THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide is in Giving it a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair wigs may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate dandruff and stop falling hair? No, they do not, but Herpicide does because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are daily proving that Newbro's Herpicide stands the "test of use." It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from oil or grease. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c. and $1. G. W. Mahood, special agent.

Avoid "Sure Things"

The recent financial panic brought to light many good illustrations of the possibility of being ruined by a "sure thing." Scores of people lost their money on what they were led to believe were perfectly sound investments that were "sure to win."

There are vast multitudes of people living in poverty, many of them homeless and even without the ordinary necessities of life, just because they could not resist the temptation to gamble, to risk enough to make them comfortable in some get-rich-quick scheme, which they were told was a "sure thing."

Put your savings into Kingston real estate. It is no gamble. It is a legitimate, profitable investment.

CAN'T SETTLE

Labor Disputes By Cast Iron Rules.

PROF. SHORTT SPEAKS

BEFORE QUEEN'S ALUMNI CONFERENCE.

He Tells How Capital and Labor Are Brought Together—The Parties Must Be Studied—"Splitting the Difference" is Not the Mode of Settlement.

In old Convocation Hall, last evening, in connection with Queen's University Alumni Conference, Prof. Adam Shortt gave an insight into the present day methods in Canada of settling disputes between labor and capital. His experiences as arbitrator in a number of very large and very grave labor disputes during the past two years enabled him to speak with authority on the subject. Prof. Shortt emphasized the fact that he had found that an adjustment of these disputes was brought about by a careful study of the parties at issue. Human nature was the central problem, for labor disputes were not settled by a set of general principles or by "splitting the difference."

A large audience greeted the distinguished civil service commissioner of the Canadian government, to listen to his interesting address. Rev. James Wallace, M.A., presided, and introduced the lecturer of the evening. He stated that the country was safe so long as men of the calibre of Prof. Shortt were appointed to public office. (Applause.) It seemed strange to be called on to introduce to a Queen's audience the former professor of political economy. Mr. Wallace said that he voiced the sentiments of all in saying that whatever Prof. Shortt was doing now or would do or be in the future, he would ever be known as "Prof. Shortt, of Queen's University." (Applause.)

Prof. Shortt was greeted with enthusiasm by alumni and students, when he arose to give his address. He spoke without manuscript or notes, addressing himself directly to his audience which followed him closely throughout.

Prof. Shortt spoke first of disputes between labor and capital being perennial. No future development is likely to reduce the necessity of adjusting troubles between these two great classes. These disputes are conditions of every day life.

Speaking of the question of "a living wage," Prof. Shortt said that even laborers who got the highest wages were discontented. In a Nova Scotia labor dispute, he found that some coal miners were getting more money than he was as professor in Queen's University, and yet they were not satisfied. The capitalist was also discontented. All this was due to the increasing production of wealth. The trouble of the age is not that we haven't enough wealth. There is abundance of wealth, but we don't make decent use of it.

How are the rival interests to be adjusted? Canada has an admirable method provided by the Lemieux act. This act, of course, won't work on the compulsory side, but it is the best measure for labor disputes that exists to-day. The Lemieux act doesn't compel parties to go ahead and settle if they are at loggerheads. It requires the parties to first come together and discuss their grievances. If they can't come to an agreement, they are free to go ahead with strike or lockout.

Labor disputes, said Prof. Shortt, cannot be settled on general principles. He had found that some arbitrations had come to grief because an effort was made to settle them on cast iron principles, instead of studying the individuals. His estimates of the representatives of capital and labor had steadily gone up. When he came to find out the kind of one-sided views and facts upon which labor had been nourished and their prejudices fed, he was amazed to find how reasonable these people could be at the end. Prof. Shortt said he was surprised at their ignorance of each other's position. They could, however, be brought around to take a sympathetic view of each other's position. He found them not opposed to, but suspicious of the other party. It was here that the value of the arbitration board came in. He found the parties willing to accept from him what they wouldn't accept from each other.

There was very little difficulty about setting the facts, Prof. Shortt said. He found that the conflict was sharpest between union and union, and between capital and capital. The settlement quickly came down to a question of adjustment. In these disputes, he laid down the principle that labor should run its own business and capital should run its own. He considered the "closed shop" as objectionable. A recognition of the union is necessary.

Regarding national or international features of unionism, Prof. Shortt declared that the international representative was most reasonable every time. He didn't find him stirring up strife, but trying to prevent it.

central problem of strike settlement, Prof. Shortt said. Then again, it was easy enough to hand out a verdict, as a judge does, but in a labour arbitration it was different. The parties had to stand by the judge's decision. But they hadn't to obey the decision of the arbitrator. The big difficulties come after the conclusion. He took the parties separately, and found out what each would be willing to accept. Though his own verdict was practically decided upon, he didn't allow it to become known. An arbitrator in a labor dispute had to get something to satisfy both parties. It was not a case of splitting the difference. Sometimes he had insisted upon nineteen-twentieths in favor of the companies, while at other times that ratio was in favor of the labor men. Prof. Shortt said he had found that the people generally accept the most reasonable settlement. In the recent C. P. R. strike the public feeling was on the side of the railway company, because it had agreed to a settlement suggested. When the labor party went out in spite of that, it lost public sympathy. The labor people in that strike had found only two or three papers in all Canada had at all sided with them.

NEEDS A YEAR'S REST

And Resigns As Superintendent of Waterworks.

THOMAS HEWITT.

The resignation of Thomas Hewitt as superintendent of the water works, was handed to the city clerk ten days ago, but as the city council had no quorum on its last regular meeting night, it was not formally received. Mr. Hewitt wishes to be relieved at the end of the year. He has not been in very good health for some time, and seeks a year's rest. Last winter he had three months' leave of absence, and took a trip to his old home in England. Instead of asking for another period of leave, he has decided to resign, and give the council a chance to fill his position before the 1st of January. Whether the water works' committee will accept the resignation is a question. Mr. Hewitt is one of the city's most valued public servants and a water works superintendent of note. He has served the city for twenty-one years.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH

Sends For Dr. Hodgetts to Explain the Law.

The board of health had a meeting yesterday afternoon to discuss the contagious disease situation. One of the cases reported has turned out to be something else. In fact it is about better of whatever illness it had. The question of vaccination and quarantine was discussed informally. The board members were incensed over the action of the city council in not enforcing compulsory vaccination and if it is found that the action of the council can be over-ruled, it will be done. The mayor requested a telegram to the provincial secretary at Toronto and ask him to send down Dr. Hodgetts, provincial health inspector, to discuss the vaccination act with the local board, so that the latter may clearly understand its powers. Ald. Anagnostis intimated before the meeting that if he had known that the law provided that persons who were deemed not in a proper state of health by their physician need not be vaccinated, he might have voted differently on Tuesday evening. He said that point should have been made clear to the council. This regulation is an old one and has been taken advantage of before.

To-day, Drs. Williamson and Richardson, appointed by the board of health, to inspect vaccination in the schools, beginning at Victoria. Any who desired vaccination presented themselves. The school vaccination is wholly optional, there being no compulsion.

FORMER RESIDENT DEAD.

Death of Robert Bradley in Bermuda.

Word was received in the city, of the death at Newstead, Pagan West, Bermuda, of Robert Bradley, a former Kingstonian, and brother of Mrs. Frank Bryant, 170 Queen street. Deceased, who was well up in years, had been in comparatively good health up to a short time ago, and particularly sad was the fact that just when he was attacked with the fatal illness, Mr. Bradley was about to leave on a visit to Canada.

Deceased left Kingston quite a few years ago, and the news of his death will be received with sincere regret.

Deceased was a life-long Mason, and was the owner of a large summer resort at Newstead, Thomas Bradley, of Dundas, Ont., is a brother of deceased.

THE HALLS OF QUEEN'S

VACCINATION IS A TOPIC OF DISCUSSION.

The Students Don't Like Compulsion—The Engineering Society Meeting—Other Medical and Science News.

Invitations have been received by the different years of medicine, from Mr. Burrows, proprietor of the Bijou theatre, to enjoy the programme at his theatre on the evening of parade night. The students are pleased to know that Mr. Burrows entertains no ill-feelings toward the student body. No doubt many will be pleased to accept the invitation, as they intend to enjoy themselves.

Vaccination is one of the main topics in college halls these last few days. By simply pushing against the left arm of the one next to you, one soon learns whether he has been vaccinated or not.

R. J. Ellis, the genial ex-president of '09, is again hard at work. Mr. Ellis spent the summer in a western hunting camp. When his time was not occupied by his professional duties, "Dick" was stumping for the conservative party in his neighborhood. No doubt R. J.'s eloquence did much toward electing the member for that constituency.

The final arrangements have been made for the medical dance on November 20th. The musical committee has engaged Merry's orchestra, of Ogdensburg, N.Y. The refreshment committee has secured the services of William Harris, of Kingston. The tickets for the dance are now on sale.

Great preparations are being made by the different faculties for the annual parade to be held on Saturday evening of this week, and undoubtedly many varieties of amusing costumes will be displayed. The procession headed by the science men, will start from the university grounds at 7.30 o'clock. The students hope that the weather man will be good till Sunday, as it is not a pleasant thing to be splashing through muddy streets.

H. R. Thompson, of the junior year, left on Tuesday for Morristown, N. Y., for the purpose of exercising his franchise in the presidential election.

The Mandolin and Guitar Club under the leadership of Mr. Walker of the Grand Opera House orchestra is getting in good shape. Many of the old players have turned out, and some good new players have joined from the freshman years. This year again the club lacks guitar players. Any one wishing to join the club will be welcomed at practice in Convocation Hall, at 5 p.m., Mondays and Wednesdays.

M. R. Bow, B.A., assistant manager of the Queen's Journal, has just returned from his vacation in the West. He informs that Mac, Gibson, who has been teaching out there, expects to be back with his class about the middle of the month.

L. F. Longley, of year '10 medicine, has been appointed to the position of medical representative on the staff of the Queen's University Journal.

At Science Hall.

The annual meeting of the Engineering Society, to be held Friday afternoon, proved to be a lively one. Notice of motion has been given that two clauses of the constitution will be changed. It will be moved that hereafter three or more nominations will be made for the office of president, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared president, and the candidate receiving the second highest shall be declared first vice-president, also that a sufficient number of candidates shall be nominated so that no officer (unless he be honorary president), shall be elected by acclamation. The above motion is arousing considerable interest among the students and several members have expressed their intention of speaking for and against it.

The question of compulsory vaccination is being frequently discussed about the college hall. The majority, however, are opposed to it.

A meeting of the committee appointed to arrange a date for the final year "At Home" met, Wednesday afternoon and decided on December 4th.

Isn't it queer how long some people can talk about nothing?
