AT THE POLICE COURT

WOMAN FINED IN THE HAIR-PULLING CASE.

Members of "Indian List Stated That They Secured Their Liquor at Portsmouth—One Fined $10 and Costs, and Other Remanded.

"Look here, your worship, that woman pulled this bunch of hair out of my head."

Holding up a parcel, which contained hair, a Stanley street woman made the above remark, in police court, this morning. The woman accused is her neighbor, and the case arose over a row the two had on Wednesday afternoon. One charged the other with assault, and there was also a counter-charge. The magistrate straightened out the case in about twenty minutes. "I'm not guilty," said one, when arraigned.

"No, sir, not me; it is just the reverse," said the other, when accused.

"But she grabbed hold of me by the hair and pulled me off the door step," charged complainant No. 1. "She had been drinking whiskey, and accused me of calling her names. She pulled me down on the ground, and threatened to kill me."

"She struck me first," said complainant No. 2. "She called me names, and I do not interfere with her. When she struck me, I struck back at her. She accused me of not looking after my children."

"But what made her strike you?" asked the magistrate.

"I don't know, but I guess she has been going to do it for some time," said complainant No. 1, exhibiting some bruises on her arms, and No 2 did likewise.

"Your husband was the cause of all that," said No. 1.

"No; it was you, all right," was the reply.

After weighing all the evidence, the magistrate came to the conclusion that complainant No. 2 was responsible for the trouble, and imposed a fine of $3 and costs, or fifteen days.

No evidence was required to show the magistrate that Daniel Dougherty, one of Inspector Wright's "Indians," had been drinking yesterday, he was fined for being drunk and disorderly. He secured his freedom by paying his fine, and when he lined up this morning, he was intoxicated.

"Where did you get the liquor you have been drinking since you were here yesterday," asked the court.

Dougherty said that he would explain, and was put into the box. He then told the magistrate that he had been served with liquor at Westlake's, at Portsmouth.

The magistrate said that he was afraid the "Indian" list was not of much use, when about half of the men obtained liquor at Portsmouth.

Inspector Wright said that he regretted very much that he had no jurisdiction in Portsmouth. He had himself suggested that this district be covered.

The magistrate then remanded Dougherty for a week, stating that he was in no fit condition to be around.

David Hogan, also an "Indian," admitted having a few drinks, but denied being drunk. "I only had four drinks the night I was arrested," he said.

"And where did you get the liquor you had this morning?" asked the magistrate, observing that he was rather unsteady.

"I got it out at Portsmouth," was the reply.

"I will impose a fine of $10 and costs, or one month," said the magistrate. "This is the minimum penalty. I would give you more, but I am satisfied that you told me where you got your liquor."

WITHDREW THE CHARGE.

A Settlement Was Made in the Ring Case.

A settlement was, to-day, made in the ring case, referred to in last night's Whig. The young man, who charged another with stealing the ring, withdrew the charge, and the accused was given his liberty.

The young lady, to whom the ring was given, verified the story told by the accused, when he was taken in charge. He said that the girl had given him the ring, and at the police station this morning, she said that this was true. She wanted the accused liberated, stating that it was not right that he should be locked up when he had committed no crime. She was told that in order to secure the young man's liberty she would have to get the "other fellow" in the case, to one who had the warrant issued, to withdraw the charge. She immediately set out after the "other fellow," and in short order the charge was withdrawn, and the young man given his liberty. The police handed the ring over to the young lady, and the case ended.

Carried an "Indian."

There is one member of the "Indian list" who has an emblem of his lodge in the shape of a little dummy Indian, which he carries in his vest pocket. When a friend asks him to have a drink he says "no," and pulling out his little "Indian" tells his friend that he is a member of that order. Wednesday night, however, he forgot about his lodge and it was the cause of his downfall. He paid for his spree in court to-day.

GET OUT AND BOOST!

KINGSTON FOR CONVENTION MEETINGS.

A Shame That the Masonic Grand Lodge Was Not Secured—Kingston Has Plenty of Accommodation.

Kingston, July 30.—(To the Editor): It is to be deeply regretted that Kingston did not try to secure the meeting of the masonic grand lodge for next year. To lay the blame on the lack of hotel accommodation here, as indicated in your issue of Saturday last, is a ridiculous statement, in this respect, is far ahead of Belleville, which boasts one up-to-date hotel, and is also ahead of Brockville, which secured the meeting three years ago.

One important thing which appears to be overlooked is that we possess accommodations for over 2,000 students attending the university, different colleges and Collegiate Institute of which would be available for delegates and in addition, for a meeting of this character, many of the best homes in our city would be opened up and a hearty welcome extended. It is safe to say that Kingston could comfortably and satisfactorily take care of from three to four thousand delegates and friends in its hotels and private homes.

The fact of the matter is that Kingston has had so few conventions that we do not realize their importance. One such as that just lost to the city means for 1,200 delegates and friends for a stay of four or five days a loss of at least $30,000. A very large number of delegates are accompanied by their wives and families who, during the convention meetings, are visiting the stores and making purchases.

Kingston is in every way better suited for a convention city than any city in Eastern Ontario (Ottawa alone has a population of 100,000). It has a railway service, magnificent parks, places of historic interest and the Thousand Islands at our doors.

Permit me to ask if this continual harping that Kingston wants a new hotel is doing the city any good? Will it build a new hotel? The progressive cities are those that are advertising what they have got and not what they haven't got.

The failure to secure these conventions rests entirely on the board of trade, who, I understand, have appointed for this purpose, you cannot get something for nothing, neither can these conventions be secured without the expenditure of a little money. The lodges or societies cannot be expected to pay this from their own treasury, and when a convention is held in their city, it is a loss to them.

Let the board of trade get in touch with every lodge and society in the city and find out when and where their next convention is to be held and have badges or pennants and booklets advertising the city prepared and arranged to be given to every delegate attending the convention boosting Kingston for the next meeting. If necessary have a special representative (a live one) of the city visit these conventions and talk Kingston up from morning till night. [This is the plan followed by the cities alive to the benefits to be derived from these conventions and the only one which will be successful.]

Now is the time to get busy for the Oldfellow's for 1910. A determined effort should be put forth to secure this and as they meet next month in Ottawa a time should be wasted.—A BOOSTER.

This is Hope For the Silver Dart.

Special to the Whig.

Ottawa, July 30.—The weather is ideal at Potawawa camp, to-day, and Messrs. McCurdy and Baldwin have, at last, got their new engine, from which they expect so much, working in the Silver Dart.

"We just got the new engine in the Silver Dart and are trying it out this afternoon," said Mr. McCurdy. "We will not be able to make a test in the air for some days yet. The machine has not the wings on yet, but the new engine is in and we are trying it out, it seems to work well."

"Will Dr. Graham Bell be at the camp," asked your representative.

"I don't think so," replied Mr. McCurdy.

Though officials at the camp are constantly visiting here, there is no intimation yet from the department.

The test of the new engine and engines are of great interest, for it is thought they will develop speed and altitudes never before reached in any Canadian air flying machine.

TO THE AID OF SPAIN.

Will Britain, France and Germany Give Help?

London, July 30.—The feasibility of Britain, France and Germany going to the aid of Spain, in suppressing the Moroccan rebellion, is being considered by the British cabinet to-day. On the best authority it is learned that King Edward, alarmed for the safety of Queen Victoria—of Spain, who is his niece, and King Alfonso, has requested the cabinet to communicate with the French and German ministers regarding the sending of a mixed force of reinforcements to the Spanish straits in Morocco. The king cites the joint action of the powers during the Chinese Boxer uprising as a precedent for similar action. Owing to her peculiar interests in Morocco, it is believed France would be favorable to such a move, and if France and England urge the course, there is a strong probability that Germany will join them.
