SETTLED $5,600,000 DEBTS.

Rise From Disaster Furnishes Extraordinary Story.

New York, Oct. 14.—It requires more brains to make a second fortune than it does a first. Charles W. Morse was quoted as saying a few months ago, when the doors of the Tombs prison, where he had been confined for many months, swung open under an order from the federal court and he was allowed to take his way once more back to Wall street to tackle the job of getting back the fortune he had lost.

Over his head there hung that and still hangs the sentence of fifteen years' imprisonment in the federal penitentiary in connection with his conviction of misappropriating the funds of the National bank of North America. Mr. Morse now seems fairly on his way to financial power and affluence. This was shown the other day when he was elected president of the Hudson Navigation company, which controls the lines on the Hudson river, and with some of his friends, quietly acquired the Metropolitan Steamship line.

The rise of Morse from defeat and disaster to a position of power in the market places where he was laid low furnishes one of the most extraordinary stories that Wall street has known. How great has been the task confronting the former leecher in building up a second fortune may be gathered from the fact that the financial storm which broke over his head in the panic of 1907 stripped him of a fortune conservatively estimated at $22,000,000 and left him with $7,000,000 of debts to face.

Mr. Morse, just before the panic, while not a financial potentate of the first magnitude, belonged to a group of men whose fortunes and connections entitled them to be called financial powers. He controlled with his friends a chain of banks with deposits amounting to $200,000,000 or more; a steamship trust which he had formed some years prior. After the storm had wiped out his fortune and left him with those $7,000,000 of debts, the courts came along and said that Mr. Morse must serve fifteen years in prison to wipe out a little debt he owed to the community for doing the things he had done in his bank.

When they put Morse in a cell after his conviction just a year ago, his brain began to be busy devising ways of paying his debts and getting a second fortune. He left to his lawyers the job of getting him out.

The plans for regrouping his fortune which Mr. Morse conceived while he looked through the bars of a cell soon began to materialize. First there was incorporated in Maine, Morse's old state, the Morse Security company, with a capital of $10,000,000. That was Morse's little plan for paying off the creditors of his bank, whose claims amounted to $7,000,000. This has practically been consummated.

The next thing that Wall street knew, Morse and some of his friends who had remained by him in the days of his trouble had formed the Assets Realization company. This was to pay off other debts Mr. Morse owed. The company, under Mr. Morse's personal direction since he got out of the Tombs, has taken over a lot of the old Morse securities which had been liquidated and has issued its own obligations against them. Meanwhile, Mr. Morse has been working on those old securities, helped out by a rising market. In fact, Wall street has been kind to him since he began the rebuilding so that some securities have more than doubled their value.

It was announced today yesterday by Mr. Morse that he had paid off about $5,600,000 of his $7,000,000 indebtedness.

A Sudden Death.

Melville, Oct. 11.—A very sudden death occurred last night when Robert Morlon expired. He was called without a moment's warning. He had attended his church services in the morning and retired in his usual health. Dr. Thornton was summoned and he said death was due to heart failure. Deceased was sixty-eight years of age and a steady, faithful farmer. His pew was seldom vacant in church and he will be greatly missed. He leaves a wife and two sons, also five brothers and three sisters. One son, Walter, is holding a good position in Lethbridge, Alta and Frederick, on the homestead. The funeral service takes place in Melville church Wednesday at ten o'clock. Interment will be made in Hillier cemetery.

It is believed in mining circles that the Ontario government contemplates reducing the royalties paid to the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railway and the Ontario government by several Cobalt mines.
