COSTLY PRINCIPLES HAVE GIVEN UP FORTUNE FOR CONVICTION.

Socialistic Ideas and Religious Views Have Been the Means of Disinheritance—A New York Banker's Act.

When a man's principles are so costly that he must give up a fortune to maintain them, they are indeed very costly. The case of a New York banker is a good example. He had only left her a life annuity of £104, instead of a share of his fortune, which amounted to over £200,000. In his will the father stated that he revoked all the provisions he had made for his daughter, as he did not agree with the step she had taken in joining the ranks of the Democratic Socialists.

The case reminds one of the German baron who last year told his son that he must choose between the Socialist teachings he had imbibed at one of the universities and being cut off with the proverbial shilling. The son stuck to his principles, and when his father died a few months later, found that he had carried out his threat and that he had been left penniless. Fortunately, his writings had attracted some attention, and he quickly obtained a post on the staff of one of the leading Democratic newspapers in Germany, and has since proved himself a very capable journalist and author.

Island of Convents.

The enormous increase of the convent system in Jersey, owing to the withdrawal of the religious houses from France, has led to a feeling of jealousy between the English and French inhabitants of the island. In order to cope with this increase of French sympathy the States of Jersey have just passed a new Education Bill. The measure provides that every morning for half an hour a short prayer, containing no dogma, shall be read, followed by a little Bible reading.

S. could the parents desire for their children a special religious instruction, the minister of the parish, or the Roman Catholic priest shall be compelled to give that necessary instruction in the hall hour specially set aside for Scripture. Another clause in the bill states that the language in which all the children shall be taught must be English. This was necessary because the French convent schools that applied for state aid had been teaching in French. This bill is now in England awaiting the royal assent.

The Lottery in England.

At 5 o'clock on Oct. 18, 1898, an immense crowd gathered at a hall in London to witness the last state lottery draw in England. The drawing of prizes on that occasion occupied less than two hours, whereas the later years have drawn some weeks, the excitement being so great that doctors attended to leg blood in cases where the proclaiming of winning tickets proved too overpowering for the holders.

From the days of Queen Anne lotteries had contributed largely toward the revenue, during the latter years bringing in from $1,250,000 to $1,000,000 per annum. The first public lottery held in England took place on Jan. 11, 1897. It was drawn at the west door of St. Paul's Cathedral and continued incessantly drawing day and night, till May 6 following.

"Diddled Out."

Canon Lyttell, the famous head of Eton, who celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday recently, had many triumphs in the cricket and football fields in his early days. He is a big, robust, and has been known to throw a ball 100 yards with his right hand and then almost as far with his left. Naturally, his gift has, by quick change, enabled him to run out many unsuspecting batsmen. Once when the canon was playing for a clerical side, the dodge came off triumphantly, and the victim, retiring in indignation, ejaculated, "Hang it all, when you're playing at eleven of persons, you don't expect to be kidded out."

Edible Flowers.

There are found in the East Indies many edible flowers. One of the most prized grows upon a tree named "Mhowad." The natives consume in enormous numbers of these flowers, whose pale yellow corolla are pulpy and thick, and are eaten in various ways. When they are fresh they are put in cakes, to which they give a sweet flavor, but they are more especially used for making bread after they have been dried and reduced to flour. By allowing them to ferment in suitable wine is produced, and by distilling them a brandy is obtained of which the Hindus are very fond.

VARSITY TO BUTTER.

The Pathos and Tragedy of Some Promising Careers.

The record could not be kept of the after-lives of the 2,000 Varsity men who leave Oxford and Cambridge every year would be a document containing as much romance as a score of novels. Many of these men, who occupy the highest positions of life, have to offer many a sink to its lowest depths.

At present, there is an Oxford M.A. acting as conductor of a suburban bus. No one but himself knows his real name, or his story. Passengers occasionally notice in his accent the tones of a cultured man, but to the eye he is, in dress and appearance, an ordinary bus conductor.

A few years ago, in a street near the docks, there stood daily a shabby man selling wheels. That man had been one of the highest Wranglers of his year at Cambridge. He got into trouble soon after leaving the Varsity, and was disowned by his family. For a time he acted as an assistant master in a grammar school, but disaster followed him, and he was driven from that employment. He could obtain no other, and before long the pressure of starvation had brought him down to the level of the out-cast.

Will Be Huge Industry.

The announcement that Canada is destined to become an important factor in the cement industry of the west by being able to export to a number of different countries, was made a few days ago by J. N. Kilbourne, the managing director of the Leakefield Portland Cement Co.

An Aristocratic Coal Merchant.

One of the largest coal owners in this country is the Marquess of Londonderry, who has been disputing a statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the profits of coal-mining. Practically the whole of his huge income is derived from coal. As a landowner, he draws royalties and wayleaves, and as railway shareholder he takes his percentage of the cost of sending the coal from the seams. Much of the product of his mines is brought to London in ships owned by himself, to be discharged at wharves which are his own property, and from there to be distributed in carts which bear his coronet. As a matter of fact, there is no profit in the business of marketing coal of which he does not obtain a share.
