RESERVED JUDGMENT

CASPIAN-FULFORD CASE COMPLETED.

The Evidence Seemed Much in Favor of the Plaintiffs—Contended That Mrs. Fulford's Ownership Not Proven.

The hearing of the action of the Lake Ontario & Bay of Quinte Navigation company vs. Mrs. Fulford, of Brockville, was concluded on Wednesday afternoon and judgment was reserved.

Capt. Johnson was recalled for cross-examination when the court opened at 1:30 o'clock, in the afternoon. He produced his master's certificate issued by the United States, and it was read to the court. It did not embrace Lake Ontario and the River St. Lawrence until February 23rd, 1909, when it was extended to embrace these waters. To Mr. King, witness said that when the collision occurred the nearest part of his boat was a hundred feet from the wharf. When the big boats had turned, the Kingston came right in at him, and he stopped the engine. He had not seen the Caspian, and if the Kingston had not run so close he would have kept going astern. Witness does not speak the English language very well and became a little tangled on some of the words but came out all right. He changed some of his answers given in his examination for discovery, such as the position of the boats at different periods of time. His evidence became quite tangled in parts.

Witness said when he heard the two whistles he thought they were for the Kingston, but when the Kingston did not answer, he knew the whistles were for the yacht. When asked if it was not his duty to blow the danger signal, he said it might have been, and it might not have been; he was not sure. Capt. Johnson said that he might have blown the danger signal, but did not do it as he thought the boats would go clear. "It is all right to talk about this thing now," said the captain, "but it happened very quickly, and I did not want to do anything to confuse the captain of the Caspian." Witness said he did not think there would be any collision up till the last moment and then it was too late to do anything.

"Just as the boat was passing and was very close," said the captain, "the look-out called 'all clear,' and then we struck." Witness said he intended to go ahead, but when the look-out called "all clear," he did not think it was necessary. Witness said that Mr. King's language was "perfection," but he was far too particular in his questions and the answers he required.

"Way did you not go ahead and get out of the way of the Caspian?" asked Mr. King. "In the first place it was not my duty. A steamer that has another on her own starboard bow must make way for her and the other will keep her speed and course. We were on the Caspian's starboard bow, and for another reason I was afraid of the wharf." Mr. King spent much time questioning the witness on the rules. The question of damages was again gone over by Mr. King, but no admissions or denials were made. Mr. Stewart asked a few more questions before Capt. Johnson was let out. He had been on the stand for four hours and a half.

The next witness called was Frederick Soderstrom, a sailor on the yacht. Witness said he had sailed for ten years on ocean and inland steamers, and was on the stern of the boat the day of the accident. His story of the collision was practically the same as that of previous witnesses. He told a clear story all through. He said when he called out "All clear," to his captain, the Caspian was fully fifteen feet away, and he never thought there was any danger of a collision or he would not have yelled "All clear." Witness was positive that the stern of the Caspian swung over on the yacht, and that if the large steamer had kept on her course, there would have been no collision, as she had plenty of room to pass before she swerved off her course onto the yacht. Witness said when the boats came together the yacht listed heavily to port.

Under cross-examination, witness said he was wrong in calling all clear, but was not wrong at the instant he called, as all was clear then.

This rested the case for the defence. Mr. King agreed to rest his case, without calling Capt. Esford, and this closed the case for both sides.

In his address, Mr. King said that the facts were so clearly set forth that all that was needed now was the merest summary of the evidence of the witnesses. He presented the facts that the Caspian was quite right in backing out, quite right in coming ahead, quite right in blowing her two whistles and quite right in coming on when she received no answering whistle, other than the waving of the arm of the captain of the yacht.

In his address, Mr. Young said that yet there was no proper proof that

Did You Read His Wonderful Story in the Papers?

OF INTEREST TO EVERYONE
It seems as if our people would never leave talking about the remarkable case of John Herman, 513 James street, Hamilton, Ont.

His letter in the papers—in which he tells how Gin Pills cured him of Inflammation of the Bladder and Stone in the Bladder after doctors had failed to relieve him—has already induced many sufferers to try these wonderful pills.

There is one thing about Gin Pills that creates a great deal of confidence in their virtues. This is the guarantee made by the proprietors, to promptly refund the purchase price should Gin Pills fail to do all that is claimed for them.

In order to enable every sufferer to become acquainted with this famous remedy, a trial box of Gin Pills may be obtained by sending two cents in stamps to the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, limited, Toronto. Letters should be addressed to Dept. K.W.

CASE OF STARVATION

CITY PROPERTY COMMITTEE IS IN NEED.

It Hasn't Enough Money to Do Half of What is Required in the City Buildings—No Outside Lights For the New Dome.

The city property committee had a quorum of members at its meeting yesterday afternoon but found there was no business to be transacted. Those present were Aldermen Angrove (chairman), Toye, Graham and Free. Several matters were informally discussed. Ald. Toye learned from the chairman that the bell and weather vane of the city buildings dome were both higher than the former ones. It was also made clear that no outside electric lighting could be placed on the dome this year unless the city council authorized the committee more money. All that the committee has to go through the year with is about $800, for the balance of its appropriation goes to pay for the clock and bell. Like the board of works, the property committee has been starved for money. It has to do patchwork in restoring the interior walls and ceilings to proper condition, after the big fire of last July. No further painting of the walls can be done. The police court and police magistrate's offices will have to continue shabby for another year; the city hall interior will remain unpainted; the dangerous stairway leading from the city hall to the council chamber will continue to exist; the roof of the city buildings and the small cupolas will remain unpainted; levy the high enough tax rate to run the affairs of the city.

Ald. Graham said he didn't know how the board of works was going to get along with the small appropriation it was given. Street cleaning alone would eat a big hole in it. The suggestion was made that the property committee should invite the light, heat and power committee to erect a circle or two of electric lights around the city buildings as an advertisement. Ald. Angrove said he would carry the suggestion to the chairman of the light, heat and power committee and ask him to give it his serious consideration.

THE VERY SAD DEATH.
Of Mrs. Frank McMartin, in Chicago.

A peculiarly sad death was that of Mrs. Frank McMartin, which occurred at Chicago, some days ago. In the winter one of Mrs. McMartin's children took ill with diphtheria, and was just recovering, when another child was taken down with the disease. The mother would not have them taken to the hospital, but nursed them devotedly at home. After recovery there was the necessary fumigation of the house, and during this Mrs. McMartin's overtaxed system succumbed to pneumonia. For days the disease was fought, but on the ninth day weak nature gave way and the mother had to leave her husband and her children with them through the trying times, was Mrs. McMartin's sister, Miss Eva Johnson, and she is now taking care of the three motherless little ones while the father and another sister of the mother, Mrs. Samuel G. Sutherland, of St. Louis, have brought the body for burial at St. Catharines. Rev. Dr. Macgillivray held the funeral service to-day.

Mrs. McMartin's was a beautiful character, sweetly serious, her one thought devotion to her husband, her children, and other members of her family. Very deep sympathy is felt in Kingston for all left behind to mourn for her.

GALE A TERRIFIC ONE

DID MUCH DAMAGE IN THE CITY.

The Harbor Swept Clear of Ice—Fences and Trees Were Blown Down—A Sidewalk Hurlled On to the Road.

The gale of Wednesday afternoon was the fiercest that struck Kingston in a long time. The wind blew at the rate of forty-five miles an hour, and the vigor of it could be judged by what it did to the ice in the harbor. In an hour, the harbor was clear of ice, most to Point Frederick, the ice being swept into the river, sometimes at the rate of ten miles an hour. Never has the harbor been so quickly cleared of such a mass of ice, as it is well down the river. The sight viewed from Donald Park was magnificent. There one could see the ice being driven from the upper end of the harbor, huge cakes of it being hurled against the park shore.

All afternoon and night the gale continued unabated. After midnight it seemed to increase in fury, and people feared that the tops of their houses would be blown off. This morning there was still a vigorous wind, and the harbor was as angry looking as on Wednesday afternoon, only that not a bit of ice could be seen. Though the weather was bright, work on the city buildings dome could not be proceeded with, for workmen would have been blown off the building.

The gale did a lot of minor damage throughout the city. Part of the fair grounds' fence, on Alfred street, was laid flat. On Rideau street, near Montreal street, a stretch of sidewalk was lifted and hurled onto the road. Fences are down in all parts of the city, and many houses lost shingles as a result of the wind.

At Wormwith & Co's factory, where building operations are in progress, one of the large corner-stones toppled over, and the men had to run. No person was injured.

At Portsmouth, it is reported that several trees were blown down. A fine tree in front of Dr. Wood's residence, William street, was blown down.

Report from Wilton, to-day, stated that the chimney on the cheese factory had been blown down by last night's wind storm, and also part of the roof of the Holiness Movement church.

At Harrowsmith many fences were blown down, but no other damage was reported.

"I had about two miles of fence taken down," said one farmer, "and it will mean quite a job for me to get it back in place to-day."

BURNED HIS CLOTHES

WAS BEFORE THE COURT ON VAGRANCY CHARGE.

David Edwards Arrested By the Police, Was Remanded For a Week—Another Offender Admits Taking Too Much "Tangle-foot."

There were only two offenders before Magistrate Farrell, in the police court, this morning, and they lined up in the same old way.

David Edwards did not have "money to burn," as the old saying goes, but he evidently had clothes to burn. David, who claims Deseronto as his home, did a strange act at the police station during the night. He was arrested for vagrancy, and during the time he was in the lockup, he amused himself by burning up his coat, vest, hat and boots, in the stove. As the result of his strange conduct, he was forced to make his bow before the magistrate in his shirt sleeves, also minus a collar, and without shoes for his feet. There was plenty of coal to keep the fire going, but David could not see it that way, and so heaped on his own belongings. He was cute enough to carry out his plan when there was no constable in sight. One would naturally think that a man up for vagrancy, would like to hold on to his "glad rags," but not so with "David."

"You are charged with vagrancy," said the magistrate, when the accused stood up.

"Yes, I suppose so," was the reply, "but I just came in for the night, that's all."

"I'll remand you for a week, so that we can make some inquiries," said the magistrate.

William Hazell was registered as a "plain drunk."

"Yes, I guess I got too much 'tangle-foot,'" said William, with a smile.

"But," he added, "if you give me a chance, I will sign the pledge for a year. It is quite a long time since I got a dose like this."

The magistrate then imposed a fine of $1 and costs, with the option of two days at Corbett's star boarding-house.

"Will you give me time to pay the fine?" asked Hazell.

"Yes, I'll give you time, and I hope that you will sign the pledge," replied the court.

And then William set out to raise the price of his fine, and Sergt. Snodden cried out, "Court is adjourned, clear the court," and the few spectators filed out.

Expels The Poisons.
People who suffer from sciatica, neuralgia and other ailments of a rheumatic nature say that if their muscles were being pulled to pieces with red hot linchors the suffering could be no greater. The nerves affected are in a state of acute inflammation due to the presence of irritant poisons in the blood. Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure relieves these ailments promptly and cures them permanently because it neutralizes and expels the poison from the system. It is a certain cure and relief is usually given by the first few doses. Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is a great blood purifier and spring tonic. In bottles 50c, at Wade's drug store.
