NO MORE HEADACHES

Suffered From Constant Headaches—Cured by "Fruit-a-tives" When Doctors Failed.

"I was a sufferer from fearful headaches for over two years, sometimes they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I took all kinds of medicines, was treated by physicians, and yet the headaches persisted. I was rarely free from headache. A short time ago I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and I did so with, I must confess, very little faith, but after I had taken them for three days my headaches were easier and in a week they left me. After I had taken a box of the tablets my headaches were quite cured. My appetite was always poor and my stomach bad, and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion is excellent. I had become thin and weak from the constant headaches, but now not only have I been cured of all these awful headaches, but my strength is growing up once more, and I feel like a new man. I have taken in all three boxes of "Fruit-a-tives." I am exceedingly grateful to "Fruit-a-tives" for curing me, and I give this unsolicited testimonial with great pleasure, as I hope thereby some other sufferer of headaches will be induced to try "Fruit-a-tives" and will be cured."

Tips For The Farmers

BY UNCLE JOSH

Here is a very interesting item about a Jersey cow from the pen of Prof. A. L. Haecker, in the Twentieth Century Farmer. Under a picture of a Jersey cow is this legend: "Financial Countess, 155,100, as she appeared at the close of her record-breaking test for one year, under the rules of the A. J. C. C.; 13,248 pounds of milk, 795 pounds 4.6 ounces of butter fat, 935 pounds, 10 ounces of butter, 85 per cent. fat, actual churned butter, 934 pounds, 13 ounces. Owned by C. E. Parfit, Golden, Colorado."

The professor says: "She is a grand cow of the fine 'Island type,' and the very exponent of a perfect milk-making machine. The fine clean-cut head and almost human eyes tell of the fine breeding and nerve power she possesses. Here we have type and conformation directed and shaped to an end, and that end is one of the grandest and best derived from animals, namely, good milk. But two cows officially tested in all the world have excelled the butter record of Financial Countess, and these cannot show the life record that Countess can. For example, the cow holding the highest record was dry during the three years previous to the test year, and then she did not carry a calf through half of the test year, as Countess did. The other cow has not the steady breeding record of Countess, and both required more feed to make their records. Considering all these things, it must be said that Financial Countess is the butter queen of the world."

SOUTHDOWNS AT A SHOW IN ENGLAND.

Although a small breed, the Southdowns are very popular in England. English shepherds pay attention to every detail in caring for their flocks, and the result is the high quality and strong character manifested in the above picture.

The Savings Of Labor.

With the effect of making themselves a great deal of work many farmers have built hog barns partitioned off into individual pens for sows. This sort of barn when well kept looks well, but it does not appear strongly to a man of practical turn, who desires to expedite feeding and manuring operations. It takes about twelve times as long to feed twelve sows individually as to feed them "ensemble" and two or three times as long to to clean the individual pens as to clean a large unpartitioned space. of particular advantages accrued from keeping them apart there would be justification for this extra work, but it is believed that such is not the case. Sows of the same age and temperament in an average herd, do not fight enough to injure themselves materially. As to one's getting all the feed, this is impossible if sufficiently large troughs and feeding floors are provided and the feed is well distributed.

Careful attention is given to convenience in summer feeding and as a rule, pastures are arranged so that a waggon can be driven down the lane with slop and water, and every detail is so executed that as little work as possible is encountered in caring for hogs. If this same care and thought was evidenced in winter, cheaper pork production would result.

Hogs need exercise and when bunched this can easily be given them, for all can be turned into a yard together. If need be, watering and slopping can be done at the house and such further feed as may be used given them in the cattle yard. Then exercise is required to get the feed and attractive inducement given to root. In order to do this, hogs must be left together loose in the barn. Solid partitions would need to be removed, and movables ones of planks employed at farrowing time to shut off individual sows. Those who have partitions may not care to remove them, but let those contemplating building leave them out of their plans. Those who use individual houses and move them in from the pasture usually feed their sows together, to the great saving of labor.

"Make your head save your heels," is an old adage which every farmer should put into practice.

Stock Improvement.

As long as scrub males of the various kinds of live stock are allowed to run at large, stock improvement even with those disposed to keep full blood males, will be limited. The farmer that keeps scrub stock can hardly realize the damage he is doing his neighbor who is trying to improve his stock. It is discouraging to a man after he has paid a long price for a male expecting to raise some good cattle or hogs to find some morning a scrub male in with the stock that he expects to use for improvement.

It is enough to make a man disgusted and angry, but what can one do. No one wants to continually quarrel with his neighbors; possibly if suit for damages was brought none could be realized, as many of the people who keep such stock are entirely irresponsible.

The Old And The New Breeds.

The desire for novelty that finds its way into the poultry yard as well as into other phases of life has led to the production of various new fowls. At first it was thought that these new breeds would crowd out and displace the well tried old varieties. Fortunately with a few exceptions, the old breeds have come well through the competition, and may be seen sharing popularity with the new arrivals, not only in farms and poultry yards throughout the kingdom, but in large classes at the different shows.

Many of the new breeds owe their creation to a clever blending of long established varieties, and this has been one factor in preventing the latter from becoming extinct. In addition to this the good qualities of many of the older breeds are unsurpassed by those of the modern invention. There is no question as to the Dorking being an old breed. The Roman writer, Columella, who lived at the commencement of the Christian era, describes a fowl that in all its details, including the fifth toe, corresponds to the Dorking.

The valuable qualities of the Dorking are shown by the use that is made of it in composing new breeds, for there are few that have attained any notoriety in which there is not a strong sprinkling of Dorking blood. As a table fowl the Dorking remains unsurpassed. There is also no fowl with which it is crossed that it does not improve for culinary purposes.

In The Poultry Yard.

What is more pleasing to the farmer's wife in midwinter than a nice lot of fresh eggs every day?

Under ordinary conditions utility farm flocks can be made highly profitable.

Had you noticed that the bred-to lay hens are rapidly taking the place of the common mongrel fowl?

Those who have never exhibited stock at a poultry show can hardly understand the advantages to be derived from the prizes won there.

Watch closely for infectious diseases now, lest you lose your entire season's output of fowls as well as all your feed, work and trouble.

Give your yarded or closely housed birds all the apple and potato parings they will eat. It will give them new life and compel the hens to lay more eggs.

A good hen is like a good woman she does a lot of work, never expecting to get her pay for it; but she does like a good word now and then.

Feeding Of Work Horses.

A writer in Farm Life says:

"Problems connected with the feeding of work horses are doubtless of as wide interest as any problem in livestock management. Practically all farmers, whatever particular branch of farming they may be engaged in, have occasion to feed work horses.

"Whether feeds are high or low in price, it is well worth while for feeders to exercise great care in the selection of rations, so as to use the ones that are most efficient and economical. With the present exceedingly high market prices for all kinds of grain feeds, it is especially important that a judicious selection of feeds be made, for much waste may result if attention is not given to this phase of stable management.

"Of all grain feeds used in this country none is in higher repute with horsemen than oats. Many horsemen believe oats to be the best single grain feed for horses, whether kept for draft or for road purposes. It has been stated time and again by practical horsemen and others, that horses fed upon oats display more life, keep in better condition and endure work, especially during hot weather, better than do horses which receive a grain ration made up largely or exclusively of corn. And this belief in the efficiency of oats as a grain feed for horses is so strong with some horsemen that they are willing to pay exorbitant prices for oats, rather than feed corn.

"A study of the chemical composition of corn and of oats fails to show any good reason for the exceedingly high favor in which oats are held, or for corn being considered so totally unfit for the use of horses, especially when at hard work. It has been claimed that oats contain a stimulating principle known as "avenine" which gives great spirit to horses. The existence of this stimulating principle has not been proved, and it is safe to say that its existence is very improbable. Even if it does exist, there is no evidence to indicate that it would have any special bearing upon the practical feeding of work horses."

A Few Pointed Remarks.

You can drive up some hooks in the barn to hang the lantern on a great deal easier than you can build a new barn.

Get your mind made up now where you will have your various crops next year, and do your level best to have the land fitted to the crop. Misfits are costly.

You can grow a better calf by giving it a nice dry bed to lie in, good food and plenty of it, a careful currying every day and being as fair to it now as you want it to be to you by-and-bye.

Pinched up, scraggly-woolled sheep never produce nice big lambs. You have got to feed till they are born. No pinchbeck policy will do.

Every time you give your cows a good, thorough grooming you save a few pounds of grain, and that is worth money these times.

It doesn't take a very smart man to run through a good farm in a short time. Where the smartness comes in is in holding that farm right up to the standard and making it bring you in something every year.

Describing A Welshman.

Ex-Lord Chancellor Malsbury, when leader of the South Wales circuit, caused much amusement among his friends by the manner in which he unblushingly identified himself with the interests of the locality. During the hearing of a case, one of the judges, at last, could refrain no longer from remarking on this. "Come," said he, "you must not argue too much in that strain. You cannot make yourself out to be a Welshman, you know." "Perhaps, not, my lord," was the reply, "but I have made a good deal of money out of Welshmen in my time." "Oh, in that case," answered the judge, "we may call you a Welshman by extraction."

Scoffs At Rubber Tires.

An old farmer who by hard work and thrifty habits had got together a small fortune decided that the time had at length arrived when he was justified in ordering a family carriage, says the Philippines Gossip.

He went to a carriage builder and described in detail the kind of vehicle he wished to buy.

"Now, I suppose you want rubber tires?" said the carriage builder.

"No, sir," replied the old farmer, in tones of resentment. "My folks ain't that kind. When they're riding they want to know it."
