CONVICT'S REMAINS TO BE BURIED IN ST. MARY'S CEMETERY.

Dullman, the Leader of the Outrage, Expected That His Tools, Welch and Nolan Would Be Killed in Their Attempt.

The remains of John Welch, the youngest of the Welland canal dynamiters who died in the penitentiary on Thursday, will be buried in St. Mary's cemetery, under direction of Rev. Father McDonald, Catholic chaplain to the penitentiary, and spiritual adviser to the dead prisoner, who told the reverend gentleman his last wishes. The penitentiary has its own morgue, and unless the bodies of prisoners are to be sent to relatives, they are plainly confined within the prison walls, and removed to either of the cemeteries. As Welch had no relatives in America he will receive a private burial.

When the dynamiters entered the penitentiary on May 26th, 1906, after being sentenced to life imprisonment by Sir Chancellor Boyd at Welland, it was understood that Welch was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and had been a clerk in the newspaper office of the famous Parnell. The books of Provincial Detective Murray show that Welch and Nolan were twice tried in Dublin for the murder of a British soldier, but were acquitted. From Ireland, Welch came to Buffalo, and not long afterwards he fell in with the master criminal, Karl Dullman, who was the means of bringing him to Canada, and to penitentiary till he died. It is believed that Dullman expected that both Welch and Nolan could meet their death in dynamiting the canal locks, and that he himself, after directing operations, would have no difficulty in escaping. Welch maintained that he had joined Dullman while he was drinking heavily, and that he didn't realize the enormity of the crime he was abetting.

"His nearest man I ever saw," said a citizen who by chance saw John Welch, the dead convict, in the penitentiary asylum a few weeks ago. "He was worn down to a shadow by the disease that had attacked him," went on the citizen, "and it was painful to look at him." He passed away quietly Thursday morning, chills of the liver being the cause. He had been in the hospital for some time lately. He had been in and out at various times, but last fall he entered for the last time. He was a happy, bright fellow and easily led. "At heart he was not bad," said one who knew him, "but companionship and good fellowship were his ruination. He would drink and a few glasses would stir him up. A clap on the back and a laughing comment, 'Jack, you're the best fellow in the world,' would put him under control. He was easily persuaded and I think this is how Dullman duped him."

The late Detective Murray used to say, remarked an officer, who talked about the poor fellow's death, "that Dullman's plans and he looked at the damage done and the capture of all concerned—that he had got Welch and Nolan to do the deed fully convinced that dead men would tell no tales. He thought in the explosion both men could not escape fast enough to avoid the general wreck. But they did and this foiled the conspirator's plans and led to the downfall of all." Welch was a kindly, good natured fellow and was well liked by keepers and confederates alike. He was a quiet, obedient and careful. He worked in the tailor shop for a time, and later was put in the library at lighter work, owing to his declining health. He was patient and cheerful in his illness, was well cared for and his spiritual adviser, Rev. Father McDonald, chaplain and Rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, was constant in his ministrations. What ever was said, if anything, as to his past, is sacredly guarded and not a word can be disclosed by him. It is thought he has a wife in Ireland, but this is only a conjecture; he has no relatives on this side of the Atlantic. His belongings are few, a bundle of clothes, those worn when he was guilty of the outrage.

The announcement of the death soon spread through the prison and many convicts who knew him as a happy, accommodating fellow, felt sorry that his earthly course was run. His former confederates joined in the general regret, but did not further express themselves so far as can be learned. Welch would say very little about the canal affair, usually putting questions aside by saying "it was a drunken spree." He would not admit that it was a job concocted in Buffalo, and a part of a scheme to force settlement of a strike that was on at that port. Really, it is thought Welch knew little about the matter, Dullman being the designer and plotter.

Dullman entered the penitentiary under an assumed name, but the Buffalo authorities finally identified him as Lake Dillon, a shoemaker, of Pittsburgh, Pa., but it was surmised he was connected with one of those anti-

PORLAND, MAINE, CHILD
Ill, Weak and Emaciated, Restored to Health By Vinol.
"Our little daughter, six years of age, after a severe attack of measles, which developed into pneumonia, was left pitifully thin, weak and emaciated. She had no appetite, and her stomach was so weak it could not retain food. She lay in this condition for weeks, and nothing the doctor prescribed did a bit of good, and we were beginning to think she would never recover."
"At this time we commenced to give her Vinol, and the effect was marvelous. The doctor was amazed at her progress, and when we told him we were giving her Vinol, he replied, 'It is a fine remedy, keep it up.' We did so, and she recovered her health and strength months before the doctor thought she could." J. W. Flagg, Portland, Me.
Vinol cures conditions like this because in a natural manner it increases the appetite, tones up the digestive organs, makes rich, red blood, and strengthens every organ in the body. Vinol is sold in Kingston, by G. W. Mahood, Druggist.

British organizations. Dullman has always looked forward to his release, figuring that when he had served ten years in prison, his friends would secure from the minister of justice a pardon. However, Dullman has as much chance of securing his liberty as he has of being appointed to the board of health. If he doesn't escape, he'll die within prison walls, as his poor tool, John Welch did.

This morning, the remains of Welch were placed in St. Mary's cemetery vault. Sympathizers sent T. Roman's hearse to convey the body to the vault. Messenger Michael Kennedy was in charge of the removal.

K. & P. RAILWAY MUST PAY For Coal Removed From Wilbur Company's Mines.
Liquorator Clisdell of the Wilbur Iron Ore company, limited, of Toronto, to which went into liquidation on August 26th, 1908, has been given judgment for $448.83 against the Kingston & Pembroke railway company, for coal removed from the mines at Wilbur, after the issue of the winding-up order.

According to the railway, the iron ore company owed the former more than $508 for coal freight, and, having had no notice of the winding-up order, took away 138 1/2 tons of iron ore company placed the quantity at 153 tons 1,360 pounds, costing $1,83 a ton, and sued for $742.21. The judge accepts the 138 tons.

The defendants did not proceed to sell the coal or any part of it, as required by section 345 of the Companies Act. They endeavored to sell it, and failing, put it on their own coal pile, mixed it with their coal, used a part of it, and intended to use it all. They had no right to do this.

His lordship finds that the railway knew of the order before the cars left the Wilbur siding, but the trial judge says that this is not material, as the defendants did know, before starting to take the coal, of the Wilbur iron company's insolvency.

ARRIVED AT THE PEN

LIFE SENTENCE FOR EX CHIEF POLICE MALONE.

Former Chief Constable at Simcoe Entered the Big Prison on Thursday Night—Has Hope of Gaining Freedom After a Time.
At 8:30 o'clock, on Thursday night, the big doors at the Kingston penitentiary opened, and ex-Chief of Police Malone, of Simcoe, entered to serve the sentence of life imprisonment imposed upon him for his crime.
In the custody of two constables Malone arrived at the outer depot, on the train due at 7:40 o'clock. It so happened that the coach in which Malone and the constables were seated was brought into the city depot, and on this account the constables did not take a cab from the outer station to the prison. A cab was in waiting at the city station, and then the prisoner was hurried off to the prison, in a blinding snow storm. The trip out King street was made in good time, and within a brief period Malone was enrolled and ready for his first night in the cells.

Malone was a model prisoner all the way on the trip and gave the constables no trouble. He appeared to be in good spirits, showed no signs of nervousness, and chatted with the constables on various topics, but had nothing to say about his crimes. The party occupied seats in the "smoker," and the prisoner appeared to enjoy the good cigars presented to him. Some travellers also occupied seats in the smoking car, and the prisoner engaged in conversation with them and he intimated that it was his belief he would be given his freedom after serving about fifteen years. His hope seemed to be built up on this and although it was a long time to wait it apparently gave him a good deal of comfort.
The prisoner was handcuffed to one of the constables and, of course, was subject to the gaze of all the "curious ones" on the train when it became known that he was on board. In this way his position was made a most embarrassing one.
In Kingston, it was not generally known when the prisoner would arrive, and this prevented a curious crowd at the station. However, at the sight of the handcuffed man, the few who happened to be at the station, crowded to get a glimpse of the man who has been so much in the limelight for several weeks past.

The "cabbies" at the station, who were very eagerly solicited fares, appeared to amuse the prisoner, and as he walked across the station platform, he smiled. A moment later, he was seated in the cab with the constables, the "cabbie" shut the door with a bang, and he started on the last stage of his journey. In a very short time he heard the bang of another door, but this time it was that of the outer world. The saddest part of the whole journey was the prisoner's realization that he had reached the prison, and the constables, themselves would indeed need to be men of steel, not to feel sad, when this truth is reached. It is then that the truth of that old saying, "The way of the transgressor is hard," is impressed more strongly upon the mind of the prisoner.
On his trip down to the penitentiary, Malone was attired in a fine black suit, black overcoat and stiff hat, and made a fine appearance. He has a rather pleasing countenance, and would not be taken for the criminal class. The prisoner was sentenced a week ago. He is married, and the reason for his not coming to the penitentiary sooner, was that he wished to have time to make arrangements for the care of his wife, and this privilege was readily granted him by the court. The parting between the prisoner and his wife was a most touching one. The wife stood by him

THE W.C.T.U. IS GLAD
That Inspector Wright is Hot After Brandy Chocolates.
The monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the Y.W.C.A. parlors, Thursday afternoon. The president conducted the usual devotional exercises. Mrs. Lyon leading in prayer. The treasurer, Mrs. Rogers reported the financial standing of the union to be a little more encouraging.
A letter was read by the corresponding secretary from Mrs. Detlor, with reference to Mrs. Hyalop, dominion organizer, who is visiting the union throughout the province, but as she was not likely to be in the vicinity of Kingston until May, it was decided that it would be unwise to plan for public meetings during that busy month.
The corresponding secretary was instructed to reply accordingly. Report of the successful parlor social held in the Y.W.C.A. rooms was given, and the advisability of holding another this season was discussed, but not decided upon. An item appeared in the White Ribbon Bulletin, stating that as the supply of comfort bags for last year was in excess of demand, none would be required this year. It was decided to send money instead, to be used in defraying the expenses of the missionaries.

The members of the union were pleased to see the action taken by Inspector Wright in regard to brandy chocolates, and hope that he may succeed in preventing their being sold in Kingston. Mrs. McCallum read of an "Anti-cigarette law, prohibiting the manufacture, sale or gift of cigarettes and cigarette papers, within the state of Minnesota, lately passed by the legislature." Also that the Temperance Alliance Convention is in session at Toronto, a few from which are to wait on the government, agent the removal of the three-fifths clause. On account of the lateness of the hour it was decided to resume the subject of government control at a future meeting.—Com.

The company carry an excellent band and orchestra, and the whole organization will be a theatrical and musical treat. At the Grand Saturday, March 6th, matinee and night.

all through his trial, and even to the last, declared that her husband was not guilty of the crime for which such a heavy penalty had been meted out to him. The prisoner comes of a well-to-do and much-respected family in a town in Western Ontario, and before he met with this trouble, had always borne a good character. When the call came for service in the South African war, the prisoner was one of the first ready to go to the front for his country's sake, and saw active service.
The crime for which the prisoner was sentenced, is, no doubt, fresh in the minds of all readers. He was found guilty of theft, arson and attempting to shoot a brother-constable.
Malone is the second man to come to the penitentiary on a life sentence, within a very short time, Rose, the young man convicted of robbery and brutal assault upon a woman, in Toronto, and who made a sensational escape from the Toronto jail, is the other recent arrival, on a life sentence.
