Had Weak Back.

Would Often Lie in Bed for Days Scarcely Able to Turn Herself.

Weak back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged. Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know of the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles.

They begin by helping the kidneys to flush out all the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and all the urinary passages and carrying away the uric acid, the chief cause of rheumatism, from the blood.

Mrs. Arch. Schnare, Black Point, N.B., writes:—"For years I was troubled with weak back. Oftentimes I have lain in bed for days, being scarcely able to turn myself, and I have also been a great sufferer while trying to perform my household duties. I had doctors attending me without avail and tried liniments and plasters, but nothing seemed to do me any good. It was about to give up in despair when my husband induced me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after using two boxes I am now well and able to do my work. I am positive Doan's Kidney Pills are all that you claim for them, and I would advise all kidney sufferers to give them a fair trial."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or The F. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

In ordering specify "Doan's."

SORROW CHASERS.

Salable There.
Mrs. Smart—Gracious! Are you making Christmas presents this early?
Mrs. Wise—No; nobody wants these foolish things. I'm making them for our church fair.

Lack of Foresight.
Mrs. Hickson—So she married a poor man.
Mrs. Wise—Yes, she was so blinded by affection that she never stopped to consider the limited alimony he could afford to pay.

No Wonder.
Joax—Every time Boastem starts talking it makes me thirsty.
Boax—Because he's so dry?
Joax—No; it's because so many of his remarks have to be taken with a grain of salt.

His Retort.
Miss Bilyuns—Don't be so cut up about it. I'm not the first woman you've ever loved and I venture to say I'm not likely to be the last one.
Mr. Kutting—No; but you're the richest.

The Use of Clothes.
Mr. Hickson—It's getting very chilly. Why don't you put on your coat?
Mrs. Hickson—Then none would see my new hand-embroidered waist.

His Chance.
Ethel—Tom won a hat betting with papa, and papa told him he could have Grace if he'd call it square.
Edward—Is—is your father home to-night?

The Thrilling Hour.

A. Rand in Pearson's Weekly.

The point where the girl had stopped marked a small oasis amid the wilderness of sandhills. Suddenly she straightened herself and there rang out in a high, clear, trilling call that is familiar throughout the length and breadth of Australia.

"Coo-oo!" Pretty Jean Bressington was beginning to feel a little desperate. "Coo-oo!"

"Was you a-calling me, missy?" said a harsh voice suddenly at her elbow.

The girl turned with a start. Not three yards away stood a glittering ruffian "sundowner"—a hopelessly ragged tramp, ferocious in matted hair and beard, leering at her from beneath the rim of his shapless hat.

"Call again, my pretty," he grinned, as Jean faced round. "I like to hear ye, an' it does no harm. There won't nobody come. Got it all to ourselves nicely, ain't we?"

"Go away!" cried the girl, her eyes flashing. "Be careful, my friends may be here at any moment."

"I've been trackin' ye this mile," went on the ruffian, "and when you starts bawlin' thinks I to myself a chance for me. Yer wants 'elp? Well, I'm going to 'elp yer, and myself, too. See?"

"I've given you warning," said Jean, speaking as calmly as she could. "A step nearer, and—"

She made a motion as if seeking her revolver.

But the fellow laughed outright. "You wouldn't scare a rabbit," he said. "I ain't goin' to hurt ye, but if ye start any rumpusin' why then—"

He made a sudden dash, seized her arm, and caught at the gold chain round her neck. The next instant the girl was conscious of acting in a desperate struggle, and with only one prayer in her mind—that she might not lose her footing.

Then, all at once, the tramp set go and sprang back, throwing up his arms.

"Don't shoot, mate!" he said hoarsely.

"I won't shoot for the lady's sake," said a man's voice. "Clear off, or I'll drop you yet, like the varmint you are!"

When Jean could see with sufficient clearness she made out the form of a big, broad-shouldered man, who had stepped out from the clump of trees, and now held the tramp in range with his revolver. The rescuer lowered his revolver and came slowly toward the girl.

"That sort needs shootin' on sight," he said. "You're not hurt, are you, missy?"

"Hurt—oh, no!" Jean dried her eyes and looked up cheerfully. "I'm not hurt a bit—thanks to you. I'm so very grateful. I wonder—would you keep this—ask your own daughter to wear it, as a token of what you once did for me?"

The man stood silent, looking down at the slender thread of gold, with the little locket attached.

"My little girl and I are parted, missy," he said gently. "She don't know much about her father, and I wouldn't have it different. You're from the Old Country, I guess. That's where she is now, growing up sweet and good and innocent, bless you!"

"You'll go back to your daughter some day," she said gently, "or she'll come to you. Won't you keep the chain?"

"No need, missy. I shan't need reminding that for once in a way I was able to do somebody a bit of good. Where do you want to go to, missy—the town?"

"Yes," said Jean. "If you could put me on the right road?"

"It's that right road as I'm not particularly sure for," he said. "Still—"

He stepped a little way from her in-
