FRIEND TO FARMERS

WAS LATE DR. FLETCHER, NATURALIST.

His Work in Showing Farmers How to Save Their Crops Was Immensely Valuable—A Sketch of a Busy Career.

One of the most interesting and most likeable men in Canada was the late Dr. James Fletcher, Dominion Entomologist and Botanist, Ottawa. Ottawa was his home at death, but a great part of his busy life was spent on the western prairies. His aim in life was to find out facts and to make these facts known to people to whom they would be of use. He used to say that one-third of the crops raised in America were destroyed by enemies of one kind or another, and it was his business to help the farmer to distinguish his friends from his foes, and thus to save part of that lost third.

At first the western farmer thought him a harmless idiot, but the day came when they wired for him to come to help them save their crops from insect or weed enemies. Life was full of interest for him. Where the unobservant man saw only a few bugs on the weeds, in a fence corner he saw a battle going on that had to do with the fortunes of the west in the next decade. Prejudices had no place in his make-up. The loathsomeness of an object never turned him against it until he had examined both the object and his mind to see if the loathsomeness was only ignorant prejudice which blinded the holder to real beauty and usefulness.

The horror that the average person has of snakes, he held, was simply prejudice. A snake, he said, was really one of the most beautiful creatures in existence. He frequently lectured before Normal School classes. On such occasions, as likely as not, he would bring from his pocket a handful of wriggling garter snakes. There would be a series of little shrieks from the class, but he would calmly argue that this was simply the result of lack of knowledge fostered by prejudice. Within five minutes he would have the most timid girl in the room holding one of those wrigglers in her hands and admiring its markings as if it were a jewel.

Dr. Fletcher's work in showing farmers how to save their crops was immensely valuable but far more valuable was his work in increasing the content of life for men and women of all classes and professions.

Ralph Connor Then Unknown. That a period of fifteen years marks many changes is emphasized at the banquet given Rudyard Kipling by the Canadian Club in Winnipeg last year. The novelist, Ralph Connor (Rev. C. W. Gordon) was also a guest of honor, and among the twenty-five privileged ladies who occupied the gallery was his aunt, Mrs. Parker. After the banquet he saw to it that she met the little man of might.

"I remember the last time you were in this city, Mr. Kipling," said she. "You had your hat on, and you were in the first-class coach and Charlie's traveling tourist. He wouldn't be able to see him and he'd only feel badly."

"I wish you had come back," was Kipling's reply, delivered with much emphasis. "I might have had a sandwich. The meals on the C.P.R. at that time were wretched."

Priest Denies Charge. The Quebec papers are publishing a letter from Father Lestane, an Oblate, written to Archbishop Langevin of St. Boniface, on the execution of Thomas Scott by Louis Riel.

"Riel," he says, "never consulted me, either before or after the deed. I did not go to Fort Garry often, and I do not remember having seen Riel alone except the day of the execution of Scott, a half an hour, perhaps, before his death. I was accompanied by Donald Smith, now Lord Strathcona. We found Riel alone, there and then beseeched him not to execute Scott and not to dishonor by a stain that would never be wiped out, the provisional government. Riel received us politely, but flatly refused to grant our supplication."

Riel had previously, at his behest, pardoned an Englishman, Boulton, and a French-Canadian, who had been condemned.

The above letter is written, so the papers declare, because of the alleged persistence of the anti-Catholic press in affirming that the Roman Catholic missionaries had counseled the execution of Scott.

George Graham's Joke. Ever since the famous encounter in the House of Commons between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. G. E. Foster in regard to the manipulation of trust funds, the whole current of proceedings of the Lower House of Parliament has been changed by frequent invocations of Rule 10, which forbids the saying of anything offensive to a member. But the climax came the other night when in the middle of a dreary discussion on the budget the Minister of Railways was taken with a sneezing fit amid the midst of a fiery speech emitted several loud exclamations. There was a loud laugh from the Liberal benches, and "Genial George" turned to some of the men behind him with the remark:

"I suppose that if George Foster were here he would consider those as disagreeable remarks."

Banks of Newfoundland. Newfoundland would be nothing without that great submarine plateau known as the "banks," on which all the fishing is done. At a small station within the edges of the great bank that the cod loves so well the sea is quite smooth. It is usual for vessels fishing on the bank to inquire from those that have arrived from the open sea as to what sort of weather it is "aboard."

DIAMONDS IN ONTARIO.

Peterboro Man Holds Secret of Precious Jewel Mines.

The Peterboro Examiner says: That there are diamond mines in Ontario has been stated, but the fact is known only by one man, and that man is O. S. Ferguson, who has for the past five years conducted a tin shop on Hunter street. To have something in the neighborhood of five hundred real, sparkling diamonds in his possession is the good fortune of Mr. Ferguson, and an Examiner representative the other day was shown several of these precious stones. They are at present mostly in their raw state, only two having been finished, and are ready to be set in a piece of jewelry. They shine very brilliantly and are fine samples of this precious stone. The unfinished ones are just as they were found, some being very small, while a number of them are as large as a quarter of an inch in diameter. That they are diamonds, Mr. Ferguson has satisfied himself. Careful tests and examinations of them have been made by Tiffany, New York, and other prominent diamond dealers in the United States and in Toronto, and Mr. Ferguson has been assured that they are diamonds, and worth considerable money.

Where the precious stones were located, the discoverer of them alone knows. He refuses to give any clue as to their location, but says that they were found some place in Ontario sixteen years ago. Mr. Ferguson was at one time engaged in mining, but it was not diamonds for which he mined. His discovery of the costly stones was, strange to say, at a time when he little thought of finding such things. One evening, at sunset, he said, after he had finished his work, he stood for a while watching the crops picking up the little stones that, to him, presented a bright and glistening appearance. He picked up several and kept them, deciding to find out if they were of any value. They were evidently washed out of the ground by rain, Mr. Ferguson stating that he found them all on the surface, never having to turn a bit of earth. The diamonds in their raw state, resemble very much a piece of alum. The land in which they were found has never been known to grow anything and it is quite rocky and rough.

About five years ago, on the occasion of a visit to Cobourg, the great prima donna, Madame Albani, tried to purchase the diamonds from him. She was giving a concert there and during her stay in the town learned of his possession. Mr. Ferguson was at that time a resident of Cobourg. The great singer visited him and offered him a large sum of money for the stones. She said that she wanted them to make a necklace, but he would not sell and if he continues in his present mind, he never intends to dispose of them. At different times he has had good opportunities to do so, receiving splendid offers. Neither does he intend to disclose the place where they were found. He remarked that he would leave it for some one else to find out the same as he had done.

At the marriage of his daughter Mr. Ferguson presented her with a diamond ring, which cost him three hundred dollars to have finished. He also gave others of them away to relatives. He has two that he placed in the dark in order to show their brilliancy. One time he placed them along with those that were purchased at a big price by a Cobourg gentleman. The man did not see Mr. Ferguson arrange them, and when asked to choose his own he could not do so. He picked the others.

A Duel in Lisbon. Lisbon, June 10.—Domenico Centeno and Count Arseno, former minister, fought a fierce duel with swords in a local park. The cause of the dispute was political. Centeno is a friend of Dr. Jose Alpoim, chief of the Progressive dissidents. Centeno finally ran his sword through his opponent's thigh; and the encounter came to an end.

Worried to Death

Indigestion. Loss of Sleep. Heart Palpitation.

A Case That Proves Prompt Action is Wise When Health is Poor.

"At night I would wake up with vague feelings of fear and numbness in my hands and other parts of the body," writes E. X. Smeaton of St. John's. "I had grown thin and pale, and at night it was very difficult to get enough warmth in my feet to get asleep. My digestion was poor, and appetite very uncertain. The form of nervousness that worried me most was starting at every little thing, which resulted in such violent heart action as sometimes frightened me. Finally I had to give up my work, which was inside office work, so languid, nervous and weak had I become. Through the intervention of a friend I was induced to use Ferreroze. My appetite improved at once, circulation also improved and Ferreroze, accompanied by the renewal of my blood and natural warmth seemed to come back to my limbs. At the same time Ferreroze built up my constitution. I became quite strong and resumed my occupation. In brief, I am well."

Ferreroze is the only remedy of its kind in the world—it makes you feel better at once; when you are tired, dull, dispirited—when you feel there is nothing in life for you, that's the time to take Ferreroze.

What a change Ferreroze makes! Your blood sings through your veins, carrying nourishment to every nook and corner of the body, you feel the exultant thrill of abundant nerve force, you learn the luxury and delight of lying at your best—in perfect good health.

Just try Ferreroze and see how much better you feel; it's the one remedy in all the world that will get you bracing health at once. Sold everywhere, 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Put a little "Sunshine" in your home

An old-fashioned, oil-working furnace is a non-producer.

It consumes the coal, but through leaks and cracks wastes the heat. It is not economy to have such a furnace in your own home, or in your tenant's home.

If you are thinking of building you should be interested in Sunshine Furnace. It adds 100 per cent. to home comforts.

As soon as you let the contract for your house decide on your furnace. The "Sunshine" man will be pleased to tell you just how the rooms ought to be laid out with an eye to securing greatest heat from the smallest consumption of coal.

If you want to experiment with the question don't specify "Sunshine."

If you want to settle the question specify "Sunshine."
