WAR IN THE PARTY.

The men who are in power, who constitute a government either of the province or dominion, are not always happy. They have not always the assurance of the party's loyal support. One is reminded of this by the seance which occurred at the annual meeting of the Conservative Association in London. The dissenters were represented by ex-Mayor Essery, and his temperament, his mood, his bearing towards the federal and provincial governments was indicated by his speech, which was rough enough for a king's counsellor.

It could hardly be expected that he would or could say anything kindly of the Ottawa government. Sir Wilfrid was denounced as disloyal, and because he did not propose that Canada give a Drednought to England, "in the hour of her need." That was mild in the extreme—considering the madness of the man. He attacked next the members for London, in the legislature and commons, "our servants," said Mr. Essery, "and not our masters." These men had not been showing the party, or the Essery faction, enough attention, and "if they did not mend their ways one hundred of us will gather in some back room and decide that they must go," said he, "and they will go."

But the onslaught upon the Whitney government was simply fierce. The five members of the government were referred to as the "five captains," who were given their places and had forgotten about the sergeants and the privates. Mr. Essery did not like the Blake correspondence, the letters that had passed between the eminent counsel and "My Dear Whitney" and "My Dear Foy." If letters had to be written the party had the men who could do it, and the services of the "outsiders" could be dispensed with. The main grievance was the lack of patronage. The party wanted all of this that was going. The grits had been getting some of the plums, and Mr. Essery protested, "What we want," said Mr. Essery, and in what is described as a burst of tempestuous oratory, "is the old-time conditions, when every voter was a man and when the machine didn't stab a man for saying one-half as much as I have said to-night."

The local government may not be excited over this abuse of Mr. Essery. It began its reign with the declaration that it was not going to traffic in offices and patronage, but it was forced to change its plans. The intimidation of the party had its effects. Mr. Essery may realize this, and may be meditating another rush upon the government, and he begins his plans by a public proclamation of what he is going to do. The opposition in Ottawa is very anxious that patronage should be eliminated from party influence and dictation. It is a pity that the party cannot show some evidence of its earnestness; by standing by the Whitney government and giving Mr. Essery to understand that he cannot terrify anyone with his bulldozing.

TALK OF A PANIC. The strange thing about the imperial budget is that while it has not been approved by the lords, and is likely to be laid aside pending the result of an election, it is in force, and the obligations that have been contracted under it are mounting up at a tremendous rate.

The speech of Mr. Churchill on the subject, on the things that will likely happen on the rejection of the budget, has challenged attention. It has made almost as much commotion as the speech of Mr. Ure, member of the government, that the defeat of the budget might imperil the old age pensions. Mr. Balfour hastened to assure the pensioners that in any event, whether the government were changed or not, they would be the recipients of the public bounty. Now Mr. Churchill paints the financial outlook in lurid colours. He wants it to be understood that with the rejection of the budget "the whole financial apparatus by which the money is raised to pay the nation's bill be broken to pieces and brought to a dead stop."

Mr. Churchill continued, alarmingly. He could not exactly measure how much this headstrong freak of the House of Lords would cost, but it might be many millions. All the new taxes, and some of the most important among the old taxes—for instance, the income tax—would fall to the ground. They would no longer be collected, and such parts of them as had been collected under the resolutions would have to be returned. It was calculated by the treasury that the resultant deficit that would have to be met by March 31st—for another year—would be the expenses of the next year was already upon us—would be nearly fifty millions sterling.

"But let there be no illusions," he added. "Whatever we may do the loss to the taxpayers, rich and poor alike, will be sharp and heavy, and the injury to credit, and consequently the set-back to the trade revival, will be cruel and lasting."

"I tell you here to-night that the House of Lords will in five minutes pitch millions of the revenue into the gutter and violate the ancient constitution of the land in a desperate and vain attempt to save their own pockets from a fair share of the public expenses. And after it is all over, after the waste and tumult, after the general election, there will be the bill—just the same as before—no larger than ever, because of the damage—and that bill some government and some party have, before March 31st next, in some way or other, got to meet."

The unionists and the unionist papers say that Mr. Churchill had no warrant for these remarks. They say that the government can, under a resolution of the house, continue the collections until such time as they have been approved or disapproved. The fact remains, however, that the situation is very awkward. The Canadian custom is to put a tariff into force as soon as the schedules have been announced, but Canada has never had a senate interference with a revenue bill, and only when this experience has been had can there be a full appreciation of the box in which the political parties of England find themselves.

EDITORIAL NOTES. The man who begins his dickering good and early with Santa Claus gets off the more economically. The premier of Canada is the champion of provincial rights. He is who objected to legislation affecting the weight of broad when the legislature was dealing with the subject. Christmas shopping has begun. It's just as well. The chap who proposes to remember his friends with a Christmas card or a love letter usually winds up with a rush for presents, at any cost. The heads of the officials at the New York customs house are still rolling into the basket. Nearly an hundred of those who were mixed up in the sugar trust's defalcations have been sacrificed. Mme. Bernhardt, the divine Sara, has captured Paris by a superb delineation of Jeanne d'Arc. The critics say she did not seem to be a day over twenty, and she is considerably past-stop! That was a close call.

So Birtle, Man., elected Mr. Malcolm, a liberal. He must be a wonder to down the Roblin government and defeat its arch-corruptor, the Hon. Bob Rogers. There are some electors that cannot be bribed or bullied. Dr. Cook missing, and supposed to be somewhere in retreat and nursing his nerves. Perhaps he is probably counting his money. Rumour has it that his lectures and letters have netted him a fortune which goes into six figures. Ex-Mayor Essery, of London, is a terrible fellow. He is on the war path, and if something does not thwart his purpose he will be the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir James Whitney. Mr. Essery represents the disgruntled patronage hunters. London changed the constitution of the Western University so that it ceased to have a denominational plan or appearance, and yet the Whitney government does not give it aid. A tip to Queen's as to what it may expect when it cuts loose from the church. The Orange Sentinel has heard that the demand will be made for the teaching of French in the public schools of Ontario. Isn't our contemporary scenting trouble where there does not appear to be any? Had it not better wait until the aforesaid demand is formally made? Success has a story of the gentleman who set out with $5,000 to buy Christmas presents and wound up by taking over from a woman in the street car—the mother of seven blessed children—an armful of goods, costing less than a dollar, and giving her his entire pocket-book. He thought it worth $5,000 to dodge the tumult. The action of Carter's Little Liver Pills is pleasant, mild and natural. They gently stimulate the liver, and regulate the bowels, but do not purge. DEATH IN ACCIDENT

MISS N. S. AYLESWORTH HIT BY TRAIN. She Was Getting Her Valise Out of a Buggy When a Train Passing By Struck and Injured Her—Death at Hospital.

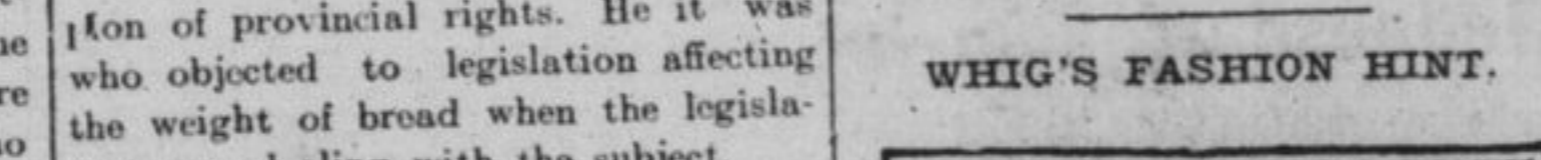

A distressing accident occurred on Monday, at noon, at Ernestown Station. Miss N. S. Aylesworth, Bath, drove in to take the train for the east. She also stepped behind the rig, which stopped close to the tracks, to take out her valise. She did not notice the special train coming west. The cylinder of the engine struck her on the hip and hurled her to the ground. She was picked up unconscious and taken to the moon train for Kingston hospital, but she died soon after her arrival at the institution.

Deceased was well known in Bath and Napanee. One brother, James Aylesworth, resides in Bath, and one sister, Mrs. Vanalyst, in the west. Deceased was connected with one of the best known families in Ernestown, and her many friends will be pained to learn of her sudden and unexpected death.

Miss Aylesworth passed away at the general hospital, at 3.20 o'clock, before hardly anything could be done to relieve her suffering. Although she was still conscious, and remained so until death relieved her, she was in such a state from shock that the doctors united their efforts in trying to stand an examination, but her injuries proved fatal before this could be done. A post-mortem examination was conducted by Dr. W. T. Connell, who found that her back was broken and her left hip badly crushed, besides other internal injuries. The remains were removed to Corbett's undertaking rooms, where they were prepared for burial. This morning, at six o'clock, Mr. Corbett left for Bath with the remains. The funeral will be conducted on Wednesday morning.

James Aylesworth, brother of the deceased, who accompanied his sister from Napanee, returned home, Monday evening, after notifying relatives in Winnipeg, and other places of the sad event.

Her Daughter Took Very Sick As Result Of Catching Cold.

Mrs. Dennis Anny, Friar's Head, N.S., writes: "At the close of the year 1907, our youngest daughter, five years old, took very sick as the result of catching cold. She became very weak and could not move around at all. We consulted doctors and gave her various kinds of medicine but they did not seem to relieve her any. On the advice of a friend I procured a bottle of your valuable remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using the first bottle noticeable improvement was the result and after using three bottles she was entirely cured. I can certify that it was through your valuable remedy that she regained her strength and would advise every mother having young ones similarly afflicted to obtain your valuable remedy. For myself I would not be without a bottle in the house."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies. It has stood the test for many years, and is now more generally used than ever. Price 25 cents at all dealers. Manufactured only by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
