Very Fruitful Fields For Domestic Bargain Matinee at 2:30. Evening at 8.15. Near Toronto.

The manners and customs of cerlain rural sections of the Province of Ontario have been fairly well illustrated by the telegraph despatches in the local papers this summer. In lact it has been demonstrated that both old and new Ontario offer a very fruitful field for domestic missions. The homicide at Thorndale, Ont., which the coroner's jury held to be justifiable homicide, is an instance; and indeed Middlesex county since the days of the Biddulph tragedies has been by no means backward in lattening up the news columns of the was pretty close to last. the owner came to town with his dearly beloved beast. Once have he was full of excuses and enthusiasm for the animal. He was sure he would win a certain race and before the start he told the jockey to put the spurs to the brute and to whip him all the way round because he had to win to save his face with his Toronto friends. 'He promised the jockey an extra fee of ten dollars whether the horse won or lost and a hundred dollars if he won. The jockey obeyed instructions with the same result as usual. That night, true to his promise, the owner handed the evening, Nov. 15th, rider his additional ten.

"O say," responded the latter, " don't like to take your money; why the horse ain't worth ten dollars."

A Toronto man who used to live of the province about six miles back up there an old man with a large family and a bad disposition, who, though he was small in stature, dearly loved a fight. He did not care parhe made it his practice to wallop periodically his wife and his whole famwell as sons. One evening after dark this neighbor had two buxom daughters who were being courted by the youths of the locality. Two swains were in the house at the time and one them hastily borrowing a sheet slipped out the back way and encountered the venerable wife-beater a litturning home. The old fellow, profoundly superstitious, was startled by the white figure which at once grasp-promised and the husky impersonator in a nearby creek, just to seal the fided in the old man the jest that had been perpetrated upon him. The effect was instantaneous. The old LONGEST AND THE BEST WE HAVE

Down at the Woodbine in Toronto they tell another story illustrating the folly of the man who becomes infatuated with his own horse. A year or so ago a real good fellow brought a steeplechaser to the Ontario Juckey Club meet with the expectation that he was going to sweep all before him. one day he told his friends: "Play his strong to-morrow; he's in the right company to win, and the odds will be long. The odds were long and the friends bet heavily, but the beast ran last. The spring meet ended and the horse went away to the American tracks. One day the Toronto friends of the owner received a telegram advising them to put a bet on him next day at Latonia as it was "cinch" and the odds would be
