Another Contest EVERYBODY STARTS IN THIS ONE WHICH IS CORRECT, DO WE COOK BY GAS OR DO WE COOK WITH GAS? In the City of St. Louis a general discussion upon the above two sentences has been stirred up and its interest has become widespread, in fact some of the investigators have put it up to the learned hands to solve the problem. It would seem to be an easy matter to settle which expression is correct. Grammatical speaking we are not going to put ourselves on record, but we will say this, right here, that the ones who are cooking either "WITH" or "BY" Gas are well up in the running, while those who failed to get the pipes installed in their homes this summer have better file their application at the office of the works, before it is too late to enjoy the benefit derived by the above named sentences. A NIGHT OF MUSIC 48TH HIGHLANDERS AND R.C.H.A. BANDS. The Vocal Choruses By the Scots Were Beautiful—Sweet Cornet Solo By One of Our Own Battermen. Anyone who anticipated a treat in the concert given, on Saturday night, in the Armouries, by the combined bands of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto, and our own R.C.H.A., was more than delighted with the music. The audience was a good one, the officers and their wives and daughters being in the east gallery, the battery-men in the northern gallery. The platform was a brilliant sight with such an array of stalwarts as the garb of old Gaul, and the smart artillery men, who are Kingston's justifiable pride. The programme opened with "O Canada," to Livallec's stirring music, which caught the ear of Western Canada at the Quebec pageant and has been played ever since. Till it is becoming nationalized. March and overture followed, then the gold medallion, Alexander Munro, a Highlander, tripped out on the boards and gave a Highland dance to the skill of the pipes that made the eye of every Scotchman snap with joy. Later, this nimble-footed Scot appeared in Paddy's garb, with tight buff breeches, and a coat that was green as the Emerald Isle, and the jig he danced was a poem, not all the brogans in the world being able to make the fa' of his feet nought but fairy light. Later still Mr. Munro was a Jack Tar, and the sailor's hornpipe gladdened the hearts of the sailor men present. Thunders of well-deserved applause greeted the Highlanders' vocal choruses, which interspersed the programme, the singing of the men being full of expression and unfeigned to a degree. An encore, a coon song, with solo by W. Parker, with banjo accompaniment by the voices of the chorus, was a capital imitation of the darkies' beloved instrument. Mr. Parker has a magnificent bass voice, deep and mellow and clear, and his solo, "Asleep 'neath the Dark Blue Wave," so charmed everyone that he was compelled to respond. "The Hunting Scene," by the combined bands, was a dashing number, carrying the hearers away after the hounds and calling up vividly a hunting morning as the players broke out into "A Hunting We Will Go." Every item on the programme was good, not excepting various interludes, when four pipers, accompanied by the kettle drum and the big drum, made the round of the armouries, winding in and out among the audience, blowing "to lead the band" so to speak. "The Conquering Hero," a correct solo, by Sergt. Huberland, of the R.C.H.A., was beautifully sweet and full of expression, and it was with much regret that the audience received for its very hearty applause, just a bow of thanks from the young soldier. A grand military tattoo, by J. Mackenzie Rocca, bandmaster of the Coldstream Guards, closed the programme, and Mr. Light, bandmaster of the battery band, called on the combination to play "Auld Lang Syne," and then the audience rose to its feet for the glorious strains of the national anthem. Both Mr. Slatter, bandmaster of the Highlanders, a fine brass specimen of a man, and our own clever bandmaster, who took turns in conducting, had reason to smile proudly at the work of their players, and the ovation they received.

SHOULD PAUSE AND REFLECT. Before it Passes the Noise By-Law With a Comma. Contributed. The council should pause and reflect very seriously before it accepts the amendment to the so-called anti-noise by-law, which upon its face seems to mean nothing more than the insertion of an inessential comma; for trifling as it seems, this trifling mark creates what is a really brand new law, and one of a most delicate character. If this comma should be inserted the law stripped of its complications will be as follows: "It shall not be lawful for any person to make noises calculated to disturb the inhabitants." As the law stands at present the noise must be an unusual one in order to bring the offender within its reach. If the comma should be inserted this will be changed and no matter how ordinary the noise may be the maker of it will be subject to fine or imprisonment in case it seems "calculated to disturb the inhabitants." It has been stated also by one of the foremost lawyers in the city that it is not necessary that all the inhabitants, or even a majority of them should be disturbed in order to satisfy the law. It is only necessary, according to the authority, that some of the inhabitants should be annoyed in order to subject the noise-maker to the penalties of the law. This being the case, such noises as the rumber of the street cars, the hammering of metal, the sharpening of hammers, the chopping of wood, the blowing of whistles, the clanging and screaming of steam hammers or circular saws, the prattling of vocalists, violinists or pianists, and hundreds of other sounds will subject their makers to fine or imprisonment in case a cranky or vindictive neighbor chooses to make a complaint. It is only necessary that the noise should be of a disturbing character in order to give grounds for such an action. It has been repeated often that the insertion of the comma is to be made simply in order, that the by-law shall "conform to the statute," which means to the section of the Ontario municipal act under which the by-law was drawn. This is quite a misleading statement, as there is no reason why ever why the by-law should conform to the statute in its entirety. The statute is in no respect mandatory. It does no more than confer upon the council the right to make laws concerning the ringing of bells, blowing of horns, shouting and unusual or disturbing noises, and the council may legislate concerning any, all, or none of them as it pleases. The provincial legislature, in making this statute, left it to the sense and discretion of the city council as to just how far it
