

ONE ON THE DOCTORS.

Madame J. Rioux, St. Moise, Que., says: "Fruit-a-tives cured me of severe Liver Disease. Neither doctors nor any other remedy did me any good, but Fruit-a-tives promptly cured me."

The Adventures of Kathleen, Henry and Dorothy.

By Katherine B. Bernalingham and Andrew W. Malcolmson.

Once upon a time there lived a little girl of twelve years named Kathleen, who had a sister Dorothy, aged six, and a little brother, Henry, aged three. Their father was dead and they lived with a cross old stepmother. One day they got permission to go out wading. It was the first time they had been allowed this pleasure for two years, so they were delighted. As they were wading out into the water they suddenly fell into a hole. None of them could swim, and they cried for help. Suddenly a fairy appeared saying, "Stand upon water and follow me. I am a fairy queen."

oo are bootiful." Glinda laughed and said, as she kissed him, "You and Glinda must be very good friends indeed." Next morning was Silverbell's birthday and as she was sitting on her throne Glinda came and presented her with a diamond ring, earrings, a bracelet, a necklace, and a brooch. Glinda brought her a diamond crown, Tipteen a lovely little white pony, Galahad a bunch of forget-me-nots, and Glinda a bunch of lilacs. Silverbell thanked them all warmly with a hug and kiss. The week passed pleasantly away, each day the children growing more fond of each other, so when Glinda went home she took all the children along with her, to stay for a while.

IV.—Marriage Of The Princes And Princesses.

In this way the children grew up together. Kathleen was now a maiden of fifteen, and a very fair maiden too, with locks of gold and skin as fair as a lily. One morning she, with the younger children, was sitting in the garden when Glinda and Silverbell entered, both looking very happy. "I'll be your godfather now," said Glinda laughing, "for your godmother has promised to marry me. Yes, and I will have you for my maid of honor, my sweet Kathleen." "And Dorothy will be my flower girl and Henry will hold up my train."

"I shall give the good news to my mother now, so come with me, my love," said Glinda. "We will all go," said Silverbell, "so come with us, my chicks." They drove in their chariot to Glinda's palace and found her alone, sitting on her throne, so Glinda took Silverbell by the hand and led her up to Glinda. "Mother, you have been wishing me to choose a bride and here she is," he said. Glinda took the blushing girl in her arms and kissed her lovingly. "I have always wanted you for my daughter and now my wish has come true." "When will the marriage be?" said Silverbell. "I shall not need a trousseau," said Silverbell, "as I have a pretty white dress and veil and plenty of clothes." "I'll have it," he said. Glinda took the bride and the groom to the church. The church was decked with flowers. When the bride entered the church there was a gasp of admiration from all beholders. She was dressed in a lovely white satin gown with touches of gold here and there, and wore a thin lace veil and had white roses in her hair. Kathleen followed her, dressed in pink silk, Dorothy in yellow silk and Glinda in blue silk. Henry wore a mauve velvet suit and carried a bouquet of violets.

Wednesday dawned bright and clear with the roses all abloom. The church was decked with flowers. When the bride entered the church there was a gasp of admiration from all beholders. She was dressed in a lovely white satin gown with touches of gold here and there, and wore a thin lace veil and had white roses in her hair.

II.—The Wicked Witch.

Kathleen suddenly rushed away from the window crying "Godmother, there is an army out there." Silverbell got up and turned a white face towards the window. "Gracious," she cried, "it is my enemy, the witch. What shall I do? I have it! I will make my children invisible with my magic powder, but for myself I can do nothing." She sprinkled the children with her magic powder, and at once they were invisible. A bright idea popped into her head, that she might go to Glinda, the good! Now Glinda was Queen of all the country, and Silverbell ruling half of it for her. So Silverbell took her chariot and drove to Glinda's palace, which was magnificent, each room being made of a different kind of precious stone—emeralds, rubies and so on. Glinda was seated on her throne of gold, dressed in a lovely robe made of moonbeams caught and woven together. Silverbell knelt before her, weeping bitterly. "What dost thou want?" asked Glinda. "I ask help of you," said Silverbell. "The powerful witch and her army have come to fight, and I have only a few soldiers, so what am I to do?" The beautiful face of Glinda, grew serious with thought but suddenly she brightened up and said, "I will go myself with my army, which, I am sure, is ten times bigger than any witch's army." Silverbell smiled through her tears, as she thanked Glinda. The army was summoned immediately, and they marched along with Glinda and Silverbell in a chariot at their head.

The battle lasted for two days and the witch's soldiers were being killed in large numbers, but the witch was anxious to rule and would not give up. At last Glinda found a way to destroy them. When the remainder of the army were fighting Glinda flew over their heads and sprinkled them with a marvelous powder and they all fell dead. Then Silverbell said "Appear," and as soon as the words were out of her mouth, the three children stood before her. She kissed them all lovingly and told them to go and dress for supper, for they had not had proper food for two days. They came back attired in rich clothes. Kathleen was in white lace over pink silk, with roses in her hair and on her breast; Dorothy wore a dress of cream colored satin, and lilies of the valley, and Henry had on a mauve satin suit. Silverbell also looked beautiful.

There was a snowy white cloth upon the table and the plates, knives, forks and spoons were of gold. There was a little gift at each place. Little Henry broke the silence by saying, "Don't I look bootiful, godmother?" Silverbell laughed and bowing little laugh that sounded like music. "Yes, indeed you do, you little dear," she said, giving him a kiss.

III.—Silverbell's Birthday.

Glinda had three sons and one daughter, Glinda, Tipteen, Galahad and Glinda. Glinda was eighteen, Tipteen thirteen, Galahad seven, and little Glinda only four. It was now June and Silverbell told the children that in two days it would be her sixteenth birthday. She said she would ask Glinda over for a week. The children were delighted at this and raked their brains trying to think of birthday presents, but she seemed to have everything, so finally they thought the only thing they could give her would be flowers—Kathleen, lilies of the valley; Dorothy, roses, and Henry violets.

Glinda and her children arrived in a golden chariot, drawn by six milk-white horses. The children were dazzled at her beauty, and Henry said, "My god, it's as difficult for some people, to be good as it is for others to make"

DON'T SPEAK NOW ACCUSES NEIGHBOR OF STEALING WIFE'S LOVE.

Were Once Friends and Took Little Jaunts Together—But Now One is Suing the Other For $20,000 Damages.

Medina, N.Y., March 24.—Jake McKinley and Dave Allen are wealthy farmers living two miles and a half east of Yates Centre. Jake has borrowed Dave's plow and Dave in turn has drafted Jake's horse rake when a tire has fallen off his own. Both have been next-farm neighbors for years and the friendliest relations always existed between them. Things are different now and a bad row is on, which has recently resulted in Jim Bolton suing for $20,000 damages against McKinley to recover $20,000 for the alienation of his wife's affections by the said Dave Allen.

In his complaint McKinley states that he married Libbie May Dutcher in February, 1905, and had lived peacefully and happily with her up to two years ago and that since that time Allen has exerted an influence and control over her mind and that she has frequently visited McKinley in the absence of her husband. He states that in 1907 he and his wife, accompanied by the defendant, visited the Jamestown Exposition at Jamestown, Va., and that several times during the trip the defendant enticed his wife away from him. McKinley also states that last fall he and his wife, again accompanied by neighbor Allen, attended the Toronto fair for five or six days, and that "neighbor Dave" was again very attentive to Mrs. McKinley. McKinley states that even a sort of "C. O. D." code was in operation between his wife and Allen, and charges that his wife hung out signals on the McKinley house which could be seen by Allen from the windows of his home down the road, and which indicated that Jake was absent from home and that he was to be expected.

He also states that during January this year he and his wife made a trip to St. Petersburg, Fla., and that his wife wanted Allen to accompany them, which he was unable to do, but on their return Allen's frequent trips to the McKinley house in his absence in which he took the countenance to do but to begin the action in question.

The papers tell also of a recent argument between McKinley, his wife and Allen, regarding the defendant's frequent visits to the McKinley home, in which McKinley took sides with Allen. The principals to the suit are rich farmers.

An Obliging Judge.

Atlanta News. While holding a term of court at Augusta once, Judge Walton sentenced a man to seven years in prison for a grave crime. The respondent's counsel asked for a mitigation of the sentence on the ground that the prisoner's health was very poor. "Your honor," said he, "I am satisfied that my client cannot live out half that term, and I beg of you to change the sentence." "Well, under those circumstances," said the judge, "I will change the sentence. I will make it for life instead of seven years."

OVERWORKED

Boston Trained Nurse Seeing the Good Vinol Did Her Patients. Tried It Herself With Splendid Results.

"I was completely prostrated from overwork. I had no appetite, could not sleep, my kidneys, liver and bowels became inactive, and as I grew weaker I could not retain either medicine or food on my stomach and raised blood. The doctors said my condition was critical. "As I had seen Vinol prescribed for my patients with such remarkable results, I decided to try it. After the first bottle I began to improve. I continued its use and soon began to sleep and eat well; every organ in my body was strengthened and became normal, until it seemed good to be alive and I was restored to perfect health and strength. "I advise all my patients who need strength, rich red blood, and flesh to take Vinol, as it is so far superior to old-fashioned cod liver oil, emulsions, or other tonics."—Elizabeth M. Cremond, Boston, Mass. For nine years a nurse in hospital and private cases.

The reason that Vinol has such power to heal and strengthen is because it contains, with tonic iron all of the curative, medicinal and strength-creating elements of cod liver oil. Try Vinol—your money will be returned if it fails to benefit. George W. Mahood, Druggist, Kingston.
