THE JOURNALIST LEADS.
The journalist preceded the missionary in Prince Rupert. The paper preceded the church. The printing house was one of the first structures on the site of the future city. The circulation of the paper was small at the beginning, but think of what it will be by and by. The present editor and publisher is Mr. Newton, late of the Daily News, Kingston. There is some advantage of buying early on the spot and in growing up with the place. Prince Rupert promises to be as great a city as Vancouver, and to develop quite as fast, and Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson is authority for the statement that it has exhibited more life, energy and expansion in the last thirteen years than some cities in the old land have displayed in a thousand years.

WHO IS REALLY TO BLAME?
The Peterboro Examiner calls down the local government and practically charges that it is responsible for the fire which wrought damage to the parliament buildings and to the extent of half a million dollars.
"Reports tell us," says our contemporary, "that the fire-fighting installation in the buildings is useless, owing to weakness of the main pressure. The liberal government installed a powerful pumping engine in the crypt of the parliament buildings, as an auxiliary in case of fire, that under actual test, threw a stream of such force as to require three men to man the nozzle. They maintained it in good order, so that if, at the time, a similar fire to that of September 1st had broken out the engine would probably have quenched it in the beginning. But when the present government made changes in construction with a singular and criminal lack of provision it disconnected the pump from the water mains, so that the hose in the buildings was rendered useless, and with the delay of the arrival of the city fire apparatus, the blaze had its own way for long enough to commit material destruction to the extent of $300,000 or $400,000, aside from the incalculable loss of a splendid library and of documents and records, which cannot be replaced. Kindly put the blame, if any, where it belongs, and don't go to the cemetery to find objects of reproach."
Which suggests a matter of local concern. Some years ago, to meet the requirements of the underwriters, the city council put in a stand pipe, with hose and connections, in the city hall. The value of the stand pipe was shown in the fire which burned the dome. It supplied streams of water from the inside to save the main building; indeed it was the chief agency to that end. But the hose has been disconnected and left so long unused that it leaks badly and must presently become of little service. Some one is to blame for neglecting to see that the fire system in the city hall is kept in efficient and serviceable order.

OUTLOOK IN CANADA.
The addresses by Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the Grand Trunk railway system, and of C. M. Hays, general manager, at the Pacific Coast, were very inspiring. From the one—a financial expert and authority—this was learned: That Canada offers opportunities for investment unsurpassed in the world. The land is there, rich in its soil, its minerals and its timber, and richer than any one can imagine because it has not been surveyed as it will be later, and not developed as it can only be with the aid of railways. "No credit," said Sir Charles, "stands higher in London than that of Canada, and when I return to London, I will have great pleasure in telling my colleagues what a splendid field, and what a rapidly extending one, there lies in this broad Dominion for legitimate investment and enterprise."
The general manager's statement was even more interesting. According to it there remain only 2,000 miles to complete the new transcontinental line, and there will begin a period of expansion without a parallel. The completion of the main line will be followed by the keeping of the country north and south until the newer provinces, like the older ones, will be covered with a network of railways. Alberta had made overtures for the construction of at least two hundred miles a year, so that in time its vast area will be opened up to settlement and production. There can be no rapid growth without them.
Mr. Hays made some announcements of note—that the Grand Trunk

Pacific would follow the example of the Canadian Pacific railway in the erection of splendid hotels all along the line; that there will be a terminal at Vancouver as well as Prince Rupert, and that eventually, circumstances justifying it, there will be a branch to the Yukon. But the Grand Trunk Pacific will not, in the north, fill the ambitions and complete the requirements of the people. Other transcontinental lines must be built, until there are four or five of them, and when those have been laid and in use Canada will fill a much larger place in the eye of the world.

THE END OF A LIFE.
Mr. Harriman died yesterday afternoon, not unexpectedly, for though the news was sent out that he was better the feeling was growing and all the evidence was pointing to that which has happened. The greatest railroad man of his time, or the greatest manipulator of railroad stocks, has passed away, and the financial world is shocked. Why? There was not in all the United States, or in Europe, one who was so largely identified with the transportation problems, and one whose removal may affect them to so serious an extent.

The career of this man was both remarkable and romantic. He began life modestly. He was born poor, but he had a clear head and he was ambitious. Hence he quickly rose in position and power, until some years ago he was recognized as the most brilliant operator of his day. He spent his hours in a close study of these issues which came before him, regulated his time with clock-like regularity, ate and shaved in his office, and denied himself the exercise which his health demanded in order to build up and consolidate his varied interests. He was getting richer all the while, but at the expense of his magnificent physique.
"Suddenly, as in all cases of this kind, there were the symptoms of collapse, and to the surprise of the stock operators he went to Europe. He disappeared from the public life for a time, and what he did abroad, or how he spent his time, can only be conjectured. He was supposed to be in Vienna, in charge of the distinguished specialists, there, taking his sunbaths or champagne baths daily, and enjoying such foods as the medical men prescribed. When he crossed the ocean he was supposed to have left all thought of the millions or billions he controlled behind him. When he returned, or while he was still on the sea, Wall Street became agitated and its financiers tremblingly confessed that vast interests depended upon his health.
Weak, emaciated, scarcely able to work, he left the steamer and set out for his summer home at Arden. All he wanted was rest—only that and nothing more. He pleaded for perfect retirement, assuring the curious world that if there were anything to note in connection with his work in life he would send out a statement. That was some days ago. There were rumours later that he suffered from an incurable malady, that he was sinking fast. Physicians and nurses and friends came and went, in solemn silence and with a mysterious air. The end of the suspense has come, and what will follow? There will be a few days of great commotion in financial circles. The last respects will be paid to the dead, described by a friendly hand as "one of the greatest and ablest financiers the world has ever produced." The many corporations which he dominated will cast about for a successor.

There will be a time for testing and a time for searching, and presently it will be apparent just how much depended on Mr. Harriman and his genius. He was a great constructionist, but was he one who built upon a sound and enduring foundation? Or is the fabric one that will crumble away and carry thousands to ruin in its wreck?
EDITORIAL NOTES.
Children are running the streets, scores of them, when they should be at school. Is the truancy law being enforced?
How much, sometimes depends on the life of a man! Harriman's demise has created a depressing effect on the business world.
The school board will look into the law which regulates the evening divisions of children, unaccompanied by their parents. It is time that something was doing in this direction.
In order that a government, liberal or conservative, may deserve the continuous and unbroken support of its newspaper friends its record must be above reproach. Such a government does not exist in Canada.
The model school has an attendance of sixty, which shows that there is a revived interest in teaching, and that the schools will be amply equipped in the early future. Better regulations and better pay are having their effect.
The criminal code certainly needs amendment when all a raising association—another name sometimes for a gandering joint—has to do is ask for a charter and it must be delivered. No wonder the race track robbers are finding their Mecca in Canada.

The Belleville Intelligencer is wrong when it says that Kingston's laundry by-law puts a tax on Chinamen and no tax on white people. The by-law imposes a tax of fifty dollars on all laundries.

Willie Winter, late of the New York Tribune, and Hon. Charles Murphy, should meet and exchange a few ideas on the purity of politics and the independence of thought with which Mr. Winter began life with Mr. Greeley, and which represents a type of journalism that does not find its appreciation in this commercial age.
The excitement in stock circles, which follows Mr. Harriman's death, shows how much one strong-minded man can dominate society. He was not a grasping man, but he was able, and there were many who were willing that he should manage their affairs. These are posing as a helpless lot!

Undismayed by one rebuke from Sir James, Whitney the Montreal Gazette returns to the power question and says the Ontario government has done great injury by its power legislation. Its validation of certain municipal contracts tends to hurt both the public and private credit. The legislators will get wise as a result of their experience.
Death Visits Flinton.
Flinton, Sept. 9.—On Saturday, Aug. 20th, Mrs. Herbert Cronk passed away in her 40th year, leaving an infant only a few hours old. Deceased was born in Kalarlar and has lived here the greater part of her life. She was a good woman willing to do what she could for all and every one. She leaves a family of seven children, a husband and aged mother, one sister, Mrs. Joseph Campbell, who resides in Kingston, and one brother, William Fadden, here. She was greatly respected and widely known. Interment took place in the English church cemetery. Rev. R. W. Irwin officiated. The remains were followed by a large concourse of friends.
The annual picnic in aid of St. Paul's parsonage fund was held here Sept. 6th. A good sum of money was realized. Miss Eida Haight, of Cananville, is engaged as teacher in junior class here. Miss Murrel Spence, of Cloyne, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. James Mansuet. Miss Winnie Beatty left here Sept. 6th, to attend Naples collegiate.
Word reached here on Monday saying Wesley McGregor, of Myers' Cave, had passed away Sept. 4th. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McGregor and family extended their sympathy to them in their bereavement. D. B. Parrott, Camden East, is replacing the grist and saw mill here. Miss Marion Wright, of Madoc, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. William Beatty. Mrs. Sager, of Queensboro, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Juby. C. Sedgewick spent a few days with his wife family last week.

A Very Bad Precedent.
Goldwin Smith.
A journal friendly to the government frankly admits that "in the case of the power by-laws a contract is made local which differs materially from the by-law which the people passed." This shows beyond question that there is an assumption on the part of government which cannot be allowed to pass unchallenged, and calls for strenuous protest on the part of the independent press. What has been done, by its establishment, is not a simple act, but one which makes a precedent.

Don't Be A Rheumatic.
The disordered condition of the system which leads to rheumatism, easily becomes a chronic condition. THE MAPLE LEAF FOREVER
The Correct Words of Muir's Famous Song.
The late Alexander Muir, author of "The Maple Leaf Forever," had occasion several times to correct publishers of his Canadian national song for printing incorrect versions. The following are the correct words as written by Mr. Muir:

In days of yore the hero Wolfe
Britain's glory did maintain,
And planted first Britannia's flag
On Canada's fair domain.
Here may it wave, our boast, our pride,
And, joined in love together,
The Thistle, Shamrock, Rose entwine,
The Maple Leaf forever!

On many hard-fought battle-fields
Our brave fathers, side by side,
For freedom, homes and loved ones dear
Firmly stood and nobly died;
And those dear rights which they maintained,
We swear to yield them never!
We'll rally round the Union Jack,
The Maple Leaf forever!

In autumn time our emblem dear
Sheds its tints of crimson hue;
Our blood would dye a deeper red,
Shed, dear Canada, for you!
Ere sacred rights our fathers won
To freedom we deliver,
We'll fighting die—our battle-cry,
"The Maple Leaf forever!"

God bless our loved Canadian homes,
Our Dominion's vast domain;
May plenty ever be our lot,
And peace hold an endless reign.
Our union, bound by ties of love,
That discord cannot sever,
And flourish green, o'er Freedom's home,
The Maple Leaf forever!

On Merry England's far-famed land,
Heaven's blessing sweetly smile;
God bless Old Scotland evermore,
And Ireland's Emerald Isle
Where dwell the song both loud and long,
The rocks and forests quiver,
God save our Queen, and Heaven bless
The Maple Leaf forever!

A Fiction Forever Exploded.
Waterston Times.
The planting of the flag at the North Pole by two Americans gives us no territory, but lots of pride in the Yankee achievement. The Symmes Hole theory is now entirely exploded. Symmes, you remember, asserted that there was a big hole right through the earth from north to south poles, and in it were other countries inhabited by strange peoples differing from those of earth's surface by reason of different environment. He claimed that he had sailed around the edge of this hole and he wrote a book about it and asserted that future expeditions would substantiate his statement. Both Cook and Peary have reached the North Pole and have found no hole—nothing but water covered with thick floating ice; not a sign of life of any kind. Symmes' story has been revived periodically and interested a good many people. There is no chance for it to be told again. The region of the North Pole is no longer an unknown land.
