TOWNSHIP PROTESTS

AGAINST THE SIZE OF THE CITY'S BILL.

For Treating Its Smallpox Cases—Reeve Rankin Appeared Before the Board of Health on Tuesday Afternoon.

The board of health met Tuesday afternoon, with S. B. Bailey (chairman) Mayor Couper, J. D. Thompson, J. H. McLeod, H. Taylor and A. Strachan in attendance.

Reeve Rankin, of Kingston township, was present to protest against the bill of over $500 sent to his council for treatment of small-pox patients at the Fort hospital. A letter was read from J. L. Whiting, K.C., on behalf of the township council, stating that the council refused to pay on a basis of the total cost of furnishing and maintaining the hospital. It would pay only a reasonable amount for maintenance and attendance. Reeve Rankin addressed the board on the matter, pointing out the unfairness and the unbusiness-like method of the charge. The patients, he said, should be charged at a reasonable rate by the day or week. The matter will be further considered by the board.

property near the corner of Albert and King streets be abated at once. On sanitary grounds, the board recommended the construction of a tile sewer on Wellington street between Johnson and William streets.

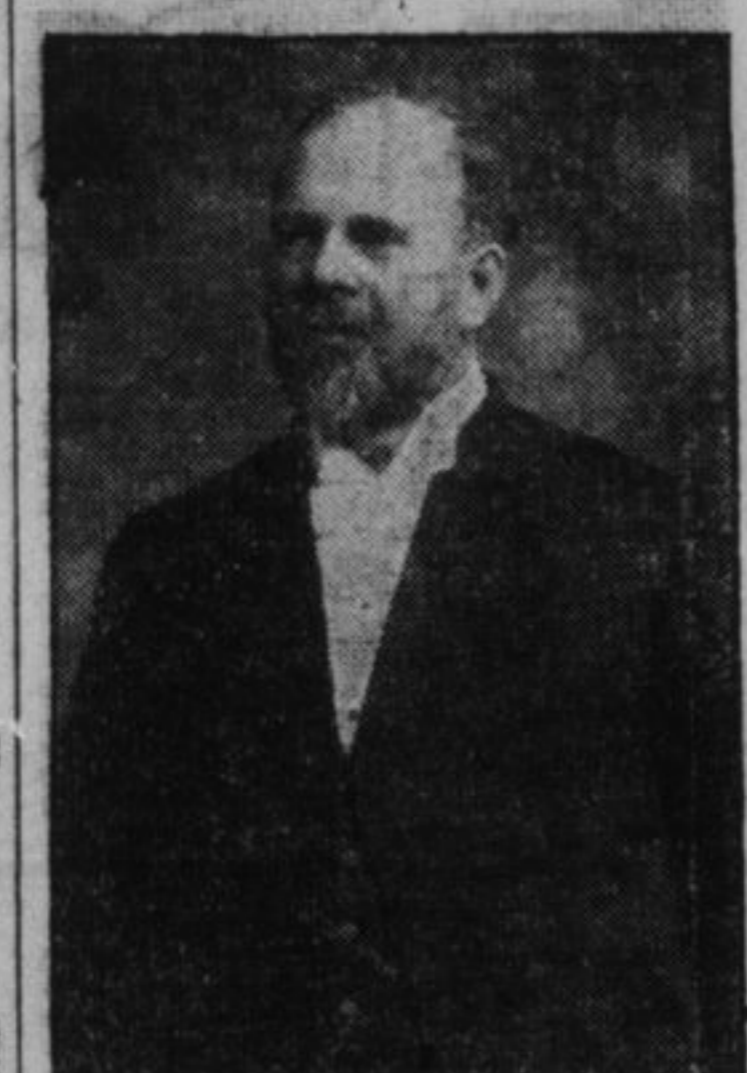

On motion of Mayor Couper and Mr. McLeod, the medical health officer was instructed to file an inventory of the shacks used by guards in watching houses under quarantine, and have the shacks placed in the city's yard at the corner of Ontario and William streets. It was stated that some of these shacks had been carried off and were being used as back porches.

A CLERGYMAN SUED

Over a Legacy to St. John's Church, Bath.

On the 14th, Justice McMahon will try an interesting will case here. Heirs of the late Peter Churchill Thomas, of Ernestown township, who died in 1877, are suing Rev. A. L. McTeer, rector of St. John's church, Bath, to have set aside the will of the deceased, made two days before his death, thirty-two years ago. The ground taken is that religious bodies are not allowed to participate in legacies made within six months of a legator's death.

By the terms of Mr. Thomas' will the use of his farm was given to his brothers, till their death. Then the rent or produce from it was to go to the rector of St. John's church, Bath, in perpetuity. The surviving legatee died about a month ago, and steps are now being taken to have the farm go to other heirs instead of allowing the present and future Anglican rectors of Bath to benefit. The legacy means the addition of $150 a year to Mr. McTeer's stipend and perhaps more to that of his successors, so the lawsuit is one worth defending. J. B. Walkem, K.C., is acting for the synod of Ontario, which will defend Mr. McTeer's claim.

MAY REDUCE TERM

IF RANDALL TELLS THE REAL TRUTH.

Two Men Brought Before Him, But Neither Were Right—A Case Over Sale of a Horse Settled.

Edward Randall was called in police court this morning. The prisoner was sworn and said, under oath, that he got the liquor from the man he told about. Two men were taken in charge, but neither proved to be the one. On the stand the prisoner gave out another name. "Three months in jail," said the magistrate, "when you tell us the right name some may be taken off."

The next case called was that of William Camie, who was arrested on a warrant taken out by William McAdoo, charging him with defrauding his creditors. W. P. Nickle appeared for the defendant and T. J. Rigney for the plaintiff. Camie pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by judge and jury.

William McAdoo, the plaintiff, was called. He is a farmer and a well-known name in the township of Kingston. He sold accused a horse in August last, for $115, taking his note for three months, from August 17th, 1908. Witness said it was over a month ago that he last saw the horse in his possession, and the note is not yet paid. It was at the last sitting of the division court, witness recovered for it, and witness had negotiations under way with Camie for payment for the horse. "About a week ago Camie said he could not pay me and would not pay me," said witness. "Yesterday," said the witness, "I met Camie at Strachan's corner, and he said 'I do not want any more trouble, we will go down and settle it.'" Witness said that he went with Camie to Mr. Rigney's office, and the latter told witness he wanted to settle it now, as it was the last day he would settle it, as he was going away, and as he had sold everything he owned he had money to pay it. Witness said Mr. Rigney not coming in, Camie and witness went down to a King street restaurant and had dinner, while there they met Mr. Roddy, who is associated with Camie in business, and again Camie said he was going away. Witness said that after dinner they went back to Mr. Rigney's office to settle it, but when they arrived there Camie would not settle. Camie said he would give them a judgment against Roddy in part payment and pay the rest in cash, and if they did not take that he would give nothing, and he was going away and defied witness to get it. Witness said Camie had a team of horses, a lumber wagon, gang plow, horse rakes, harrow, mowing machine and other farming implements.

To Mr. Nickle witness said he took a note, because Camie did not have any cash. Witness said Camie drove a bus to the military camp in October last and in the winter Camie was getting out lumber above Toronto.

Quite a little squabble took place between counsel over some questions over an agreement given to Mr. Rigney, whereby Camie signed over his interest in the lumber business to pay McAdoo. Witness denied anything about the agreement, but finally owned up that he knew it existed. It took some time before witness finally acknowledged that he knew of the agreement.

Witness acknowledged that Camie told him he was in hard luck and had to get out, so he sold his stuff and was getting out.

Mr. Rigney then produced the agreement and it was read. To Mr. Rigney, witness said he offered to take the face value of the note, $115, and settle the case. This offer was refused.

The case was finally settled by the plaintiff accepting $100 in cash and the judgment held by Camie against Roddy as security for the other $15.

An Insane Youth.

On Monday evening at nine o'clock a young lad from Bedford was arrested and brought to the police station. He was brought by his father and taken to a doctor to be examined as to his sanity. While at the doctor's office he was left alone for a few moments and when wanted he was gone. He wandered around town until Tuesday night, when he was taken in charge and again taken to the station. Wednesday afternoon he was removed to Rockwood hospital. It is hoped that in a few weeks he will be all right again. The lad is only eighteen years old, and every hope is held out for his speedy recovery.

Likely By A Tramp.

The police, on Wednesday, recovered a lawn mower stolen from Sowards' coal yard. The mower was found in a second-hand store, but no arrests have yet been made. It seems that some of these things are taken by tramps who wander along from town to town, picking up anything they can see and after selling it move on to the next town and repeat the operation.

One of Port Hope's most highly respected citizens, Capt. William Manson, passed away, Tuesday morning, after a lengthy illness from paralysis of the stomach. A widow, one daughter, at home, and two sons, Percy, Port Hope, and George, of Rochester, N.Y., survive. He was an uncle of Mrs. O. J. Hickey, Earl street, Kingston.

Bitten By A Rat.

A rather peculiar accident happened to a three-months-old child on Division street, on Tuesday afternoon. The child was playing out on the sidewalk running from the steps to the main walk. The little tot was sitting down in the middle of the walk, and, child-like, put its little hand down in a hole in one of the boards. Suddenly the mother heard the child scream and ran out to find the child's hand held down between the boards by a large rat that had grabbed one of its fingers. A nasty wound was inflicted before the child got free. The bite was dressed by a doctor and no serious results are feared.

Some wonderful scenes are shown on the great pigeon ranch at Los Angeles, the biggest in the world. J. Douglas Barker, the Scotch tenor, appears in illustrated songs.

TRANSFER OF LICENSE

From Ontario House to the Frontenac.

Joseph Paradis, proprietor of the Ontario house, opposite No. 1 fire station, is retiring from the hotel business on account of ill-health, and has sold his liquor license to W. Teller, proprietor of the British-American and Frontenac hotels. Mr. Teller took this method as the easiest and surest of getting a license for the Frontenac, which is to be opened about June 15th. The license commissioners will be asked to make the transfer from the Ontario to the Frontenac, to take effect June 14th. The Ontario house is owned by ex-Ald. D. J. Millan, who will be the loser by the transfer. It has been ruled, on various occasions, that an hotel liquor license does not belong to the hotel, but to the manager, whether he be proprietor or lessee.
