LAURIER ON LINCOLN. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in his speech on the death of Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone in the house of commons, May 26th, 1888, made the following reference to Abraham Lincoln:

When the Republic passengers were brought on board the Baltic, many of them had saved practically none of their belongings. The lady, arrayed in a nightgown and fur coat, all she had brought with her from the sinking ship, climbed over the side of the Baltic, and spied a sort of bulletin board on which notices of interest to the passengers were posted.

It is said that Alfred Shrubb will never attempt to run the Marathon distance again. The game little Englishman admits that the distance is too far for him, but he is as willing as ever to meet any of the present-day crakes at any distance up to fifteen miles.

The Social Evil. Bishop Farrington. "Words fail and one's heart sinks within, as one contemplates the terrible degradation of womanhood which is involved in this evil. It is the boulder duty of every parish clergyman to prevent, as far as he can, husbands for immoral purposes from being established within the limits of his parish.

Improper digestion of food harms in so many ways that the evil must be corrected at once. The remedy to rely upon is Day's Dyspepsia Cure. It helps to digest food, it tones up the whole system and it keeps the bowels in proper condition.

It pays to have a phone and you can save what it costs by ringing up 254 or 248 for your table wants. Think it over.
