NAVY OF FRANCE TO BE REFORMED.

New Minister to Sweep Away Abuses and Restore Fighting Strength of Warships.

ADMIRAL DE LAPEYRIERE.
Paris, Aug. 27.—Admiral Boue de Lapeyriere, the new minister of marine, is engaged in a complete reorganization of the French navy. In an interview with a representative of the Matin he declared that the number of squadrons in the new navy would depend on the number of battleships available, but provision was made for a minimum of five squadrons of four vessels each. Discussing the question of armored cruisers the admiral declared that he was not in favor of this type of warship. "Our vessels ought to be capable of confronting any battleship," explained the admiral. "I do not think that speed can compensate for the disproportion in armament and protection. If an effort has to be made, let it be complete. "Concerning torpedo boat destroyers and submarines, I consider that they are indispensable for the protection of our coasts. They are not intended to accompany the squadrons. From this they are debarré by their weak tonnage. In short, their function is to be vessels of offensive defense. The new minister has resolved to strike off all obsolete vessels, among which are the Courbet, Formidable, Sfax and Eclair and all the sailors who are to be found everywhere except on board their ships, a merciless campaign is to be undertaken against them.

Got His Fare; That's All.
A bell boy at a local hotel was given a rare treat this morning. He had a trip out to the outer station and back on the street car, and it did not cost him anything. It happened thus: A well-known commercial traveller left an umbrella, two parcels, and a large clock, in the hotel. When he boarded his train, here, he found his loss, and had some one telephone the hotel to send a bell boy out with the goods. The boy, laden with parcels like a miniature Santa Claus, was on the job. The parcels were carried on the train going west, and as the boy left to come back to town he was given ten cents, just enough to pay his car fare out and in.

The prospects were fine for a most enjoyable outing. A number of young lads caused much annoyance at the band concert, on Thursday evening. Their shouting and laughing did much to disturb the audience.

See Bibby's nobby $15 suits. "A" Battery will arrive in the city on Monday morning, after a month's camp in Petawawa. The barracks will then be up to strength again, as both batteries will be home. See Bibby's dressy $15 suits. The Belleville Intelligencer says: "In Kingston it has been decided that there is no law to stop a graphophone which neighbors allege to be a nuisance. What about Lynch law?"

The subject is so exhaustively covered that this issue will serve as a basis of fashions for a year to come. The latest word from Paris shows styles that will not appear here in general use, for some months.

CAUSED MUCH EXCITEMENT.

Midnight Drunk Fell Against Store Window on Princess St.
People living in the vicinity of Princess and Barrie streets, were disturbed from their slumbers, at midnight, last night, by the loud smash of glass. Several were dozing, their clothes and ran out into the street to see what was the matter, and for a time there was great excitement. The thought of burglars caught some of the citizens, and it is said that they went prepared for a battle, some with real pistols, and some with toy pistols.

The first citizen to reach the street, noticed that the first door of a grocery store, was wide open, and that there was also a light in the cellar. He was then sure that burglars were busy, and a call was sent into the police station. "Come down at once," was the order, "there are burglars in Mr. —'s store."

Three big husky policemen were soon on the job, and in company with some of the citizens went through the store from top to bottom, but Mr. Burglar was conspicuous by his absence. The citizens gave a sigh of relief, and then the proprietor of the store was awakened. He said that he must have forgotten to lock his door. There was nothing missing from the store.

The mystery of the smash of glass which had disturbed the sleepers, was solved a few minutes later, when a storekeeper on the other side of the road, informed them that a drunken man, in passing, had fallen through the shop window. It is not known whether he was much cut, as a result of the accident, as he kept on his way.

THE STOVE EXPLODED.

Firemen Called to the Home of Edward J. Revell.
At two o'clock, on Friday afternoon, a coal oil stove, at the home of Edward J. Revell, No. 9 Corrigan street, exploded, created a good deal of excitement, and some damage. Luckily, no person was burned. A telephone call was sent in to the firemen and they were very quickly on the job. When the explosion occurred, members of the family smothered the blaze with a blanket, and this was the means of putting a check to what might very easily have turned out to be a serious blaze. When the firemen arrived on the scene, they soon had it under control. The damage to the stove will amount to about $14 and kitchen will reach $20. The house is insured for $750 and the contents for $600.

The Hated Friend.
I used to like him, I confess; time was I called him friend, And on his good opinions I once thought I could depend. He seemed to me the kind of man that all men love to know. He always had a cherry word, at least I judged him so. He used to pat me on the back and praise me when we met, And often prophesied that I would be a great man yet. But I have cut him off my list, despite our friendship strong. Because he got to telling me when he thought I was wrong.

I used to ask his advice, his judgment seemed so fine. For as a rule I found that it agreed in full with mine; For he was frank in telling me how clever were my schemes. But now I feel a keen dislike for him because he seems to know more than I. To think he knows more than I. For just the other night He told me that my plan was wrong and that his way was right. I do not like him any more, so arrogant he is. He thinks his duty is to point my errors 'quod me.

'Tis not to have him tell me things, I asked for his advice. A friend should always treat a friend to phrases that are nice. What right has he to force on me his views or to suggest a change of plan, when I am sure that my way is the best? 'Tis not for criticism, but for words of praise, I seek. I do not want a friend to try to show me where I'm weak. Of course I'd not be flattered, but I'm tired of him, because whenever I ask for his advice he shows me all my flaws.

Bibby's $2 hats for mine.
