WONDERFUL DRESS OF WONDERFUL MEN

Count Tolstoy's Peasant Costume.

G.B. Shaw Affects Green Dress and Shaggy Coat.

As Joseph Miller Wears His White Shirt and Boots.

How the Kaiser Shows His Determined Aim.

If some effort or work of yours should, all of a sudden, make good, as Byron's "Don Juan" woke him up to find himself famous—if the world, tomorrow morning, should discover what you have known all your life, that you are a real, all-wool, yarn-wide genius, do you think you could resist the full temptation to adorn your neck with a flowing poet tie, as Byron did; or to dash into green clothes, as Shaw does; or to dive into some one or more of the innumerable eccentricities which genius manifests in its attire?

There's our great and good friend, the Kaiser, many others believe him a near-genius. But nature seems to use her hallmark on both brands, whether the specimens be the late George Francis Train, with his litter and the British parliamentarian, who would hesitate between his headgear and the Magna Charta, if he were forced to choose between them.

Have you ever seen a photograph or any other likeness, for that matter, of Kaiser Wilhelm, which failed to hide to some extent his left arm? Can you recall any other man of prominence who still clings to the antiquated Spanish cloak, or uses a muff in which resort to his hand? That defective arm is the Kaiser's sensitive point, and has been all his life, the passion for its concealment, with whatever subterfuge of dress his ingenuity can command, has become one of the ruling passions of the Kaiser's existence. Any one who has the courage to brave the ban of cholera, which Russia's inhuman cruelty to her people has put upon that anguished land, can study at close range the eccentricity of Russia's most famous subject, Count Leo Tolstoy; the noble whose resources are ample for the most extreme flights of fashion, yet whose consistent genius impels him to wear habitually the smock of the poorest peasant.

There are very few geniuses, rich or poor, who are willing to put their philosophies to the test of miserable garb. Least of all, that human riddle, Bernard Shaw, whose socialism in words is to be measured by the acre. When he was poor—and he was very poor—Shaw was notorious as having the most disreputable hat in England. Now that he is rich, he wears the finest he can find, a specialty that would link him to the base level of mediocrity were it not for the circumstance that he insists on wearing green clothes of a peculiar rough texture and not too well made.

It is also announced that Miss Fritz Scheff will go to Europe for a season during the summer. Sir Charles Wyndham produced lately in London Roy Harrison's social extravaganza, "Bellamy the Magnificent," which he and his company have had in rehearsal for the past month. Sir Charles Wyndham, Robert Lovaine and Paul Arthur headed a strong company. William Winter has returned to New York, and is once more occupying the dramatic editor's chair of the Tribune. He was greeted with a great deal of feeling by his brother dramatic critics, and showed no trace of his long siege of illness during the summer, which was caused by a railroad accident.

When James T. Powers next appears as a musical comedy star it will be in "Havana," now running at the Gaiety Theatre, London. The book of "Havana" is by George Grossmith and Graham Hill. The lyrics are by Adrian Ross and the score by Leslie Stuart. The three acts are laid in and about Havana.

DOINGS IN STAGELAND

LULU GLASER TO GO TO GERMANY.

Lulu Glaser, now appearing in New York in "Mlle. Mischief," in which she appears to have made a hit, will in the late spring go to Germany, there to sing in the role which she is making familiar.

There are several other plays in the pipeline. "The Girl of the Golden West" will be produced in New York next May. Charles Frohman has received the complete play "Israel," by Henri Bernstein, author of "The Thief." The play will be produced in Paris by Madame Rejane. Mr. Frohman will make the American production of the play.

A strange condition of affairs exists in New York this week, the beginning of the season, and there are three theatres closed up, namely, Hackett's, Wallack's and the Majestic. This has not happened before in many years. They will all re-open in the course of two weeks.

J. S. STEWART, the newly appointed second assistant U.S. postmaster general, has been promoted to the position of chief clerk of the post office.

DOGS KILLED PANTHERS.

An unusual sight was witnessed in the course of some native sports. Specially trained dogs of his Highness the Thakur Sahab were let loose on two full grown panthers. About 8,000 people assembled on the maidan to see the event. The arrival of his highness with the Maharani Sahaba was the signal to commence the fight. When the cages were opened the panthers slowly crept out, but seeing themselves hemmed in by such a large mass of people they slunk back again and lay apparently watching for a chance to pounce upon the nearest bystanders.

Too Long To Wait.

San Francisco Argonaut. A native sportsman tried to sell a vacuum bottle to a Missourian. "It will keep anything hot or cold seventy-two hours," he explained. "Don't want it, don't want it at all." He replied the Missourian. "If I have anything worth waiting for, I don't want to keep it seventy-two hours."

A GREAT MARINE FEAT

Done on the Kingston Plan of Air Compression. The cruiser Gladiator, sunk in collision with the American liner S. Paul off Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, during a snowstorm in April last, has been towed into Portsmouth Harbor and docked. The Liverpool Salvage Company has thus brought to a conclusion one of the greatest feats in the history of shipping.

NIPPING A CAREER.

Sir W. S. Gilbert Wanted to Go on the Stage. Youth's Companion. At the early age of fifteen, according to the author of a recent biography of Sir W. S. Gilbert, the future dramatist showed his theatrical bias, to his own undoing.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

PE-RU-NA PROMPTLY RELIEVES A Case of Dreadful Suffering Which Had Continued For Months.

An Account of a Remarkable Recovery Given by Mr. Alfred Wood, Teacher of a Private School at Launceston, Tasmania.

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED WOOD.

Mr. Alfred Wood, who has a private school at 22 Frederick street, Launceston, Tasmania (Australia), has been a teacher for 27 years under the Educational Department of Tasmania. He writes, concerning his wife's case, as follows:

"My wife was suffering for months from gastro-enteritis, and was given up by her medical attendant. By good fortune I was induced to try Peruna in her case, and I can truthfully state that from the first dose her dreadful suffering ceased; and after taking five bottles she is permanently cured."

HOW does Peruna make such extraordinary cures as above recited? By simply arousing the forces of Nature to throw off the diseased action. Peruna contains no magic and does not operate in any mysterious way, but it does help Nature to combat disease, and thus many times comes to the rescue of the patient in some important crisis.

There is always a time in the course of any disease when a little help goes a great way. Just as the scales are beginning to descend, when one ounce more would determine the fate of the patient, a little lift will turn the scales in favor of the patient. Peruna is a handy medicine to have in the household. It helps many diseases by imparting a natural vigor to the whole system. As a tonic or cathartic remedy, its reputation is well established all over the world.

The voyage was a slow one, and it was dark before the Gladiator got into port. Gradually settling down, the Gladiator was two feet lower in the water when she entered Portsmouth than when she left Yarmouth. The tide was so low that the vessel took the mud. On the next tide the Gladiator was hauled into the basin alongside the dock in which she was built.
