'faker'?" If it is, it must be a new word in the English language, and if that is the case, I will try and 'fake' you all I can in this way." (Laughter and applause.)

"If you think Dr. Ross will do more to promote the interests of Canada and the people of Kingston," said Mr. Hartley, in his closing remarks, "then send him there by all means. It is not for the love of the work that I would go back, but if you so desire, I am satisfied to return and work for your interests." (Loud applause.)

Before his seat, Mr. Hartley announced that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had been elected by acclamation in Quebec, and this announcement brought about cheering. More cheers were added when it was stated that Mr. Lanctot, liberal candidate at Rimouski, had also been elected by acclamation.

"W. F. Macleay, the crank of the Tory line, was also elected by acclamation," added Mr. Hartley, and this gave the Tories in the audience a chance to yell.

"This gives us a sheet-off of two to one," said Mr. Hartley, and again the crowd cheered. Mr. Hartley also stated that the conservative candidate had been nominated in Prescott county.

There was no further speeches after Mr. Hartley's closing remarks, and the meeting was brought to a close with hearty cheers for the King, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. William Hartley. The conservatives present were very much with their cheeks, not one who held his head at closing.

ABSOLUTELY FALSE.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—G. W. Dawson, inspector of penitentiaries, was shown, by the Whig correspondent, a Standard which stated that the Warden of the penitentiary there was to be replaced. Mr. Dawson, who has just returned from a visit to St. Vincent de Paul, where he was at the penitentiary election, said that there was absolutely no truth in the Standard's statement, that the question of replacing Dr. Platt had not even been considered, and that there had been no suggestion of a department any suggestion that he should be replaced. Mr. Dawson's denial of the report was unequivocal in the extreme.

WAR AVERTED

In a Decidedly Dramatic Manner.

RUSSIA RESPONSIBLE

BY TAKING A VERY DECISIVE ACTION.

She Threatened to Invade Bulgaria—Great Britain Would Not Stand For Any Pressure on the Turkish Government.

London, Oct. 20.—The dramatic manner in which war was averted at the last moment when the situation seemed hopeless has now become known in diplomatic circles. Bulgaria had both the desire and purpose to enforce a conflict if possible, and Turkey had regretfully to make preparations to meet the crisis. The general representation of the powers in favor of peace had little effect at Sofia until Russia finally took decisive action. She notified Bulgaria that unless she instantly modified her attitude Russia troops would be sent towards Turkey, which would be met by Rumania's consent through that country to invade Bulgaria from the north. That saved the situation. Ferdinand's government had no choice but to notify Turkey of her desire for peace and to that end would yield her wishes on the railway question and would negotiate conciliatingly on other matters. On receipt of this communication on Saturday Turkey promptly countermanded her orders for mobilization. Austria has also now taken a more friendly attitude towards Turkey and has notified the latter she prefers to negotiate with her direct on questions regarding Bosnia and Herzegovina. Turkey sympathies with this suggestion and will inform the powers of her desire that if a conference be held at all, which she no longer asks, it shall confine itself to Bulgaria's action and the question of compensation for that action. The discussion of the conference problem continues between the powers, but the desire to call one is diminishing, one more than one important question.

Great Britain's Attitude.

London, Oct. 20.—The following may be regarded as a semi-official statement regarding Great Britain's attitude in the event of a conference on the near eastern question: Great Britain is determined to consent to nothing endangering the constitution or integrity of Turkey. The question of the Dardanelles will not be raised, it having, with Russia's consent, been adjourned sine die. Great Britain certainly would not agree to any proposal not meeting with Turkey's approval, and would resist any pressure on the Ottoman government. The future of Crete will not form any part of the programme of the conference. It will be discussed by the four protecting powers, but Great Britain will not consent to the proposal not approved by Turkey.

Austria Protests.

Vienna, Oct. 20.—Austria has protested to the Serbian government against the anti-Austrian demonstration of Sunday, which was the most violent that have yet occurred, and has demanded that the sufferers be compensated. It is stated that but for the delicacy of the situation Austria would have adopted stronger measures.

Altogther More Hopeful.

Constantinople, Oct. 20.—It is announced that the government is now willing to negotiate with Austria regarding Bosnia and Herzegovina, leaving the question of Bulgaria, to a conference, if a conference meets. The situation is altogether more hopeful to-day as regards foreign relations, but as if to offset the improvement in this direction, domestic troubles have sprung up.

REASON GIVEN.

An acclamation for Sir Wilfrid in Quebec East would have seriously interfered with his plans. It would have invalidated his candidature in Ottawa unless the law which provides that no man who is already a member of parliament can be a candidate for another seat. This may explain why a candidate was brought forward at the last minute.

Teas grown at high altitudes on the mountain slopes of Ceylon, where the growth is slower and cultivation more careful than in the warm, humid climate of the valleys, are used in "Salada" Tea. High-grown tea, like "Salada" is not only of finer quality, but contains more of the essential oil in the leaf than valley-grown tea. This is easily proven by comparing a drawing of "Salada" Tea with any other.
