CANADIAN GIRL

JOURNAL DISCUSSES HER CHARACTERISTICS.

Finds Her Adaptable, Enthusiastic Imperialistic—Loves Work and Play—Should Know How to Cook and Keep House—Bright and Clever.

The following extracts are from an article on "The Canadian Girl," which appears in the current number of The Lady, published in London, England. "The young woman mentioned in the line of this article is to be found between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, a distance of about three thousand miles, and in a country which boasts of almost four million square miles of territory, although so per cent. is not laid out in provinces. It will therefore be realized that generalization as to the education, tastes, and manners of the Canadian is a difficult task. It is only natural that the point of view should vary with entirely different surroundings, associations, and sometimes education. But, although it may be difficult to set before the world one type as "the" Canadian girl, representing the maidenhood of the big young nation of the north, there are certain characteristics or attributes which are held in common.

The Canadian girl is a healthy, out-of-door young woman; she is a good housekeeper and good housewife, skilled in all domestic arts; she is adaptable, for in an emergency, she can go from cooking a dinner or ironing a blouse to entertaining distinguished guests; she has a frank, friendly attitude towards all men with whom she is thrown in contact; and she is an imperialist of the most pronounced type. Roughly, the foregoing applies to all Canadian girls, whether of town or country. The Englishwoman going to Canada at first sees little difference between the girls met in Halifax, Ottawa, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and Victoria, but after a very short time, she is able to agree with the Canadian who says she can tell the distinguished features of the girl whose home is many miles from the frontier. The western girl is freer and franker, and to use a hackneyed expression, more "breezy" than the girl from the east. The girl who was born and brought up in the big cities is quite unlike the girl who lives in a town of mushroom growth.

"The Canadian girl seems to be a medium between the English and the American. She is brought up with English traditions, having learned from our wistful mothers to call Old England "home," and even the freer, less conventional life of a new country cannot destroy feelings and customs and ideas so deeply rooted. She is less independent and assertive than the American girl, and she leaves the attitude of the American towards men with a little touch of English reserve. It is a very small touch, it must be confessed for as a rule the Canadian girl regards all men as comrades and brothers, and is not troubled with much self-consciousness concerning them. Newly-arrived Englishmen sometimes misunderstand the attitudes, unaccustomed to the idea that attentions do not necessarily imply intentions, and it is not till he finds that the men of her acquaintance are to a Canadian girl her companions in games and sports and walks, and that there is little sentiment about the matter, that an Englishman is able to accept the new point of view and fall in line with the prevailing custom.

The Canadian girl plays and works with equal enthusiasm and with equal success. It is the exception to find one who does not understand, not only the art of keeping house and managing the domestic affairs satisfactorily, but the actual details of the work. The average girl knows how everything should be done in the house, and is, as a rule, a fair cook. In fact, she is rather looked down upon by her girl friends if she cannot cook something, even if it be a "fudge" or chocolate cake. This does not apply only to the daughter of the "lower classes," but to those in every walk of life. There is no leisured class in Canada as it is understood in England, and the number of rich people is comparatively small. The daughters of judges, bishops, high officials and others of importance may have every comfort and many luxuries, but they are nevertheless equipped to undertake actual work, in view of the fact that servants are expensive in Canada, and very difficult to obtain at any price. There are thousands of persons in good positions in Canada who do their own work, with the aid of the washer-woman, the charwoman by the day, while others who, in the same position in England, would have two, if not three, servants are content ("content" may be exaggeration) with one, and frequently a poor one at that. In the average Canadian family the girls undertake some of the work, and where there are several girls in the family the housekeeping is taken in turn.

It must not be supposed that education and serious pursuits are neglected. While the daughters of a great many well-to-do men are educated at private schools—and there are very good ones in Canada—the average girl goes to the public school. Sometimes she goes on to the university, where she takes the same degree, as a man, and sometimes spends a year or two at a private school in Canada or in England, or on the continent, for a finish.

"Canadian women who have taken degrees hold high positions in the United States and Canada as instructors, and there are a number of women doctors practising in various parts of the domain. Even women lawyers are not unknown, for in the province of Ontario, where provision is made for the qualification of women as lawyers, three ladies are practising. "Year by year the Canadian girl advances a little farther into the labor arena. She is earning her living as a nurse in Canada and the United States, as a "newspaper woman" (and women have represented their papers in the dominion House of Commons) as a teacher, as a doctor, as a barrister, as a farmer, as a clerk, as a stenographer and typist, as an insurance agent, as a chemist, as a music teacher with the most modern methods and in one province at least the architect is a young woman. It would be difficult to say into what business or profession the

THE HALLS OF QUEEN'S
TWO MEDALS FOR GERMAN ORAL SPEECH.

Meeting of the Political Science Club—Dramatic Club is at Work—Association Football Match on Monday.
Rev. Harper Gray gave a very interesting address to Y.M.C.A. of Queen's at its regular weekly meeting yesterday afternoon. In his remarks Mr. Gray advised the young men to press forward into the future, leaving the past to take care of itself.

The Sophomore year in arts intends to stir things from the very depths, if she can judge from the notice that has been posted on the bulletin board. The assistant secretary, yesterday, was "receiving" from 2 to 3 p.m. at 305 p.m. he "yell" committee met to consider the "yells" which had been received by the assistant-secretary. It is hoped the "yells" will give something "classical" in shape of "yell" Saturday night.
The Dramatic Club is hard at work since the arrival of Sinclair Hamilton, the trainer. Mr. Hamilton is starting out with the same determined, energetic manner as was in evidence last year and those who are in the cast for "Much Ado About Nothing," are having a fine opportunity. Rehearsals are being held every day in the English room and invariably full rehearsals are held in Convocation Hall in the evenings.
At a meeting of the Political Science and Debating club this week the following officers were elected:—Hon. pres., Prof. O. D. Skelton; pres., M. J. Patton; vice-pres., S. S. Cormack; secretary, G. W. Skene; critic, Prof. Swanson; committee, A. G. Dorland, arts; M. Palmer, science; D. A. Carnichael, B.A., medicine; A. D. Cornett, B.A., divinity; M. Matheson, B.A., education. It is the intention of the clubs to hold a series of debates as was carried out last year. All students wishing to take part in any of the debates are asked to hand in their names immediately in order that the programmes may be filled out. The debates last year were exceedingly interesting and with such an excellent executive the club should meet with even more success.
Queen's association football team has arranged a match with the Canadian Locomotive club association team, of Kingston, for Thanksgiving day. The game will be played at 30 a.m. on the lower campus of the university.
Students of German will hereafter have something "aural" to strive for "orally." Two medals will be awarded in the honor German classes as follows: The first one will be awarded annually for the next three years. It will be a gold medal and will be known as "The Malcolm MacCormack" gold medal for proficiency in German speech, conversational and oratorical; to be competed for by male students only at time of passing the final examination for graduation in final honor German. This medal has been given by Malcolm MacCormack, M.A. of Guelph. The second medal is also of the "aural" type, it is given by A. W. Alexander, of Guelph, for general proficiency in German and is open for competition by all members of the preliminary honor German class.
R. M. McTavish has returned to college to continue his course in arts. Mr. McTavish spent the summer in the west teaching school.
