Fermentation and Flatulence Prevented. In the Stomach By Charcoal, the Great Absorbent, Anti-Fermentative and Deodorant.

Some years ago Dr. Belloc, a retired surgeon of the French army, turned his attention to charcoal as a remedy for dyspepsia, fermentation and flatulence, or gas in the stomach and intestines.

He decided after many tests that charcoal made of willow wood was by far the best. He found that charcoal made of other woods caused a disagreeable taste in the mouth—even painful excoriations of the mucous membrane, as well as thirst, and a pinching sensation in the stomach, but not one of these symptoms, ever occurred when willow charcoal was employed.

When a regular physician took as much as fifteen ounces of charcoal daily, its harmless and beneficial effects as an absorbent, deodorant, germ destroyer and dyspepsia cure, should be apparent to all.

The Academie Nationale de medicine of Paris reported very favorably on a memoir which Dr. Belloc published on the use of charcoal, and in France it soon became a favorite remedy. Its reputation spread to this country, and now we find charcoal lozenges extensively sold, prescribed and employed as dyspepsia remedies.

Dr. Belloc's charcoal was administered to his patients in the form of a powder, stirred-up in water, which was very disagreeable to the taste, and its efficacy was far less than in the form of a lozenge.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are a great and happy improvement upon this form of administering charcoal. They are made of the best willow charcoal, freshly prepared, and rendered exceedingly palatable by the addition of pure honey, which gives them a taste that is in strong contrast to that of ordinary powdered charcoal. Nothing could be more efficacious in its effects than charcoal given in this desirable form. Two or three of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges taken after meals are sufficient to give complete relief. Do not spin drug-giving Stuart's, as there are many worthless imitations on the market, not made of willow wood, but of poplar, box-wood, dog-wood, etc., which are not good for the system. For sale everywhere, 25 cents per box. Sample box will be sent free by mail upon request. Address: F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

A MATRIMONIAL MIX-UP.

FLORA BOUCE

New York, Nov. 6.—If the steps which will be taken in the Flora-Parker-Carter de Haven matrimonial mix-up are as enticing as those which have already graced the incident, Broadway will probably be provided with a fresh supply of interesting gossip.

So far, doors leading to rooms in two prominent hotels were smashed in the head of William Grossman, a lawyer, was cut open with an axe and his shoulder was dislocated; two detectives were arrested and hauled to court, and De Haven, an actor, was arrested and released on $2,000 bail, all because of strife in the domestic life of De Haven and his wife, Miss Parker, member of a company playing in Broadway.

Miss Parker has been living in the Cumberland hotel, fifty-fourth street and Broadway, while her husband has been occupying rooms on the ninth floor of the Hotel Bayard, in Forty-seventh street.

Acting under instructions, they telephoned Miss Parker at the Cumberland, and at half-past one o'clock in the morning she hurried to the Bayard accompanied by a friend. After a hasty consultation with the detectives she went to her husband's room, and asked admittance. This, it is said, was refused, and at her order the detectives beat down the door. She confronted her husband, and there was a stormy scene, after which she returned to her hotel.
