

Anty Drudge Discovers Why George Has No Appetite.

Anty Drudge—"What! eating dinner in this steamy, smelly kitchen? I should think it would take your appetite away."

Mrs. Slow—"I have noticed that George doesn't eat much on washdays."

Anty Drudge—"How can he! Why don't you use Fels-Naptha? Boiling water isn't necessary; and you'll be through your wash plenty of time to have dinner in the dining-room. Or if you prefer the kitchen, there will be no steam or bad smells."

Talk about energy!

A half cake of Fels-Naptha soap can display more energy in getting rid of dirt in half an hour than an able-bodied woman can in half a day.

But there's this difference: Much of the woman's energy is wasted.

When she rubs clothes hard on a washboard she wears out the clothes in trying to rub out the dirt.

Fels-Naptha concentrates its energy on the dirt—dissolves it into tiny particles that are easily rinsed away—without harming the most delicate fabric.

And it does this in cool or lukewarm water, without hot water or boiling, summer or winter.

Do you prefer to supply the dirt-removing energy yourself or to use that stored up in a cake of Fels-Naptha?

If you choose the easier and better way, follow directions on the red and green wrapper.

THEY GOT LIQUOR AND WERE FINED FOR THEIR OFFENDING.

Ministers of the Town at the Police Court—The Experiences of Capt. E. B. Smith—The First Navigator to Move Out.

Pictou, Oct. 29.—There was unusual activity in police court matters on Wednesday afternoon, when Magistrate Currie heard three cases of infringement against the liquor license act. A well-known milk dealer was the first penitent offender, who, after having been listed, was found under the influence of liquor. He admitted the offence, and examined under a new clause of the act compelling the prisoner to tell from where he obtained the intoxicants, he said he had been given it by Kease, the wine clerk at Hotel Quinte, over the bar. He was fined $10 and $2.75 costs for being intoxicated.

Edward Barnett was the third offender. His story as to how he got it was a queer one. He met a stranger on Hepburn's wharf; did not see him come from anywhere or depart any place, and this genial good fellow offered him a drink from a bottle of Scotch. "Unusual goodfellowship to offer expensive Scotch," commented Mr. Currie. Barnett had a friend in court who paid his $12.75 fine, so he was saved imprisonment. "I don't know of a friend that I have in the world," Edward Jordan, a well-known character of the town told the court. He admitted having liquor in his possession since being listed, in fact, "I have to have my nip of rye every day," he asserted. But he was indefinite as to where it came from. It had been put in his hip pocket without him seeing who gave him the flask. He was sent to jail for a month because he could not pay his $12.75 fine forthwith.

Inspector Sexsmith told the Whig that he would at once institute proceedings against the Hotel Quinte for serving liquor to a "listed" individual.

Another case, against Abe Hare comes up for hearing next Tuesday. At the police court trial all the ministers of the town churches were present.

Not in his fifty-two seasons on the St. Lawrence river has Captain E. B. Smith experienced anything like the last trip of the steamer Alexandria. The Alexandria arrived in port from Montreal, on Wednesday, four days overdue. This was because of the great bush fires of the Ottawa and northern Quebec, the smoke from which hung like a great cloud over the river. Hundreds of vessels were stalled at Lachine and Soulanges canals, where the Alexandria had to wait from Wednesday of last week, until Sunday when she was able to "feel" her way in the smoke and fog down to Montreal. Then the rain came and put a damper on the smoke, and the trip was not so long delayed. Captain Smith, who has been on the river over half a century, says he never saw anything like the great clouds of smoke that hindered navigation.

A noteworthy incident in connection with the stalling of the many boats at the Soulanges canal, was with the propeller Glenora. Her pilot, Captain Collins, who is aged eighty years was the first to venture from his moorings at the canal down the river to Montreal. When he cleared, several boats followed in his wake.

The Daughters of the Empire are becoming most energetic in their desire to establish a hospital in Pictou. They want the county council to grant the use of one wing of the House of Refuge, until the funds of the society will allow the building of a separate building. The county fathers now have the matter under their consideration. A "tag" day will be held the last Saturday in November. The theatrical will also give over their show for one night to the daughters.

Giving Candid Advice. Montreal Star. The duty of the opposition from today forward is to regain public confidence, by deserving it. The voting has pruned away some of its worst "dead wood," and there is more that ought to go; but what the opposition can best do for the present is to push to the front its better elements and to launch with optimistic courage progressive policies. It has received some excellent new timber, and the government has brought back some good material as well. If these men and influences are in both cases utilized to the utmost, and are not permitted to be shouldered aside by the aggressive greed of forces which hitherto have had too much to say in the guidance of both parties, the country will have a better choice set before it when the general elections are called again.

THE CAMPAIGN.

would mean wreck and ruin sure. One should look at the prospects and then think of the responsibility which rested upon the Christian people.

Rev. Mr. Allen pictured, in a very interesting way, the great resources of New Ontario. It was only quite recently that anything was known of the vast resources of this part of the country. From an agricultural standpoint alone this country was looked upon to equal the best in the world. It would also be the chief manufacturing and industrial centre of the country, and at no distant day the population would be very large. And then there would be three trans-continental railways, which would make way for the best markets in the country. This new country, the speaker claimed, was the Cinderella of Canada, which gave every evidence of being as fair as any princess. The whole question was one that called for careful consideration.

The growth of the population should be considered. It was often said that Canada was one hundred years behind the United States. "Canada of to-day should not be compared with the United States of to-day," added the speaker, "but with the United States of one hundred years ago, and with that comparison you can judge what the country is likely to be at the close of the present century."

The nineteenth century had been one of growth for the states, while it had not been one of progress for Canada. In that century, was estimated that no less than about 30,000 or 40,000 Canadians had fought on the other side in the civil war. But in the period which followed, the situation was different, as Canada had increased in population, one and a half times greater than the United States. We had yet to plan a greater work than had ever yet been placed before the nation, and the question was this, "Are we equal for it?" We were now standing at the source of what would be a mighty river. Had we the power necessary? The speaker prayed that God might teach us how to work, and work together.

Rev. W. T. Gunn. Rev. W. T. Gunn also dwelt upon the great resources of the country, and the need for active work. He was glad, he said, that the election was over, for now each one would have a sane estimate of each others possibilities. The great possibilities of this country, with its increase in population, should be considered. The work could be met, and all that it required was co-operation.

As regards the immigrants coming into the country, it was true that some of them were not of the best type of citizen, but it was not right that the country should keep them out. A great many of this class had left these parts, for the west, and the speaker hoped that they would do better there. Regarding the increase in population, if this became so great, the work could be divided among the different churches.

Rev. Mr. Ebina, missionary from Japan, who addressed students at Queen's College, and who arrived at the meeting just before the close, was introduced to the chairman, by Rev. J. Charles Villiers, and delivered a short address. Rev. Mr. Ebina speaks the English language fairly well, and had some interesting things to say. In his opening remarks, he said he was glad to meet such an audience, and wished to extend his sincere thanks to the people in this country, for the kindness they had shown towards his countrymen. The fact that missionaries were sent out to Japan, and schools were organized for the education of the children, was very much appreciated by his fellow-countrymen.

This was the first time the speaker had been out in this country, and since he landed at Seattle he had been preaching to his countrymen. He expressed the hope that the men engaged in this new movement, would succeed in the work of evangelizing the whole world. He desired not only to see the clergy take up the world, but also the business men.

After the addresses had been concluded, Bishop Mills stated that the audience had been made acquainted with all the facts concerning the wealth of the country, and all that was now left to consider, was the question of responsibility. The question was one which he hoped would engage the minds of the people all the time, during the series of meetings to be held, so that afterwards, the people could rise and meet these responsibilities, so that the gospel might be spread to this new country. The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction, at ten o'clock.

A Call To Young Men. Toronto Star. Certain changes in the personnel of the cabinet have been expected for some time. It is generally believed that Mackenzie King will have a portfolio, and the liberal leaders cannot do better than call to their aid men who are young not only in years but in ideas, and will keep liberalism in touch with the progressive spirit of the age and of the country. The mandate given by the country is a mandate for reform and progress.

SAM LOYDS PUZZLE

Here is an elementary study in the theory of chances which, despite of its apparent simplicity, is calculated to develop an endless variety of views. It appears that two speedy messenger boys bearing urgent despatches, met in the park, and while recovering their breath indulged in a few throws of messenger boy's craps. The play turns entirely upon the possibility or probability in throwing an ace in two throws of a single die. That is all there is to it. Supposing you are offered a prize if you can get an ace in two throws, what are the odds against your winning it? This may be looked upon as the most elementary problem in the theory of probabilities that can be suggested. Answer Saturday.
