Liverpool, June 23.—A full-fledged riot between Orangemen and Catholics is raging in various parts of the city to-day. Scores of persons have been injured, including a number of policemen and numerous cases of sacking the houses and stores of the contending parties.

The riot is so serious that few persons, not actually involved in the fighting, have dared to venture upon the streets. A number of spectators have been injured by stray missiles. Owing to the widespread nature of the trouble, and the peculiar causes leading to it, the authorities have been practically powerless.

Sufficient Evidence. Saturday Evening Post.

In an emergency the manufacturer of Limburger cheese was forced to use strategy with a shipment. Ordinarily this product went in special cars, but in this instance no car was available and the order must be filled. Two hundred pounds of the fragrant comestible was put in a rough, oblong box and taken to the railway baggage room. Then the manufacturer bought a ticket for himself and the box and entered the train. At the first stop he went ahead to the baggage car to see that there was no trouble. He stood by the box in a desolate attitude and shaded his eyes with his hand. The baggage man was sympathetic. "A relative?" he asked. "It is my brother. 'Well,' said the railroad man philosophically, 'you have one consolation. He's dead, all right.'"

SUICIDE CLUB AT SCHOOL. Boys Drew Lots To See Who Should Die First.

The existence of a suicide club has been revealed at the school at Clermont Ferrand in France, where the lad named Meny, aged fourteen, recently shot himself in the classroom.

Three of the boys drew lots to decide who should kill himself first. The lot fell to Meny, and when he hesitated his comrades accused him of cowardice. On the evening before he blew his brains out, they held a rehearsal of the tragedy, and chatted out on the classroom floor the place where Meny was to stand when shooting himself.

A list has been found in possession of one of the boys naming those who were either to commit suicide or be "put out of the way" because they knew too much about the suicide club.

Ten minutes before Meny took his life his neighbor borrowed a watch from another boy and said to Meny, "You know that you must kill yourself at twenty minutes past three. You have now only ten minutes to live." When he uttered the words, "The time has come!" the unhappy lad rose, walked to the spot marked in chalk, placed the revolver to his head, and pulled the trigger.

One of the dead boy's comrades immediately picked up the revolver, which has not been seen since.

THROUGH A BRIDGE. Runaway Horse Takes a Tumble At Guelph.

Guelph, Ont., June 23.—Only a collision with a telegraph post prevented W. H. Beattie, druggist, of this city, from being hurled by a runaway horse over the C.P.R. trestle bridge near the depot into the river below.

Freed from the buggy in the collision, the frightened animal, owned by Mr. La Fontaine, bolted on the bridge. Its hoofs became lodged in the trestle work, and it rolled over into the river about twenty-five feet below.

Mr. Beattie, who was thrown out unhurt, tumbled into the water, about four feet deep, but the animal could not be made budge. Thinking that its back or neck was broken, it was finally decided to let the animal drown, but no sooner did it get its head under water than it revived and struggled out little worse for the experience. Mr. Beattie was unhurt, and only the buggy suffered damage.

UPSETS THE VERDICT. Which Had Gone Against Canadian Northern RR.

Toronto, June 23.—The appeal court this morning allowed the appeal of the Canadian Northern railway in the case brought against the railway by the Jencks Machine company, St. Catharines. The railway was sued by the company some time ago for the loss of a carload of tools sent from Kakabeka Falls over the company's route to St. Catharines. The tools went to the bottom of Lake Superior with the wreck of the steamer Monarch. The St. Catharines company was successful in the first action. The appeal court now upsets that verdict.
