WHY WIDOW WILL NOT MARRY AGAIN.

Which Expresses a Truth That is Worthy of Consideration in

A clever widow's reply to one who asked why she did not marry again, was that a husband is an occupation, and that she prefers being a woman of leisure. The reason is amusing, but aside from its jesting significance, ex-presses a truth that is worthy of consideration in this age when there appears danger that marriage wrecking may become a national habit. Regarded as an occupation the bread winner doubtless not so romantic a figure as he is pictured in song and story, but as it is the prose and not the poetry of life that the human race lives, it is certainly wise to take facts into accoun and order life accordingly.

Although the majority of married women, including those who live on farms, as well as urban dwellers, are compeled to much service, the drudge type of servant wife surely cannot be said to be the American man's wife. More than the man of any other race, he is proneto regard-the woman of his choice as a companion in the comrade sense, and to expect of her more than the conventional requirements of the marriage state. He may not put his views into words or seek to enforce them, but he holds them nevertheless, and he is right in the position he takes, that in the absense of any agreement to the contrary, he and his affairs shall be her supreme interest. The increasing independence of American girls is apt to develop in them a sense of self-sufficiency that makes them self-centered, even to the extent of regarding a husband as air incident, rather than as the central figure of their lives, and to this tendency may be attributed much matrimonial discord and wreckage. The American woman is much given to regarding with scorn German and English wives, whose subserviency she deems as beneath concepts the higher esteem in which she is held, and vaunts herself accordingly, the idea of reciprocity does not always oc-

Marriage is coming more and more to be an affair of women, who place their lives on the individual basis, and apparently object to modifying the scheme enough to give their husbands the status they should hold. Now of marriage, as of Christianity, it can truly be said that one cannot serve two mastersusing the word not in the sense of superior and slave, but rather in that o leading life motive-and in the one case as in the other an attempt to combine self-indulgence with duty ends in return service of any kind to be rendered as a just equivalent for material advantages, which their husbands supply, does not appeal to many leisure class wives. nor do they seem to realize that they have assumed obligations in marriage which they are acting in had faith hy repudiating.—From an article in Vogue.

Easy on the woman: easy on the clothes! That, in a nutshell, is the I'els-Naptha way of washing.

Fels-Naptha soap does away with all the hard and disagreeable part of washing clothes. Little rubbing, no steaming suds to bend over, no keeping up fire to boil the clothes, no nauseous odor from cooking soiled garments.

Then, clothes last longer with no boiling to weaken their fiber and no hard rubbing to wear them thin.

It was further pointed out that Kingston Shoe Merchants, because of the Cash System, were selling shoes at much lower prices than Merchants doing business in Credit Cities are able to do, Kingstonians therefore deriving the benefit of close Cash prices, because of the dealer being in a position to buy his merchandise for Cash and to save his discounts.

It was resolved that a copy of the "The Merchants determination to continue the Cash System" be properly advertised so that they would not be put to the unpleasant necessity of declining to send goods on approbation or to charge same.
