Twenty Years Ago

Twenty years ago all well-dressed men had their shoes made to measure by the local shoe maker, or a good city shoe maker. How many do so now? Not ready-to-wear for the same or less money. Twenty years ago every well-dressed man had his clothes made by the custom tailor. Today thousands of well-dressed men wear nothing but ready-to-service clothes, because they are more stylish than the custom-made garments. They fit as well or better, and cost from $5.00 to $15.00 less per garment.

There is no doubt whatever that the wholesale tailor is crowding out the custom tailor just as the wholesale shoe-maker is crowding out the custom shoe-maker. Within the last few years hundreds of custom tailors have gone out of business. Some of them have taken positions in wholesale shops and others have gone into the ready-to-wear business. When you came to think over how easy it is to be otherwise, wholesale tailors do such an enormous business that they can afford to pay a princely salary to designers. These expert designers get salaries as high as $5,000 a year.

How many custom tailors could fill this position? You may say the man who buys the clothes must help to pay this big salary, but when you remember that one of these big wholesale houses sells nearly a thousand suits and overcoats a year you will see that the cost of all the style on each of these suits or overcoats is only ten cents. It is the biggest ten cents worth on the market.

A REAL MACHINE THE END OF A FOUR-YEAR-OLD FIGHT.

Padded Election Lists, Wide-open Saloons, and Wholesale Persuasion Some of the Means By Which Manitoba Verdict Was Obtained. Toronto Globe. Winnipeg, Oct. 28.—The result of the election seems to have fairly well pleased nearly everyone in this part of the country, and in that respect the conservative is right. The liberals of Manitoba are naturally disappointed at having lost five seats, but they find consolation in perusing the returns from other parts of the dominion. The conservatives are correspondingly elated. Their success within the province, and they pretend to believe that the contest in the rest of Canada was unimportant in comparison.

The fight which has just closed was begun just four years ago, so far as Manitoba is concerned. The conservatives of that time, under the leadership of Mr. Roblin and Mr. Rogers, made a great howl over the loss of seven seats, and blamed it all on the "thin red line." By this they implied that the revision by dominion officials was the provincial voters' lists was fraudulent, and that the failure to use the provincial lists militated heavily against the prospects of the conservative candidates. The protests which were then raised were based on very flimsy material, but Messrs. Roblin and Rogers are not shy about raising a great "to-do" about little or nothing. They took on an injured air and waited. When they obtained another chance of fixing the lists they were revenging themselves. They made up sets of names which discriminated in the most glaring fashion against the liberals, and they made no pretence that these represented the true electorate of the province. This discrimination was perpetrated in the original clauses in the Aylesworth bill, which it was ordered that the lists should be passed upon by dominion officials of the House of Commons, and by which it passed upon by dominion officials before being used for federal elections. Another honest man immediately raised by the Roblin-Rogers combination. If the revision by dominion officials were permitted, all the fine mechanical work on the part of Manitoba provincial officials would have been wasted. They protested most effusively that the rights of the people to the control of their own lists were being taken away, and they insisted that the lists which had been prepared under their authority were fair and just. A good deal of time was frittered away in the House of Commons while the subject was being discussed, and the Rogers ready-made interview was a heavy feature in the opposition press. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the members of the dominion government who were in charge of the revision were permitted, all the fine mechanical work on the part of Manitoba provincial officials would have been wasted.

The provincial government here was given control of the lists and election, in the language of the street, it "didn't do a thing" to them. The registration and "revision" took place early in the summer of this year, and the lists were fixed up in a fashion which made it impossible for a liberal candidate except under most extraordinary circumstances. The bosses of the provincial machine went to the extreme limits in padding the franchise rolls, and thousands of bogus names were placed there. Every possible solution were employed in the process, and desperate means were taken to fix up a list which would "beat the grits." The effort was successful, as the election on Monday showed. The only conservative candidates in the province were Hon. T. Mayne Daly in Brandon and Hon. A. C. LaRiviere in Provencher. Both of these men with a political past which told against them, and on the race tracks they would be described as "has-beens." The former had the temerity to oppose Hon. Clifford Sifton, and with the use of the stuffed lists he was almost successful. Mr. LaRiviere ran in his old stamping ground, but even the doctored franchise rolls failed to carry him. The whole conduct of the conservative campaign in Manitoba had as its motive the desire for revenge upon a liberal party which had been unkind enough in previous elections to secure an extension of the franchise to voters. A tory out of office has been likened to a she-bear deprived of her cubs, when it is applied to a tory in office looking for revenge. The Roblin-Rogers clique stops at nothing to achieve its ends, and the manipulation of elections is one of its strong cards.

It surprised many people to know that most of the saloons and hotel bars in Winnipeg were wide open on election day, and that a harvest was being reaped in the dispensation of refreshments on behalf of the party of purity. The provincial machine here would scorn to hide behind a device so weak as "choice tomatoes." To distribute liquor openly suited its purpose better, and it was easier to reach a large number of voters, especially in the foreign settlements, in that way. The masters of the province believed that they could defy public opinion on election day. They had control of the administration of justice (?) and also of the license department, and they used this control for all it was worth. The fact that the conservative candidate in Winnipeg was closely associated with license-holders through his position as chief license commissioner of the province did not lessen the effectiveness of the machine's operations so far as this city was concerned.

The liberals do not intend to lie down before such tactics. They know the class of men with whom they have to deal, and they also realize that they have a big undertaking in the way of regaining corruption and crime from the politics of the province. But that does not make them afraid. They will follow up the cases of bribery, intimidation, persuasion and general corruption which have already been noted in connection with the recent contest, and they will make a determined effort to punish the rascality which characterized the operation of the Roblin-Rogers machine.

THE PARAGRAPH PULPIT

Unitarian. REV. C. W. CASSON. The Abolition of Mediation. Even the church has proclaimed the doctrine of mediation between God and man. For centuries it has been taught that man could approach a king. Between the common man and the Infinite God were Christ and the church and the priesthood, through whom he must approach deity. A new thought forces itself upon us. Why do we go to God direct? Why not approach Him as a child approaches a father, without mediation of any kind? Why not? It is the teaching of the Unitarian church that a man may and that a man should thus come near to the Father. Let nothing come between you and God.

Many of the boys are engaged in trapping this fall, encouraged by the prevailing high prices of skins, but so far the bear and cub reported by the Keelvierville correspondent have not been captured.
