WANT FIVE YEAR TERM

H. W. RICHARDSON SPEAKS FOR STREET RAILWAY.

Company Will Not Accept An Agreement For Three Years—Have Set Forth Their Views in a Letter to the City Council.

Last Thursday, John L. Whiting, K.C., solicitor for the company, wrote Mayor Cooper, stating that it would be well to follow out the suggestion of A.H. Elliott that a conference be held between representatives of the light, heat and power committee and the company before anything was done. He asked that such a conference be arranged before the council meeting of Monday, but the mayor could not do anything in the matter.

The rate of power is now passed but the agreement has to be incorporated in a by-law, so that the matter is still open for discussion. At the committee meeting last week, it was understood that the company might cancel the agreement at any time it wished. The committee, however, did not want to give a longer term than three years.

"The company will not accept such an agreement for a term of three years. We want an option of one to five years."

Such was the statement made, today, by H. W. Richardson, president of the street railway, when asked by the Whig if the action of the city council last night, in agreeing to supply power to the company at 1.20 for a term of three years, was satisfactory to the company.

"The term of years is not satisfactory," added Mr. Richardson. "We want an option of from one to five years."

It would not be to the advantage of the company he pointed out, to expend money on the road, for such a short time.

"And what about the price for power?" Mr. Richardson was asked.

Mr. Richardson said, in reply to this question, that he had been led to believe that the arbitration would have fixed the price at one cent instead of 1.20. However, the company opposed a bonus and the figure presented by the arbitration showed that no bonus was being given the company. The price would be accepted by the company.

Mr. Richardson stated that he hoped the matter would be settled as speedily as possible, so that the company could proceed with their work for the winter, as soon as possible.

Asked if the company intended making any improvements to the road, Mr. Richardson said, "no." "We cannot promise any better service than we are giving at present," he added. "We cannot see our way to do so, but if it were possible, we would be only too glad to do so. Nothing would please us more than to give a better service."

Mr. Richardson also stated that the company wished to secure power at the rate mentioned, not only for this year, but for other work of the company, such as the operating of the merry-go-round at the park. The company's side of the question, he said, had been given in a letter to Mayor Cooper for the city council meeting, on Monday night, but was not taken up, owing to the fact that the council was left without a quorum. A.H. Elliott, chairman of the committee, says that a conference will be arranged with the street railway officials to decide upon the details of the power agreement. It is likely that a satisfactory agreement will be made.

A Turnkey Will Not Meekly Submit.

Special to the Whig.

Brookville, Oct. 12.—A. S. Wright, turnkey at the county jail for the past six years, has received notice from Inspector Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, asking him to tender his resignation by the 15th inst. No cause is given for this action, but it is understood to be the result of friction between the turnkey and Jailer McHughall. Wright does not intend resigning without a fight, and likely the matter will result in an investigation.

WATSON-MUDIE WEDDING

QUIET EVENT AT MOTHER'S HOME TO-DAY.

Both Bride and Groom Are Kingston People and Queen's Graduates—They Will Make Their Home in Detroit.

An extremely pretty and a very quiet wedding ceremony was held, on Wednesday morning, at the home of Mrs. John Mudie, Vaughn Terrace. At the hour of half-past ten, Miss Margaret Patten, Mudie, youngest daughter of the late John Mudie, K.C., was married to Edward Caird Watson, M.A., M.D., son of the Rev. John Watson, M.A., LL.D., of the chair of philosophy at Queen's University.

The drawing-room, where the ceremony took place, was most artistically adorned with flowers. Beautiful vines trailed over archway, doors and windows and the fireplace was a mass of green, with white and yellow flowers springing from the foliage. The bride, who was given away by a very old friend of the family, Richard Waldron (her brother, W. Balfour Mudie, being best man), wore a lovely gown of ivory satin, the skirt bepleated, the overskirt, in polonaise effect, having its points pearl-trimmed. The fullness was caught at the waist, both front and back, with a large pearl butterfly, and the corsage from the waist-line to the net yoke was filled in with crossed bias folds of the satin. A fall of lovely old Limerick lace was over each shoulder, and edged the cuffs of the softly gathered satin sleeves, which were further trimmed by loopings of pearl. The bridal veil was caught with orange blossoms to the golden hair, which was coiled with the utmost simplicity. The bride's bouquet was a sheaf of white roses, and he ornamented a pearl and diamond pendant, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Waldron, wore an exquisite gown of orchid mauve crepe de chine, with trimmings of heavy velvet braid, of a darker shade of the mauve; a very smart hat of the same tone of mauve as the braid upon the gown, was trimmed with a beautiful ostrich. Her bouquet was of Marechal Niel roses, tied with streamers of yellow satin ribbon reaching to the hem of her dress, and her gift from the groom a brooch of pearls in the form of a rose.

The wedding breakfast was laid in a dining-room warm and bright with masses of rowan berries and crimson and yellow dahlias, the work of the same artistes who had decked the drawing-room. The breakfast table was lighted with yellow candles. The guests were few and were confined to close friends of the family.

The bride went west with her husband, wearing a navy blue tailored suit of fine French worsted, with invisible stripes. With this she wore a particularly smart blouse of self-blue, and a hat of dark green velvet with champagne moire, trimmed with self-blue wings. She carried away with her some lovely pink roses which bore good wishes from a city across the border.

The gentle bride is one of Queen's cleverest girl graduates and the groom is one of her most brilliant sons, and both a merry and warm friends in the city of their birth.

TREW HIMSELF OUT.

A Convict Jumped From Prison Window.

Henry Bremner, of Toronto, a prisoner at the penitentiary, made an unsuccessful attempt to take his life this morning, in rather a novel manner. The man is doing a fifteen-year term for shooting, with intent, having served about five years. He had been employed in the tailor shop for some time, and this morning he made the attempt to end his life. He was seated near a window and without any warning, jumped and plunged head first, landing on a pile of broken stove. The jump for death caused quite a flurry of excitement among the other convicts, but it was soon quelled by the guards.

When the guards and prisoners working in the yard went to the spot where the man struck the stones, they expected to find him a mangled mass of humanity, but he still breathed, and was hurried to the hospital. He suffered no fracture, only bad cuts. He will likely recover.

WAS GIVEN FOUR YEARS.

St. Thomas Young Man Sentenced For Burglary.

Frederick Bogg, a young man, just out of his teens, was brought to the penitentiary from St. Thomas, this morning, to serve four years for burglary. The sheriff of St. Thomas, with another officer, arrived on the early morning train, and left the prisoner at the police station over night.

At nine o'clock, this morning, the prisoner was taken out to the prison. On his way out, he was smoking a pipe and cigar, and appeared to be in good spirits. Bogg does not look up on four years as a very long time, and feels confident that he will be able to cut off part of this term by good conduct.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Was Prevented By An Alert Drug Clerk.

A case which from every appearance looks like a deliberate attempt at suicide, occurred in Best's drug store, on Monday night, and the alertness of the clerk, Charles Moxley, alone prevented the man figuring in the case from accomplishing his purpose. A Whig representative heard of the incident, and when he called at the store today, was given the particulars.

About nine o'clock, two men, both about middle age, walked into the store. The clerk, Mr. Moxley, was in charge at the time, and he waited upon them. One of the men, who appeared to be French, asked for twenty-five cents worth of carbolic acid. Mr. Moxley put up the acid for him, and laid the bottle upon the counter. Sales of carbolic acid must all be registered in a book, giving the name of the person making the purchase, and for what purpose required. Mr. Moxley was getting his book out to make the necessary report, when he chanced to look up at his customer, and was just in time to see him pick up the bottle and place it to his lips.

In a second Mr. Moxley, Queen's quarter on the football team, was on the other side of the counter, and had the bottle away from the man. The latter tried hard to drink the acid, but Mr. Moxley was too quick for him. In the struggle, some of the acid went on both men, and they suffered slight burns. The man's companion stood by all the time, and made no attempt whatever, to stop him from taking the dose. Mr. Moxley asked him why he had taken the acid, and he replied, "A doctor in Montreal told me that it would be good for me." This, no doubt, was a "fake" story.

The man did not take enough of the acid to do him any great harm, but got enough to burn his throat to some extent, and he suffered a great deal of pain. His name was not secured, and he is not known. After the incident, he and his friend made a hasty retreat.

All the other drug stores in the city were at once notified of the case, so that special precautions could be taken against the man securing more acid. However, no other reports were received about him. At Best's drug store, the book in which all such sales are registered, is kept under the counter, at the front of the store, and not at the rear, in the office, as in many places, and this was a good thing, as had Mr. Moxley had to go back to the rear to register the sale, the man would have had ample time to take all the contents of the bottle.

Just as Mr. Moxley put the bottle on the counter, his customer made the remark, "that looks pretty strong."

He pulled out the cork, and as Mr. Moxley thought, was about to smell it. However, as Mr. Moxley turned his head for a second, the man grabbed it off the counter and lifted it up to his mouth. The bottle of acid is at the drug store.

This case goes to show how careful a drug clerk must be, and it also shows that a person buying acid in a drug store has a good chance of committing suicide while in the store. It will be remembered that in Toronto, just a few days ago, a woman walked into a drug store, purchased carbolic acid, and holding it up, said to the clerk, "Do you know what I want this for?"

"No, I do not," replied the clerk. "Well, I want it for this," was the reply, and before the clerk could move a hand to prevent her, the woman had swallowed the contents of the bottle, and died as a result.

A CHILD SWALLOWED LYE

And Its Throat is Closing—It Can't Live.

On Monday afternoon, Norman, the four-year-old son of Frank Dufour, Madio, was brought to the general hospital for treatment by a specialist. Some time ago, the little fellow picked some crystals of Gilette's lye out of a sink and ate them. His throat and mouth were terribly burned, but gradually healed. During the past week, however, there were signs of stricture, as the boy could scarcely eat. The mucous membrane in spots had been destroyed, and the places were being drawn together, a hard surface having been formed.

Dr. J. C. Connell was given charge of the case, which is a very critical one, in fact there is practically no hope of the child's recovery. The injury to the throat is so severe that it must eventually close up, making it impossible for food to pass. The case is the worst of the kind ever seen in the general hospital. Ordinary burning of the mucous membrane is had enough, but with lye it is terrible.

RETIRED FROM BUSINESS.

Spangenberg Jewellery Store to Change Hands.

After being in the jewelry and watch business all his life, Frederick W. Spangenberg, King street, is retiring, and has sold out to R. J. Rodger, of Toronto, and Charles Wright, of Kingston, who will form a partnership. The Spangenberg jewellery business was established in 1844 by Mr. Spangenberg's late father, who was succeeded by his son in 1870. The store has always been on the same site on King street near Princess. In 1894, the old store was replaced by the present admirable structure. Mr. Spangenberg's jewellery business is the largest between Toronto and Ottawa, and the house is known all over the province for its excellence.

Mr. Wright, who will be a member of the new firm, has been Mr. Spangenberg's assistant for the past eighteen years, and is well-known to the people of Kingston. He came here from Toronto in 1891. His partner is also a Toronto man. The new firm hopes for a continuance of the large patronage that the Spangenberg jewellery house has so long enjoyed.
