In The Grand Opera House-"The Fair Go-Ed" is Something New in the Way of a Play Set to Music.

Every seat was occupied at the Grand Opera House on Thursday evening to witness the performance of "The Fair Co-Ed, a college play in three acts, set o music, with Miss Elsie Janis, in the itle role. The large audience was held villing captive from the first rise to the certainly the best of its kind seen here his season, or for many seasons. Miss anis is not a stranger to Kingston theatre-goers, as she has delighted kingston audiences on two former ocasions. Three seasons ago she played n "The Fortune Teller," and the next eason in "The Little Duchess." "The 'air Co-Ed" deals with college life in in American university, and as "Cynthia sright," Miss Janis-is given a fine oportunity to display her talent. The lay tells the story of a college where o-education has been almost abolished, here being only one girl student, the air Co-Ed. She holds all the male tudents from seniors down, and they imply fall over one another to do as Miss Janis, who is in her twenty-first car, is the youngest star on the Amerian stage, and she is one of the daintiest ctresses that local threatre-goers have

The play differed from any musical comedy seen here before in many ways, the most noticed being the substitution of a male chorus. Every voice was well trained and the many college songs and choruses were a rare treat. The 'Fair Co-Ed" sung by Sydney Davies, as Wellington Reed, an old grad. was the song hit of the evening. His description of the great ball game also made a hit. The stage settings were perfect in every respect, the one of the armories and of the college campus, especially so. The costumes were very
