NEW YORK'S DOINGS

SOMETHING DREADFUL UP COMMISSIONER'S SLEEVE.

Unromantic Wedding Preliminaries.—Another Wall Street Brank of the Custumary Kind—New York's Milky Way a Troublesome One.

New York, March 6.—It is not improbable that in a short time "We've Some Fine New Crooks in Town" will be the popular song of the police, in big cities other than New York, for Gen. Bingham, the head of our police department, has got the big secret service fund which he has wanted these many months—in fact, ever since he intimated that within a mile of police headquarters there was a house where headquaters could be hired for money to commit crimes of any kind.

No, the fund was not voted to Gen. Bingham by the authorities; the Board of aldermen, who have considerable to say in such matters, made no attempt in that direction, or, if they did, it escaped the notice of yours truly and many others who had hopes.

Besides, detectives have always been well-known at night as bar-keepers or laundress collectors, so any politician knew whom to go to when any of his followers was wanted by the police, or likely to be. But, give a police commissioner a detective force known personally only to himself and accountable only to him, why, no alderman would know where he was at or about to begin and we may soon hear from the new inside of politics, that something worse than the Spanish Inquisition is being set up in New York.

The New York stock market has been indulging in one of its periodic big breaks and the spectacle on the floor of the Stock Exchange was one of the things that had to be seen, and particularly to be heard, to be believed.

five hundred shares each, and each because a single share was sold. They are called "inactive"; in other words, there isn't a gambling chance in the lot of them. "A word to the wise," etc.

It takes a long time to compile statistics of so many things as this, but the estimates for 1908 are now out and show that the population is but a trifle under four and a quarter millions, more than four thousand babies were born than the previous year, the total number exceeding one hundred and twenty thousand—doesn't it make your ears ache?—and the death rate decreased almost incredibly, although the greatest proportionate mortality was in the boroughs where there are fewest people to the acre and also the most open spaces, such as light and air. Apparently, this means that where sickness was most to be feared inspection and sanitation were most constant. The greatest surprise in the figures, however, was the decrease in the marriage rate—a falling off of more than twenty per cent.

Some people are attracted to the hard times, but it is well known that the classes most given to marriage don't let so trifling a thing as less work or lower wages discourage them. Such brides and bridegrooms as I have consulted on the subject say there has been as much marrying as ever but the ceremonies occur in New York's new wrinkles in licenses. The cost of a license does not trouble any one determined to marry, but for a man and his best girl to go together for a necessary paper, as now they must, looks a little like cold turkey. No questions are asked about her age, but for her to appear before a stranger, a mere man in an office, and be asked about things that are nobody's business but her own and that of the swain at her side is too horribly unromantic for anything. There's nothing like it in any emotional novels that the lady ever read, except perhaps some French ones, and French love affairs never did seem a bit natural to the notional feminine mind. Hence the approval of the improved finances of ministers and magistrates across the river in New York.

It is currently believed that money will buy anything in New York, but a great many people are of the opinion that it does not buy as much good milk as the people are entitled to and that year after year the average quality of the milk is poorer. This is a very serious matter in a town containing more than a quarter of a million babies less than two years ago, and in which nobody is allowed to keep his own special cow in the back yard or in any back yard in which a cow could be kept on the sly. Dr. Wiley, the government's chemist, who some of the canned goods packers are hoping has just been drowned in the city, has taken up the case. He has been benzoate of soda quarantined for lecturing here on the rich, fragrant fluid that some of us were brought up on in the country and drawn from the family cow by the head of the family or some other careful person, but the various fluids, ranging from bluish white to creamy white, that are collected in places within two or three hundred miles, where it was milked from all sorts of cows by all sorts of men, some of whom are under close observation and sanitary restrictions, and who with any interest in the taste and health of the consumer, are in glass bottles, much also closed in for-gallon cans, from which it is retained in shops differing greatly from one another in temperature, cleanliness and other things to which milk is peculiarly sensitive. A strange fact of the business is that although the retail price of milk has been stationary for years and no farmer ever got rich by supplying the dealers, milk costs the dealer almost twice as much to produce as it did a few years ago, when feed and labor were far lower. Inspectors are continually solving the problem of getting the best of the stuff which suggests that the breed of the cows getting it had been crossed with pump-handle, yet many housekeepers complain that milk does not taste as it used to. Some large and reputable dealers have recently raised their prices, and thousands of families would move to the suburbs solely to get richer milk. If they were assured that suburban residents are having the same trouble. It has been gravely suggested by some mothers that Mr. Edison ought to be applied to, to invent an artificial milk, and would do it, too, if he had a lot of babies of his own for there are simply areas of money cows to go round. It certainly is a remarkable fact that some amateur dairymen, who are millionaires, cannot get as many good cows as they are perfectly willing to pay fancy prices for.

DOINGS AT ATHENS.

Brockville Won the Inter-Collegiate Debate.

Athens, March 4.—Rev. R. B. Patterson attended the Anglican National Association this week.

While engaged with a large construction company, writes Amos E. Wilbur from Concord, "I wrenched my back while lifting a steel beam. I realized at once that I was hurt, but finished the day out. I was so lame when I reached home that my wife insisted on my going to bed. I applied poultices, hot water bags, and other remedies, but at the end of the fifth day my suffering was more intense than at the first. A fellow workman brought me a bottle of Nervine, and rubbed my back twice during the evening. This gave me relief. Rubbing with Nervine was continued the next day, and by night I was much improved. Nervine must have penetrated right into the muscles that were sore, because it took out the stiffness, cured the pain, and had me well in four days' time. Of course, to strengthen my back, I put on a Nervine Porous Plaster and find it wonderful help to a working man."

Not a liniment on earth to-day that compares in pain-subduing, healing, and curing power with Nervine. Fifty years' record has established its unusual merit. Look out for the substitute, insist on "Nervine" only. Large 25c. bottles at all dealers.

It is better to lead a procession than to follow it—unless the leader is in a black wagon with glass windows. Never borrow trouble—and never lend it to a man who has a strenuous disposition. The master art of self-defense is apt to go lame when it encounters a woman's eyes.
