

EATING FROM GOLD PLATE

Berlin, Germany.—Only millionaires can afford to patronize the "Millionaires' Cafe," recently fitted up in the old Kaiserhof. The furnishing are the most elaborate ever attempted in a public resort.

The waiters wear knee breeches, red vests, blue velvet coats and white gloves. Dishes, costing $2.50 each, are served on gold plate.

It takes more than powdered flunkies and costly plate to make us relish our meals. Health and sound digestion are the best sauces.

No other remedy sold in Canada has benefited so many people in the same length of time as "Fruit-a-lives".

SOME NAVAL REVIEWS

GREAT BRITISH SEA SPECTACLES OF FORMER DAYS.

Recent Parade of the Fleet on the Solent Recalls Former Displays of Warships—George III. Originated the Custom as Known Today, But Henry VIII. Held a Review of His Little Fleet—Victoria's Pageant.

The first naval review in the Solent of a few days ago recalls some of the most magnificent spectacles of past days. Before the time of the Hanoverian reviews of our fighting ships were few and far between.

It was George III. who first began the system of reviews of the fleet as we know it to-day. He was present at three such spectacles during his long reign, and in 1794 there was a mock fight of the ships for his benefit.

It was Queen Victoria who gave the review of the fleet its greatest significance in modern times. In 1842 she held her first review, with the Prince Consort, and it is noteworthy that nearly every ship she saw at that time was after the pattern of the old Victory, moored close by the place where the review was held.

It was at the memorable review of 1863 that the late Queen for the first time in history saw a navy that was independent of sails and wind for its progress. The screw-propeller, too, had actually appeared on some vessels by this date.

A striking spectacle was that of March 10, 1864, when the late Queen reviewed the fleet in the Channel. Her Majesty, in the royal yacht, herself led the way into the Channel, and there bade the departing ships "God speed" amid terrific cheering by the sailors.

The review of 1873, for the Shah of Persia's visit, when that monarch went with the then Prince of Wales round the assembled vessels, brought another fact home to the mind of our future King. Wood was going; iron was coming, as the material for constructing warships. The "wooden walls" of Nelson's days had nearly all passed away, and the royalties present at that review in 1873 saw the new style of ship in its infancy.

The year 1878 witnessed a fine review which was memorable because the late Queen for the first time saw the new "turret" vessels, eight of them, the latest and greatest wonders of her magnificent navy.

The anniversary reviews of 1887 and 1897, when Britain all over the world was wild with joy at the Coronation jubilee of the late Queen, will still be fresh in many minds. That 1897 review, with the greatest fleet the world had ever seen up to then—166 ships of every class brought from everywhere in the world to greet the Queen on the Diamond Jubilee—was a marvellous lesson to friend and foe all over the world.

A Record "Bag." Earl de Grey, who succeeds his father, the late Marquess of Ripon, in that title, is not only a clever musician—being one of the principal supporters of the opera in England—but he is also recognized as one of the greatest game shots in the country. He began shooting when he was nine years of age—he is now fifty-seven—and some years ago his lordship made a calculation of the number of victims that had fallen to his gun. He estimated that in the course of twenty-eight years he had himself shot no fewer than 316,899 head of game.

Storm in the Sun. Mr. Clement Wragge, a well-known antipodean astronomer and meteorologist, has just reported that a tremendous storm is raging in the sun. He estimates the storm is 40,000 miles in diameter, and he thinks its "etherial vibrations" will affect the earth and cause seismic disturbances.

AN ENGLISH POMPEII

City of Verulamium Contains Some Remarkable Antiquities.

English newspapers note that the Earl of Verulam, who owns the sand upon which was built the ancient Roman city of Verulamium, has given permission to the Society of Antiquaries to undertake excavations, which will shortly be commenced. The site of Verulamium lies a mile or so from the centre of St. Albans, just at the entrance of the beautiful Gorbunghy Park.

Verulamium was one of the most important cities in England at the time of the Roman occupation. With Eboracum (York) it enjoyed the dignity of being a municipium, which meant that all who were born within its walls could claim Roman citizenship.

The stones and Roman bricks of Verulamium were, of course, much used for later buildings elsewhere. St. Alban's Abbey is very largely built from them. But a great deal still remains under the soil.

A Model Love-Letter. Australia is a great country for competitions. The Victorian mining city of Ballarat which returns Alfred Deakin to the Federal Parliament, has had a love-letter competition, which proved so attractive as to draw competitors from all over the Empire.

To An Imaginary Correspondent. You ask me to forgive you. What can you ever do, sweetheart, which for one moment could make me forget what you are to me, or that love which has made earth heaven, and my life a joy? Have I to forgive the sun for lurking behind the clouds when he has shone on my days and made them golden, or shall I forgive him the less when he comes forth to warm me again? Beloved, if I have sought to forgive it is that you, I hold, have asked the question. I have no desire to know anything, except that you have loved me and love me still.

Wife Sold by Auction. A strange story of a man selling his wife to another, comes from England. A convivial outing took place at Crayke Heath recently, and one of the men present, a chainmaker, offered to dispose of his wife to the first bidder. A sum of $100 was speedily forthcoming, the money being paid by cheque.

Must Have License. No private person may install or work wireless telegraph apparatus without special license from the Postmaster-General. Two Poles were fatally injured, and another badly burned by an explosion at the Victoria Mines smelter.

STONEMASON PREMIER.

Remarkable Story of Mr. Tom Price of South Australia.

One of the most remarkable careers of modern times closed with the death of Mr. Tom Price, Premier of South Australia. Many years ago, in the humble position of stonemason, he helped to build the Parliament House; afterwards he sat in that very House as Prime Minister. He was a Welshman, born at Brymbo, in Denbighshire. His father was a working builder, and he himself was taught the stonemason's trade in Liverpool.

When only twelve years of age he saved 6d. a week, in order to buy a second-hand coat at a pawnbroker's shop, so that he could attend the Sunday school. When he did attend other boys made fun of him because the sleeves were too long. He dealt with them summarily. "The boys," he related, "produced a bigger boy to flatten me out. I finished him." He attended the same Sunday school for many years, and eventually became superintendent. Then he married "the prettiest girl in that school," and with her emigrated in 1861, on account of alarming symptoms of lung trouble, to Sydney, moving to Adelaide a few years later.

At Adelaide Tom Price helped, as a mason, to build the Parliament House, in which he sat since 1905 as Prime Minister. His success in life was due entirely to his gifts of self-reliance and perseverance. "After I arrived in Adelaide," he said, "I immediately got work with the leading contractor there. I was with him seven years. Soon after I left him I became Clerk of Works for the Government, which was at that time creating some big works at a place called Inghington, close to Adelaide. I was asked by a labor party to become a candidate for one of the big electoral districts of the State. I was returned (this was in 1890), beating the old member for the district by one vote. Four years after that I became leader of the Opposition—carried a non-confidence motion, was sent for by the governor to form a ministry, and succeeded in doing so."

There was no pride in him. "I was Tom Price," he said, "when I went to school. I was Tom Price as superintendent, and I am Tom Price as Premier to-day. As in the past, so for many generations in the future, the achievements of Tom Price, the Welsh stonemason, will be rightly held up as a great example of what sterling merit may attain. But if the moral is to be pointed, it may be remembered that in Tom Price's case the reward was not great riches or self-aggrandizement but rather great opportunities for public service. "I am as poor as Job," he told a friend. "I have to-day nothing in the shape of wealth, but I have written my name on Acts of Parliaments of my country, which age itself cannot wipe away. And I have the best wife and the best sons and daughters in the world."

A Royal Fish Storey. You know that kings and queens have prerogatives of English rulers in olden times related to royal fish. Royal fish are sturgeon and whale, which are considered the finest of deep-sea fish. For this reason, "on account of their superior excellence," whenever a royal fish was thrown ashore or caught near the coast of England it became the property of the King. This seems very unjust to those who might secure the whale or sturgeon, for they were compelled to give it up without receiving any pay. However, the King had some ground for claiming these royal fish as his property, because it was he who guarded and protected the seas from pirates and robbers, and in those days there were very many of them.

The most peculiar feature of the custom of royal fish was that, while the whole of the sturgeon belonged to the King, only half of the whale did. For it was a prerogative, as it was called, of the Queen that the tail of every whale caught in the way described was her property, while the head only was the King's. The reason for this division, as given by the old records, was to furnish the Queen's wardrobe with the whalebone which the custom is peculiar, for the whalebone lies entirely in the head of the whale. But there are many more strange and amusing customs recorded in England's early laws.

Mr. Winston Churchill's Mother. "Is there so much difference between politicians and actors? Both are equally eager for popular applause, both equally doubtful whether they will 'float'." Thus Mrs. Cornwallis-West in "His Borrowed Plumes," the production of which play aroused so much interest at the Hicks Theatre, London, a few days ago. One wonders what Mr. Winston Churchill, who watched the first performance from a box, thought of this, his mother's sarcastic reference to the stage and politics. "His Borrowed Plumes" is Mrs. Cornwallis-West's first play, and was written in a single week in the country. It scintillates with brilliant epigrams, for the former Lady Randolph Churchill is a woman who can both write and speak brilliantly.

They Help Your Stomach Out And Save You a World of Wretchedness. A stomach that cannot digest a good meal is certainly a sore trial. It has been responsible for almost everything in the way of human misery, up to suicide. The trouble in most cases is that the stomach and other digestive organs lack vigor. Not enough of the juices necessary to digestion are secreted, nor does the stomach work up the food properly.

The worst of it is that there is not sufficient nourishment taken out of the food to restore the system's vigor, and the trouble goes from bad to worse. The stomach needs help. "Little Digesters" meet the need exactly. One "Little Digester" after each meal will ensure perfect digestion, provided, of course, that the food is good and wholesome. "Little Digesters" are guaranteed to cure indigestion, and Dyspepsia, or your money will be refunded.

Is a Cake Could Buy No Better Soap

If you were to offer us $1 for a single cake of soap, we could make no better than our Infants' Delight.

For we have put our very best into this cake. We go to the gardens of France for pure vegetable oil. There we pay often double what we might pay. We bring coconuts oil more than 12,000 miles from the island of Ceylon. Then we mix these oils and boil them doubly long.

After this we send them through our own special milling process—one that we have perfected only in our 43 years of experience.

From here they fall like flakes of snow into huge bins and are then crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture.

Then they pass through granite rollers and come out in miles of silky ribbons, after which they are dried eight times. The result is the most perfect and delightful soap.

It is so pure and clean that it leaves the skin fair as an infant's. So we call this soap Infants' Delight.

Order one cake today and see for yourself how different it is. Note the rich, creamy lather and see how it leaves the skin as soft as velvet and as smooth as silk.

Note the dainty perfume—it comes from Bulgaria and costs us $100 a pound. But it requires 3,000 pounds of rose leaves to make a single ounce of this Otto of Roses. The fragrance is simply exquisite. Please try it and see.

ANTARCTIC POLITENESS.

Even Though Under Trying Circumstances.

Lieut. Shackleton tells an amusing story of politeness in the untrodden regions of the Antarctic. His party, he says, were always extremely good-humored and polite, and one professor in particular attained a degree of politeness unusual under such trying circumstances. "Are you busy, Mawson?" he called out one night to another member of the party who was in the tent. "I am," said Mawson. "Very busy," said the professor. "Yes, very busy." "If you are not too busy, Mawson, I am down a crevasse." The professor was found hanging down a crevasse by his four fingers, a position which he could not have held on for any length of time.

His Own Medicine.

A certain barber named Jones who practiced in Lord Brougham's time was in the habit of commencing the examination of a witness with these words, "Now, sir, I am going to put a question to you, and I don't care which way you answer it." Brougham, like many other statesmen of the time, was a man of a most unorthodox and one morning, meeting one near the temple, he addressed him thus: "Now, Jones, I am going to put a question to you, and I don't care which way you answer it. How do you do?" London Express.

Painting in the Dark.

Considerable interest will doubtless be aroused at the forthcoming exhibition of the English Salon at the Albert Hall, by the work of Mr. H. K. Raine, a young artist who paints portraits in a light so subdued as to be almost total darkness. He has invented a portable shutter for regulating the light of a room, and is thus able to paint his sitters in their own homes. One result of his method is that he paints with extraordinary speed. Sitings of about half an hour before and after luncheon for one week are all that he demands. Mr. Raine makes his own oil, canvas, and colors by a secret process, and anyone may see the distinct similarity between his colors and those of the old Dutch colorists.

Married to a Doll.

India is a land of many strange superstitions, but a recent case reported from a town called Radson is curious almost beyond belief. An inhabitant lost two wives in quick succession, and was about to contract a third marriage, when he received the following mandate from the relations of the bride: "We are told that when a man has already lost two wives his third also dies very soon. In order to satisfy the Angel of Death, you are requested to marry a doll, and thereafter come and marry our daughter, who should be your fourth wife and not your third. The man did as he was told. He married the doll, then gave out that she was dead, buried her with great pomp, and proceeded to marry his fourth wife.
