big back country north of Limenton that will some day be filled with settlers. As yet, however, iew people outside of Saskatchewan are aware of the immense territory north of Prince Albert. This past autumn the government had a party making Indian treaty payments throughout this district, and some of the discoveries they made are starting. Prince Albert is as far north of the international boundary as Cobalt is north of Toronto. The farthest point northward touched by this party was Lac du Brochet, at the north end of Reindeer Lake. This is about four hundred miles north of Prince Albert, and seven hundred miles north of the international boundary. Here W. J. McLean, of Winnipeg, the head of the party, was surprised to find potatoes growing. Lac du Frochet is four hundred miles north of Prince Albert. Four hundred miles north of Cobalt would land the traveller in the middle of James Bay. At Pelican Narrows, two hundred miles further south, Mr. McLean found a garden filled with corn, carrots, beets, onions, cabbage and cauliflower, Still further south, at Cumberland Thouse and the Pas, gardens were a matter of course. Farms were found at a distance of seventy miles north of Prince Albert, while the country is rich in minerals, Mr. McLean noted indications of copper, silver, iron and mica. At Lake la Ronge there have been recent discoveries of gold, and a rush is expected next spring. Water powers were passed which would supply a great city with power, and for a good part of the way the journey prices. was through spruce timber. It is evident that north of Prince Albert there is a country second only to the Mac- tine Molasses, Peanut Butter and Butter kenzie and Peace river valleys.
