CADET'S JAW BROKEN

IN ACCIDENT ON TOBOGGAN SLIDE.

Cadet H. P. Crerar, of Hamilton, the Victim—Cadet Morgan Escaped With a Cut Face—Another Cadet Injured.

A serious accident occurred this morning, at Fort Henry toboggan slide, which resulted in Cadet H. P. Crerar, company sergeant, sustaining a fracture of the lower jaw, which will confine him to hospital for quite some time. Cadet R. C. Morgan, of Osnabruck Centre, received a severe wound in the face, between the nose and eyes. Cadet N. O. Reiffenstein, of Ottawa, also of the party, escaped unharmed.

It seems the three cadets were trying some rather risky stunts on the toboggan slide, something of the "jump" character. When the toboggan hit the "jump," all three cadets were thrown and landed heavily. Crerar was first to land, and struck on his face and a fractured jaw resulted, a most painful injury, which takes weeks and weeks to recover from. Morgan was the second to get the bumps, but he was more lucky, and escaped with a cut and bruised face. Reiffenstein had all the luck, and wasn't hurt at all, though he received a lively toss.

Major Kilborn, the R.M.C. surgeon, was immediately summoned, and looked after the injured cadets. He called Dr. J. C. Connell to assist him. Cadet Crerar, so badly injured, is son of a well-known Hamilton lawyer.

Death Of Miss Alice Gill.

Miss Alice Gill died in Syracuse, N.Y., on Wednesday afternoon, and her remains reached here this afternoon for burial. Extremely sad and pathetic were the circumstances leading up to the demise. Last week she caught cold and this developed into a mastoid abscess behind the ear. Treatment being unavailing, an operation was performed. She lapsed into unconsciousness and passed away Monday, her sisters here, Mrs. W. H. Wormwith and Miss Sarah Gill, had word of her suffering from a cold; Tuesday came the message to hasten to her side. They reached there on Wednesday, preceded by her brother, Charles, from New York. At four o'clock the end came. Deceased was a bright, happy young woman, beloved and esteemed by many, both here and in Syracuse, where she practised after her graduation as a nurse. She was associated with Queen Street Methodist church, Kingston, and was a willing helpful worker. Sincere indeed will be the sympathy expressed to the bereaved friends and relatives.

HORRIBLE EARTHQUAKE.

Searched Office For Money, But Secured Nothing.

Repetition of Recent Disasters in Sicily.

Burglars do not appear to take a very lengthy rest in Kingston, last night they secured an entrance to the coal and wood office of Moses Ellison, at the corner of Ontario street and Place d'Armes, and it was through no fault of theirs that they had to go away empty handed.

It was because there was no money left in the office for the benefit of night prowlers. The burglars went to a great deal of trouble to secure an entrance to the office, believing, no doubt, that there was money in the safe. Their game was to remove the door from its hinges and they made a clean job of it. The door of the safe was open and the feelings of the thieves can well be imagined when they found that the safe contained no money, simply a few papers of no value whatever to anyone save the owners. Nothing in the office was disturbed, and it was quite evident that the search was for money.

Angrove was the maker and giver of the handsome pennant Longboat carried away with him from the skating rink. He admitted he had had fine treatment from the rink people and many others.

CHARGE WAS DISMISSED

JAMES RYAN "NOT GUILTY" IN THEFT CASE.

No Evidence Offered Which Would Convict Him With Hotel Robbery—Two "Indian-Listers" Were Fined $10 and Costs.

The case of James Ryan, accused of the theft of $51 from the till at the Ontario House, Joseph Paradis, proprietor, was proceeded with at the police court, to-day. The prisoner pleaded "not guilty," and T. J. Riggs appeared in his behalf. C. R. Webster conducted the prosecution.

Joseph Paradis, the complainant, told of the loss of $54 from his till, and also told about the prisoner and three other men, being in the sitting room. The men wanted liquor, but he did not give them anything. To Mr. Riggs, witness said that the men were not guests at the hotel.

Edward Paradis, son of the complainant, was at the hotel at 10:40 o'clock. He went into the sitting room, opening the door with his own latch key, and saw the young men in the room. The men asked him for a drink. Witness said he had no key to the bar, and went out. Later, when he returned, about five minutes past eleven o'clock, he found the bar-room open and then discovered that the till had been robbed.

Charles Paradis, nephew of the complainant, was in the sitting room about 10:30 o'clock, and also saw the young men there. The men wanted liquor, and witness told them he had not a key to the bar. Witness then went upstairs and later heard the men downstairs talking. He also heard the bell on the cash register ring, and heard the prisoner call out the name "Mike." He recognized the prisoner's voice. Right after this the men went out, and witness went to bed.

Cross-examined by Mr. Riggs, witness said that he was not sure whether the men had asked for liquor. He believed that they had requested liquor, but he heard someone say, "I have no key." Witness could not swear that Ryan was in the hotel. The only thing that made him think it was Ryan was because he recognized his voice. He did not hear any noise, such as would be caused by breaking in the bar door. Witness heard Ryan singing, and knew his voice.

Mr. Riggs asked for the dismissal of the accused, stating that there had been no evidence produced to show him guilty.

Magistrate Farrell informed Mr. Webster that he could not return a verdict of "guilty" on the evidence. He might return the old Scotch verdict of "not proven." Nothing had been shown whatever to connect Ryan, and he would therefore discharge the accused.

In speaking of the accused, the magistrate said that he had been brought very close to a crime, and he hoped that he would take warning. Every incident went to make up character, and he hoped that he would judge himself accordingly. The magistrate expressed surprise that Mr. Paradis should go away from the hotel and leave four men in the sitting room in the way he did.

A line of $10 and costs each was imposed upon two members of the "Indian list," who were found guilty of drunkenness.

Daniel Ryan And Company.

Mr. Ryan, during his engagement at the Grand all next week, keeping abreast of the times offers us "Salome," "The Bells," and the "Merchant of Venice," the latter being a piece de resistance, that is demanded of him by the public everywhere that he plays. His "Shylock" ranks with any artistic effort of the decade, and in truth is a wonderful piece of acting.

A notable feature of Mr. Ryan's performance is the intelligence displayed by the various actors he employs and the straightforward methods used to attain dramatic effect.

No chicanery or petty stage tricks mar his performance and a delightful lightning and scenic detail enhance the succession of natural stage pictures offered by the players.

On Monday night he will present "The Bells."

SALVATION REVIVAL

Being Conducted By Brigadier John Roberts.

Brigadier John Roberts, who has been an officer in the Salvation Army from its very commencement, when it was known as the Christian Mission, received a very hearty welcome at the Salvation Army citadel last night. Rev. C. A. Sicks acted as chairman, and after many appreciative remarks about the work of the Army, extended to the brigadier a glad welcome to the city of King-

A short programme was rendered by the splendid band of the local corps; also some speeches were made by the local people, such as Treasurer Pickering, Bandmaster Christians and Adjutant Parsons, who is in charge of the local corps.

The brigadier, in replying, made reference to the delightful time he had spent during his sojourn in Canada. He expressed his great affection for Canadian winters and made many favorable comparisons with regard to the conditions that govern the land. His text was: "His dominion shall extend from sea to sea, and was distinctly appropriate. In a clear, concise and pithy way he showed that this scripture had a great bearing on this great dominion, in whose interest as a Salvationist he had come to labor.

Brigadier Roberts, who is making a tour through Canada, is staying five days in Kitchener. As a revivalist he has met with wonderful success wherever he has labored. In his remarks he said that he had given a lecture to a drunkard father, praying mother, a pif-laddie at eight, brush at thirteen, pouchee at fifteen, piglist at seventeen, reflection, conviction, conversion, novel courting, tragic ending, a great fall, a frightful dream, restoration, another dream, romantic courtship, talk with sceptics, in and out of lock-ups, winning souls. The remarkable conversion of Bendigo. A good time is anticipated and a hearty welcome is extended to all. The brigadier will be assisted by a large staff of soldiers and songsters, and the splendid band will furnish music at all the meetings.
