One kind of frenzied financier is the man who never even thanks you for the privilege of taking your money. A girl likes an extravagant young man—never she isn't going to marry him. One never realizes how elastic the truth is until the gossips get busy. What the man with a good job is a fire insurance policy.

A woman can do one thing no man can do. She can look pleased when she isn't. Men who know the most about women know the least about women. Things know never forgives a man for remaining a bachelor. The critic with a disordered liver is a law forever.

PICKS NEGRO TO WIN HEALTH CULTURE EXPERT'S OPINION.

He Says Johnson Will Play Jeffries Out and Then Administer the Knock-Out Blow—Reasons For This Opinion.

W. R. C. Laitson, B.S., M.D., editor of Health Culture Magazine, who viewed the fight between Johnson and Jeffries from a health expert's point of view, has written an article in which he picks Johnson to win. As a student having no race feeling—as one who is interested, not in the men, but in the perfect physical development of men—Laitson has written the article. In the ring you never can tell. One there was a fellow by the name of Monroe, but everybody knows that story.

I am not a prophet—or the son of a prophet. But I have watched both men in action—watched them as a student of physical action. Which man beats the other one does not matter to me in the least; how he does it is the question.

Jeffries is invincible if he knows exactly when and where the other fellow is going to hit him. But—Johnson never tells. He only smiles—or rather grins—and slides off. He may even pretend to fall down.

I don't think for a moment that the elusive Afro-American will go for his opponent as the prince of pugilists, John L. Sullivan, used to go at his man. I anticipate rather seeing Johnson as I have seen him—never there. "Every time you hit him you miss him," said an Irishman. And that is Johnson.

With his bulk, his strength, and the firmness which somebody told me he had acquired by vaudeville stunts and other things, Jeffries is not by any means an easy proposition. Physically, as we all know, he is a wonder. Johnson has the ease and the freedom of youth and the reserve which marks the master of modern ring tactics. To him the "prize fight" as

SMUGGLED FURS.
Waterbury, N.Y., Dec. 10.—There will be an auction sale at Alexandria Bay, on Saturday, that will be out of the ordinary. For the articles offered will consist of nine rug muffs and two coats, all of valuable lynx skins, the same having been taken by Special Treasury Agent Day of Ogdensburg, alleging that the furs were being smuggled into the states from Canada. The furs were found hidden at the Bay and were consigned to New York parties. The haul represents $400.

It was once called, is a very simple game. To him it will be play.

To the burly, better builder it will be a serious matter. Pugilism seems to the outsider a physical encounter—an affair in which both contestants are most horridly in earnest. As a matter of fact it is nothing of the kind. It is a trial of strength, in which the man who is strongest physically, spiritually, will in time tire another man until he gasps—until he breathes irregularly.

That irregularity of breathing is the other fellow's chance. A gasp means that the muscles about the abdomen—the most powerful in the body—are for the moment relaxed.

For that moment of relaxation, for that gasp, the master of ring tactics is waiting. Then he starts in a very gentle, hit—a snappy slap—and it takes more than ten seconds to find out whether or not the other man is alive.

That is my opinion about this bout. Johnson will play his man on and on, having been sunning and falling down about 17 times. Johnson will rise up and slap Jeffries in a tender place. There are several—especially when you get tired. If the opponent catches you when you are tired and gasping—it is just under the zephyrus process. If you in gasping should drop your jaw it is a glancing blow just under your lower lip. Another point which no pugilist of good taste would land on is just behind the ear—on the mastoid process—if we must use professional jargon.

Now my feeling is that Johnson will wait until Jeffries gets tired enough to gasp. And then—That is what Johnson did to poor Burns. That is what he did to that splendid fighter, Ketchel, and that, I guess, is what he will do to the "Invincible."

Jeffries is a physical wonder. But Johnson also is a wonder. It is subtle against strength—the get-away against the punch, and a boy against a man who used to be a boy.

One thing—and a most comforting thing is this—the fight will be fair. Both men are beyond reproach as far as their honesty is concerned. As to the rest I can only reiterate my personal feeling that while Jeffries is one of the strongest men in the world, the ebony man is one of the subtlest—and which shall win, bulk or subtlety?

These two men are wonderful specimens of humanity. Jeffries is remarkable for a man who has had one career and now starts another. But, as I have said, he was once a boy and is now a man.

Something Cheaper. Brooklyn Life.

A certain retired coal dealer of Pittsburgh is, in the good old phrase, as tight as wax, but has a passion to be considered a "spender" and good liver. Never neglecting an opportunity to refer to his "wine cellar," etc. A short while ago he snared a well-known clubman and had him at his house for dinner. A bottle of sherry was produced with considerable ostentation, and the glasses filled. The host held his to the light, then drank, and "smacked his lips."

"What do you think of that, hey?" he suggested. "Why—very good," the guest commented, setting his glass upon the table. "But I say, old man," he added in a confidential tone, "I know a place where you can get wine even cheaper than this."

A Bereaved Man's Trials.

The remains of the late Mrs. Slater, wife of H. Slater, of Denbigh, arrived at Kaladar, last Monday from Kingston, where an operation was performed in which she died. Mrs. Slater was a young woman, being only in her thirty-fifth year, and leaves a husband and six children to mourn her loss. The youngest is a baby of a little over a year. Much sympathy is felt for the sorrowing husband, as he certainly had his work of trial. On receipt of a telegram announcing her passing away he, with his team, proceeded to Renfrew to meet the corpse, and there anxiously waited its arrival, while all those long days to him it was at Kaladar station waiting removal to his old home. Disheartened he returned to Denbigh over miles, hurriedly set out so as to get there before any disposition would be made, but only to find it was returned to Kingston by order of the shipper. This only added more pain to his already broken heart and a united effort was put forth to regain possession and to have the body returned, which was successful, and on No. 3, Saturday, it arrived back on Denbigh on Sunday by the bereaved husband, Mr. Slater.
