 Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.
 Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.
 Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good; do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.
 If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Barbara's Donation.
 By Elizabeth Van Nest.

If the young minister had been of a sanguine, easily satisfied temperament he might have accommodated himself to circumstances and drifted along as his predecessors had done. But James Morgan brought the enterprise of a modern theologian to the little hamlet, straggling down either side of a high hill, on a summit of which perched the church, like a snow-temple.

As the church occupied the center of the village the minister reasoned that it ought to be the centre of interest, also. But try as he would, he could not awaken the devotional spirit. His parishioners were negligent in their offerings, the attendance was small and interest slight. His sermons were lost on the slow-thinking worshippers; his musical departures were a failure.

But the Rev. Mr. Morgan did not despair. He had the square jaw that accompanies the aggressive nature. The elasticity of his hopes was phenomenal. He simply would not be discouraged. He had accepted the call in full knowledge of the drawbacks. The score of shabby houses under the name of Maywood represented only a tithe of the church membership. It was the prosperous farmers whose indifference he must change and conquer with his eloquence.

So James Morgan brought to Maywood a large stock of air-castle material with which he beguiled his leisure. He would institute many reforms. The church should escape from an enveloping stagnation and, assuming a paying basis, make many missions glad of its plenty. It should be the mainspring, social and ecclesiastical, on which the village turned. He even proposed that the parsonage be let and the proceeds devoted to the county hospital, a proposal that met with unanimous approval, and the minister took up his residence under Widow Fleming's roof.

Until the end of the first quarter things moved smoothly. The new minister found work to do wherever he looked. And, being generous, he forgot to be cautious when need pulled at his purse strings. Hardly realizing it he at length found his generosity must be governed by his means until he received his first quarter's salary. But at the end of the second quarter the first quarter's salary was still unpaid. With a board of trustees in delinquency, the minister, blushing and stammering, informed his parishioners of their negligence.

While their profuse excuses satisfied him he could not see his way clear to satisfy Mrs. Fleming. The fact that what was a failure would not recompense her for his board and lodging. Therefore, the Rev. Mr. Morgan did the only thing possible from his point of view. He went to the city next day with a mysterious package. Shortly after the doctor drove three miles to borrow his microscope and was informed that he had disposed of it.

 "I have so little time for experiments, you know," he explained with heightened color. "I could use the money to better advantage."
 From this emanated rumor that at length reached Barbara Dean's ears. The new minister was so philanthropic he had given up his pet hobby to aid the poor.

A wee and timid question mark set itself upon her heart. Perhaps she had been hasty. There was none quite like him—so big, so firm, so brave. It was very singular that he had not asked again—he who, in theory, scorned debt. Pretty Barbara did not know that the hope crushed by her laughing was the only elastic one in his stock of dreams.

As the third quarter drew to a close without remuneration the minister mentioned the fact again, this time with fewer blushes and a graver air. Lightly shone from every window of the cottage, including his study and bedroom. The minister was tired and in no mood to participate in a surprise party on his landlady. But, knowing her limited space, it would be cheerful to demand privacy. He must meet her guests, who had crowded her apartment into his, with ministerial welcome. Forcing the weariness from his face he ran lightly up the steps and opened his study door.

Ranged around the wall was a solid row of chairs, from which smiling faces glowed upon him in welcome. Overturning the centre table and piled on the floor was a collection that at first seemed to be the stock of a grocery store. He singled out a sack of flour and various stone jugs with corn-cob stoppers as he picked his way to a small oasis of bare floor beyond. But, stumbling against one of the bulging packages, the paper burst and a stream of walnuts poured forth.

"ardon me," he gasped, trying to repair the damage on his knees. "Very awkward of me, I'm sure?"
 The silence was portentous, and, flushed with confusion, the minister looked up straight into Barbara Dean's eyes. The light in them, tantalizing, amused, was his undoing. The walnuts slipped from his grasp and, striking another bag, liberated a pack of popcorn. He stood up guiltily.
 "Please forgive me, Mrs. Fleming," he apologized. "I am sorry if my awkwardness has disclosed your gifts too soon."

"They're not Mrs. Fleming's," corrected Deacon Brown. "They're yours. We thought you'd give you a donation." "I don't mind," he said, "but I don't want to be a burden."
 The Rev. Mr. Morgan unconsciously tucked a step. "For me? But, dear me, I have no use for these—raw commodities. It is very kind of you—but—"
 "Beside this, there's a side of meat and a firkin of butter outside," put in Mrs. Fleming, proudly. "Now, that you've seen them, I'd better take the missuses out, too. It's so warm in here."
 "By all means," said the minister, wiping his forehead, and in the general conversation that ensued he found himself near Barbara Dean.

"I did not expect to see you," he said in a low voice.
 "I am spending a few days with Cousin Bess," she answered. "Are you so devoted to Maywood that you have forgotten your old friends?"
 "Only those who wished to forget me," significantly. Then, with a despairing glance at the loaded table, "What shall I do with it?" he asked. "A family of ten could not consume that perishable stuff before it spoils. Why did they bring so much?"
 "The unwritten law of a donation party is that none may attend without bringing a present," she said composedly.
 "Then what special donation must I think you for?" ironically. "The sack of flour?"
 She laughed. His dismay was so comical. She did not know the desperate state of his finances. "I did not bring anything," she said. "I could not—to you."

 Something in her voice lent sudden flexibility to his most inelastic hope. With her love to cheer him on he would yet make of Maywood his ideal church.

"Come with me a moment," he said, leading her to the deserted window, nearest the church. "I had bright dreams when I came here, Barbara," he went on. "I have learned to love the church and the people. If I go away now my work will be wasted. But I think I shall go when my year is up."
 "Where?" she asked quickly.
 "Anywhere—to any church that pays a salary," desperately. "That collection represents my work for nine months. It is not enough, Barbara. You said that no one may attend a donation party without a present. I am waiting for yours. If you want me to stay here you must do your part. The deacons and elders have looked after the needs of the material man. You must provide for his spiritual nature."

"She played with the widow's best curtains nervously. "You said you would not ask me again," she reminded.
 "I have not. You did well to say so," bitterly. "If my work is worth only butter and flour, you are justified in forgetting me as quickly as possible. Maywood can keep its donation. I shall leave at once."
 A change flashed across her pretty face. The mischief vanished, and in its place stole a tender blush. "Don't be hasty, James," she whispered, with a furtive glance over her shoulder. "Perhaps with my donation, we can use the rest. When will the parsonage be empty?"
 "I'll give the tenant notice tomorrow," he answered, happily. Then, under cover of the widow's voluminous curtains, with the church looking on in solemn witness, he accepted her donation with a kiss.

"A man's good opinion of himself is the real thing."

A GUARANTEED CURE
 For Indigestion and Dyspepsia

There is no hesitation or quibbling about the claims which the Coleman Medicine Company make for their wonderful "Little Digesters". They come out straight with the statement that "Little Digesters" will positively cure even chronic Indigestion or Dyspepsia, as well as Heartburn and Sour Stomach.
 They GUARANTEE "Little Digesters" to cure. If they fail, you get your money back, promptly and without question.
 Of course they would not make such positive statements, or give such a guarantee, if they had not proved, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that "Little Digesters" WILL CURE.
 "Little Digesters" do it simply and naturally, too, by helping out the weakened stomach—supplying just what it needs in the process of digestion, and enabling it to assimilate the food. Soon the whole system regains its vigor, and the stomach needs no further help. "Little Digesters" are put up in little red boxes, sold for 25c by your druggist, or mailed by the Coleman Medicine Co., of Toronto.
