Canadian Courier. The Montreal Gazette does not much that is good in the present Ottawa government, but one can usually depend upon the facts which it publishes. Moreover, when the Gazette criticizes anything in connection with the St. Lawrence route, one can be tolerably certain that the criticism is iust. Therefore, its criticism, in a leading editorial of the 12th, of the expenditures on the dominion government navy may be taken as reliable. It does not say that these expenditures have not been necessary, but merely intimates that it would be the part of wisdom that they should be officially investigated.
